Issue estoppel is a doctrine appropriate to proceedings in private law. While in certain circumstances it would be an abuse of process to permit a public authority which had acted in disregard of a declaration or order made in judicial review proceedings to seek to re-open debate about whether its actions were justified, in judicial review there is always a third party who is not present: the wider public or public interest. The wider public or public interest should not be prejudiced by the failure of a public authority to place all the relevant material and arguments before the court on the first occasion, or if that authority reconsiders in the light of the previous decision but arrives at conclusions which do not in every respect mirror the court's conclusion on the first occasion. The extent to which the doctrine of issue estoppel is applicable in judicial review proceedings¹ is therefore doubtful². It has, however, been held that issue estoppel may apply in habeas corpus proceedings³. In planning appeals, although the doctrines of cause of action estoppel and issue estoppel do not apply to decisions of inspectors, a previous inspector's decision on a matter is a material consideration which an inspector is obliged to take into account⁴. It has also been said that the courts should not be used as a means of attempting to reargue points that have already been fully considered at a planning inquiry⁵.

Issue estoppel does not apply in child care cases, because it is outweighed by public policy considerations relating to the protection of children⁶.

1183. Raising issues that could have been raised in earlier proceedings.

Except under special circumstances¹ a party may not in a subsequent proceeding raise a ground of claim or defence which was open to him in the former one². However, estoppel based on a default judgment must be very carefully limited; a defendant is only estopped from setting up in a subsequent claim a defence which was necessarily, and with complete precision, decided by the previous judgment³. The court has inherent jurisdiction to strike out as frivolous and vexatious a claim or defence which has either been already decided in previous proceedings against the party raising it or might have been raised in previous proceedings in which the facts necessary to raise it have been decided against the party desiring to raise them⁴. The above must now be read in the light of the court's duty, in civil proceedings to which the Civil Procedure Rules 1998⁵ apply, to give effect to the overriding objective of dealing with cases justly⁶.

Preliminary findings of fact by the chairman of an employment tribunal have been held not to give rise to issue estoppel in relation to factual details that were not directly in issue at the preliminary hearing⁷.

Under the former civil procedure, a defendant to a second action by the same plaintiff was estopped from putting on record a plea which was inconsistent with any traversable allegation in the statement of claim in the former action, but it would seem that he was not estopped from setting up in the second action a plea which confessed and avoided, or matters which might be raised by special plea necessitating proof on the part of the defendant: Howlett v Tarte (1861) 10 CBNS 813; Humphries v Humphries [1910] 2 KB 531, CA; Cooke v Rickman [1911] 2 KB 1125; Hoystead v Taxation Comr [1926] AC 155, PC. Accordingly a defendant to a second claim for rent under an agreement was estopped from pleading the Law of Property Act 1925 s 53 (Humphries v Humphries [1910] 2 KB 531, CA), or alleging that there was no consideration for the agreement sued upon (Cooke v Rickman [1911] 2 KB 1125), those defences not having been pleaded in the first claim. Issue estoppel is a separate doctrine from that of abuse of process; however, the question as to whether a case falls within the exceptions to the doctrine of issue estoppel depends, inter alia, on whether it is likely to amount to an abuse of process to permit a party to re-raise an issue: see Gregson v Evangelou [2003] EWHC 322 (QB), [2003] All ER (D) 314 (Jan). D. COURTS AND TRIBUNALS CAPABLE OF CREATING AN ESTOPPEL BY RECORD

1184. Extension of doctrine of estoppel by record.

Traditionally, only judgments made by a court of record gave rise to estoppel by record¹. However, the doctrine of estoppel by record, or *res judicata*², has been extended by analogy to the decisions of all tribunals which have jurisdiction, whether by the law of England³, or by the consent of parties⁴, or by the law of the country to whose tribunals the parties have, or may be presumed from their conduct to have, submitted themselves⁵. The estoppel which arises from the decisions of such tribunals was formerly referred to as 'estoppel quasi by record'⁶. The doctrine applies equally in all courts, and it is immaterial in what court the former proceedings were taken, provided only that it was a court of competent jurisdiction⁷, or what form the proceedings took, provided they were really for the same cause⁸. Issue estoppel, as much as cause of action estoppel, is applicable to bind parties following decisions of a court with a limited statutory jurisdiction⁹. Some particular courts and tribunals, and the question of whether they are courts of record for the purpose of creating an estoppel by record, are discussed below¹⁰.

Res judicata has been applied to the dismissal of a petition on the ground of insufficient evidence even though there was, strictly speaking, no record¹¹, and to an order, interim in form, which was meant to be a declaration of the rights of the parties¹². On the same principle a claim was stayed as frivolous and vexatious when the point had been determined by a county court in a manner intended to be final, but not amounting to res judicata, because of an interim application¹³.

4 To be admissible evidence a decree must be that of a court known to the law of this country, or of competent jurisdiction, or must be founded on a voluntary submission: see Rogers v Wood (1831) 2 B & Ad 245. As to the award of an arbitrator see PARA 1188.

5 As to the recognition and enforcement of foreign judgments see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 140 et seq; and as to foreign courts see PARA 1189.

6 As to the origin of this expression in its original formulation 'estoppel quasi of record' see 2 Smith LC (13th Edn) 689. Such an estoppel will be prevented from arising by any of the matters which would prevent estoppel by record, as traditionally defined, from arising: see Harrison v Southampton Corpn (1853) 4 De GM & G 137 (fraud); Harris v Willis (1855) 15 CB 710 (want of jurisdiction); Blackham's Case (1709) 1 Salk 290 (matter not in issue); and the cases cited in PARAS 1006-1007.

7 See PARA 1170. adjudicative functions in relation to suspension or cancellation of officers' certificates; findings of fact not binding between contending ship-owners).

8 The finding of a county court in an action for wrongful dismissal that the dismissal was justified was conclusive on a summons for wages before justices founded on the same dismissal: Routledge v Hislop (1860) 2 E & E 549; cf Flitters v Allfrey (1874) LR 10 CP 29; Eastmure v Laws (1839) 5 Bing NC 444; Furness, Withy & Co Ltd v J and E Hall Ltd (1909) 25 TLR 233 (plaintiff (now known as the 'claimant': see PARA 18), who has recovered in one action for breach of contract the damages which he has had to pay to a third party, cannot bring second action for the costs incurred in defending the third party's action, because they are in fact damages for the cause of action already sued upon; and the fact that they are claimed on a contract of indemnity arising upon an implied request to defend the third party's action makes no difference). A dismissal by justices of a summons for bringing forward a house beyond the building line was a bar to a summons for subsequently continuing the same house beyond the same line (Kinnis v Graves (1898) 78 LT 502, DC); but the withdrawal of a summons before justices does not operate as an estoppel (Davis v Morton [1913] 2 KB 479, DC; Land v Land [1949] P 405, [1949] 2 All ER 218, DC (not following Hopkins v Hopkins [1914] P 282); Owens v Minoprio [1942] 1 KB 193, [1942] 1 All ER 30, DC). A decision of licensing justices to consider applications for the transfer and renewal of liquor licences, which amounted merely to an exercise of discretion, was not a decision of a court on which estoppel could be founded, and did not estop them from giving a contrary decision on the same facts on a subsequent occasion: Smith v Shann [1898] 2 QB 347, DC. A dismissal by magistrates of a complaint against a steward for withholding or misapplying property under what is now the Friendly Societies Act 1974 s 99(2) creates no estoppel barring a claim in contract by the club for payment by the steward of any deficiency in cash or stock: Beeches Workingmen's Club and Institute Trustees v Scott [1969] 2 All ER 420, [1969] 1 WLR 550, CA. 1185. Ecclesiastical courts.

The ecclesiastical courts, other than the court set up by statute for trying presentation cases¹, are not courts of record². Much of the former jurisdiction of the ecclesiastical courts has been transferred to the High Court³, but in those matters in which the ecclesiastical courts retain their jurisdiction their final decrees are conclusive between the parties⁴ and, where they create or affect the status of a party, upon all persons, as being in the nature of judgments in rem⁵.

1186. Statutory tribunals and courts-martial.

Certain courts are expressly declared by statute to be courts of record¹. As respects the many other tribunals which have been given jurisdiction by statute in particular matters², it seems that the general principle that the law has respect not only to courts of record and proceedings in those courts but also to all other proceedings where the person who gives judgment has judicial authority³ is applicable. The sentence of a court-martial might in certain circumstances be pleaded by way of estoppel⁴.

As a general rule estoppel by record can apply to decisions of employment tribunals⁵. However, an issue estoppel cannot arise where the later court cannot identify a clear finding in the earlier proceedings on the relevant issue⁶. It has been held that the principle of issue estoppel applies not only where a tribunal has given a decision on issues of fact and law in the previous litigation, but also where a complaint is dismissed by a tribunal following the withdrawal of the application by the applicant⁷; but there is no requirement that the principle is to apply in employment tribunal cases where it is clear, on an examination of the surrounding circumstances, that withdrawal of the application is in substance a discontinuance of the proceedings and not an order dismissing the proceedings⁸.

See also Hancock v Doncaster Metropolitan Borough Council [1998] ICR 900, EAT; and cf Friend v Civil Aviation Authority [2001] EWCA Civ 1204, [2001] 4 All ER 385, [2002] ICR 525 (the form of estoppel contained in the principle that parties may not advance arguments, claims or defences which could have been put forward for decision on the first occasion must be applied with caution; before a court can find an issue estoppel it must be satisfied that the issue on which a claimant has to succeed is indeed an issue which has been decided on some earlier occasion; that test was not met in the instant case as the tribunal never considered the safety issue when determining the question of whether F had been unfairly dismissed and whether he had contributed to that dismissal, thus there could be no issue estoppel). The principle of conclusiveness has been applied to decisions of domestic tribunals¹, whether or not constituted by statute, in a number of cases, of which the following are examples: a sentence of expulsion passed by a college²; of deprivation by a college visitor³; of trustees dismissing a schoolmaster⁴. An order of the Professional Conduct Committee of the General Dental Council that a dentist's name be struck off the register on the ground of professional misconduct⁵ was held to be conclusive as to the fact that the name had been erased from the register⁶, but only prima facie evidence of the grounds on which the order was based⁷.

1188. Arbitrators.

Unless otherwise agreed by the parties, an award made by the arbitral tribunal pursuant to an arbitration agreement is final and binding both on the parties and on any persons claiming through or under them¹. The fact that the agreement contains a confidentiality clause does not affect this principle². The decision of an arbitrator upon the construction of an agreement which was referred to him for interpretation is conclusive between the parties in a claim for subsequent breaches of the same agreement³; and proceedings on a contract in respect of a claim under it are barred by an award that has dealt with and decided such a claim⁴. Where the submission to arbitration requires the arbitrators to have certain qualifications, a party who takes part in the proceedings in ignorance of the fact that an arbitrator appointed by the other party is not qualified is not estopped from denying the validity of the award⁵, although he is so estopped when it is his own arbitrator who is not qualified⁶. An award creates no estoppel if the arbitrator exceeds his jurisdiction⁷, but an award within the arbitrator's jurisdiction, even though wrong in law, will be binding unless the proper steps have been taken to have it set aside⁸. The award is admissible in evidence in a suit between the parties to it or their privies⁹, but is inadmissible, even as evidence of reputation, as between strangers¹⁰, except as proving acts of ownership¹¹.

JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) FINALITY OF JUDGMENTS AND OF LITIGATION/(iii) Res Judicata/D. COURTS AND TRIBUNALS CAPABLE OF CREATING AN ESTOPPEL BY RECORD/1189. Foreign courts and tribunals.

1189. Foreign courts and tribunals.

Judgments of a foreign court may give rise to cause of action or issue estoppel in appropriate cases. A foreign judgment to which the relevant statutory provisions¹ apply, or would have applied if a sum of money had been payable thereunder, is recognised² in any court in the United Kingdom³ as conclusive between the parties thereto in all proceedings founded on the same cause of action and may be relied on by way of defence or counterclaim in any such proceedings⁴. This is the case whether the judgment is registrable or not, and whether, if it is registrable, it is registered or not⁵.

Issue estoppel can also in certain circumstances arise from judgments of foreign courts⁶. It does not, strictly speaking, arise from competition proceedings before the EC Commission in a national case between the same parties; but the English courts must take all reasonable steps to avoid or reduce the risk of drawing conclusions which are inconsistent with decisions of the Commission⁷.

No cause of action estoppel arises from a decision of the Opposition Division of the European Patent Office since the national courts have exclusive jurisdiction over revocation proceedings, and therefore validity is finally decided by those courts⁸.

The recognition and enforcement of decisions of the European Court of Justice and of other international tribunals, and international jurisdiction generally, are discussed elsewhere in this work⁹.

E. JUDGMENT RECOVERED

1190. Cause of action merged in the judgment.

The defence of 'judgment recovered', arising as it does out of res judicata¹, has much in common with estoppel by record, although it is not founded upon it. A claimant who has once sued a defendant to judgment cannot, while the judgment stands, though unsatisfied, sue him again for the same cause, not because he is estopped from doing so (although he, as well as the defendant, is estopped from averring anything contrary to the record)², but because the cause of action is merged in the judgment, which creates an obligation of a higher nature³. It is also probably true to say that a person who has once recovered judgment for a sum of money is estopped from averring that he ought to recover any further sum for the same cause of action⁴.

Conclusiveness against strangers of findings on which judgment is founded.

(iv) Parties Estopped by Judgment

A. PARTIES ESTOPPED BY JUDGMENT DETERMINING STATUS

1191. Conclusiveness against strangers of findings on which judgment is founded.

The question whether and in what cases the court's findings upon which its determination of a question of status or title, or the disposition of property, have been founded are binding on strangers does not admit of a categorical answer. It is a fundamental rule that a judgment is not conclusive as to anything but the point decided¹, or of any matter which came collaterally in question², or of any matter incidentally cognisable³, or of any matter to be inferred by argument from the judgment⁴, and this applies as well to judgments in rem as to judgments between parties. Accordingly, a judgment of the Admiralty Court in a salvage claim, where salvage services are admitted and money paid into court, concludes nothing more (at least against strangers) than the amount of the award and the existence of a lien for it, and is not conclusive in a claim by the owners of the salvaged vessel against underwriters that the loss was due to sea perils⁵. The difficulty arises in the application of the rule, in determining in each case what was the point decided and what was matter incidentally cognisable, and the opinion of judges seems to have undergone some fluctuations.

It was held that the finding of an ecclesiastical court in a suit for administration that one of the parties was next of kin to the intestate, this finding being necessary for the decision, was conclusive in a suit between the same parties in Chancery for distribution of the intestate's estate⁶. A grant of probate is conclusive as to the validity of the testamentary document, and concludes any question as to the regularity of its execution; therefore, so long as the probate remains unrecalled, no relief can be obtained in equity against a fraud in obtaining the execution of the document⁷. An order for payment into court⁸ of money to meet an incumbrance on land sold does not estop the party who obtained the order from asserting that the incumbrance was, at the date of his application, statute-barred, the question whether or not the incumbrance was one that could be enforced not being material to the order allowing payment into court⁹.

If a judgment in rem is to prevent strangers disputing any finding of fact besides the status or title which the judgment establishes, it is necessary that the finding should be essential to the judgment¹⁰, and ascertainable without ambiguity from the judgment itself¹¹. It is not sufficient to create an estoppel, even between parties, if the finding relied on is discoverable only from a perusal of the judge's reasons¹².

His decision was reversed by Lord Lyndhurst LC on the authority of Bouchier v Taylor (1776) 4 Bro Parl Cas 708, HL, which proceeded partly at least on the ground (see Barrs v Jackson (1845) 1 Ph 582) that the ecclesiastical court was a court of distribution, and of the inconvenience attending the existence of two different findings by two courts of co-ordinate jurisdiction; and although, having regard to Lord Lyndhurst's remarks on Duchess of Kingston's Case (1776) 1 East PC 469, 2 Smith LC (13 Edn) 644, it is difficult to resist the conclusion that there was a difference of opinion between him and the vice-chancellor as to what matters were to be regarded as 'incidentally cognisable', and what was 'the point decided', it is said on high authority that the principles laid down by the vice-chancellor are 'untouched by the reversal' (see 2 Smith LC (13th Edn) 694; R v Hutchings(1881) 6 QBD 300, CA, per Lord Selborne LC) and his judgment is regarded as a locus classicus on the subject of estoppel by record.

JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) FINALITY OF JUDGMENTS AND OF LITIGATION/(iv) Parties Estopped by Judgment/A. PARTIES ESTOPPED BY JUDGMENT DETERMINING STATUS/1192. Prize cases.

1192. Prize cases.

Prize cases have been regarded as exceptional to a certain extent¹, and the rule applied in claims against underwriters by owners of vessels condemned as prize has been that the judgment of a foreign prize court condemning a vessel or cargo as enemy property is conclusive evidence not only that the property was condemned, but also that it was not neutral²; but it is otherwise if it can be shown (that is, it seems, from an examination of the sentence)³ that the judgment did not proceed on that ground⁴. Moreover, in the absence of any other cause appearing on the sentence, it must be presumed from the condemnation that it proceeded on the ground that the property was that of the enemy⁵.

Where the circumstances are not such as to give rise to this presumption, as, for example, where the sentence itself suggests some other ground of condemnation, it is not conclusive if there is any ambiguity as to what the ground is. It must not be left in uncertainty whether the ship was condemned on a ground which would be just by the law of nations, or on another ground which would amount only to a breach of the municipal regulations of the condemning country. In such a case the sentence must be carefully examined to see whether the fact in proof of which it is adduced is clearly and certainly found by the judge whose sentence is relied on⁶. Such a finding of fact in the course of adjudication by a prize court, although receivable as conclusive evidence of the fact, is not regarded as raising an estoppel strictly so called, and is therefore not pleadable as such⁷. Further, to be conclusive, the ground of condemnation must be found in the operative part of the sentence⁸. The recitals may, however, be looked at, if incorporated in the operative part by reference⁹.

1193. Certain judgments in rem admissible in evidence.

There are some cases in which judgments in rem¹, although not conclusive in proceedings to which strangers are party, are nevertheless admissible in evidence. Thus it has been held that an order of the Professional Conduct Committee² erasing the name of a dentist from the register on the ground that he had been guilty of misconduct, which was apparently conclusive against all parties as to the dentist's professional status³, could be admitted in proceedings between the dentist and third parties as evidence, though not conclusive, not only as to what the grounds of erasure were, but as to the truth of those grounds⁴.

Of this nature was the verdict of a jury on the former inquisition in lunacy, which, although it declared the status of the party at the time of taking the inquisition, was not conclusive otherwise than between parties even as to that point of time (Sergeson v Sealey (1742) 2 Atk 412), but was admissible as to his mental state at a later period, although liable to be contradicted (Sergeson v Sealey (1742) 2 Atk 412; Faulder v Silk (1811) 3 Camp 126; Hill v Clifford, Clifford v Timms, Clifford v Phillips [1907] 2 Ch 236, CA; on appeal sub nom Clifford v Timms, Clifford v Phillips [1908] AC 12, 15, HL, citing Van Grutten v Foxwell, Foxwell v Van Grutten [1897] AC 658, HL (not reported on this point)). JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) FINALITY OF JUDGMENTS AND OF LITIGATION/(iv) Parties Estopped by Judgment/A. PARTIES ESTOPPED BY JUDGMENT DETERMINING STATUS/1194. Consent judgment in rem.

1194. Consent judgment in rem.

Although a judgment by consent may well create an estoppel between the parties¹, it is at least doubtful whether a judgment in rem obtained by consent of the parties² can ever be conclusive against persons who were not, and do not claim through, the parties to it, except so far as may be necessary to protect the title of a person who purchases the relevant property on the faith of the judgment. It has been stipulated that a judgment by consent cannot effect res judicata so as to bind the public or absent parties³.

1 Bowden v Beauchamp (1740) 2 Atk 81.

2 It is submitted that a judgment in rem by consent involves to some extent a contradiction in terms, the fact of the consent converting what would, had it resulted from a judicial finding, have been a judgment in rem into a mere judgment between parties. It is on this principle that the court rarely, if ever, makes declarations 'by consent'; the declaration presupposes judicial consideration and decision. As to judgments in rem see PARA 160 et seq.

3 Jenkins v Robertson (1867) LR 1 Sc & Div 117, HL (a Scottish case; had the judgment been the result of a contest, it would have determined the question of highway as against the public and been in the nature of a judgment in rem); cf Ballantyne v Mackinnon [1896] 2 QB 455, CA; The Bellcairn (1885) 10 PD 161, CA.

Thus a judgment by consent establishing a will in solemn form was held not to bind a party who, though served with a citation to see proceedings, had not appeared or been represented at the hearing, so as to prevent him from taking proceedings to revoke probate: Ritchie v Malcolm [1902] 2 IR 403; and see PARA 1159. Citations in contentious business have been abolished; but it has been held that, where it is necessary for the court to bind any class of persons, for example, pecuniary legatees, they must all be made defendants or a representation order obtained, or they must be informally notified of the proceedings so that each has an opportunity of being joined as a party: see Mohan v Broughton [1900] P 56, CA; and EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 876. As to the court's power to make a judgment binding on non-parties see now CPR 19.8A; and PARA 231. Contentious probate claims are now governed by CPR Pt 57: see PARA 30; and see generally EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS. As to the circumstances in which a grant of probate may be revoked see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 256 et seq; and as to the procedure see CPR 57.6.

Conclusiveness in criminal and matrimonial cases.

1195. Conclusiveness in criminal and matrimonial cases.

It seems clear that in criminal cases, at all events, a judgment in rem¹ is, as between strangers or between a party to it and a stranger, conclusive only as to the status or title which it declares or creates² or the disposition which it actually makes, and not as to any matter of fact upon which it may be founded³. A decree absolute in a divorce case concludes the fact of dissolution of the marriage, but nothing further; and it is apprehended that a decree of nullity pronounced by the English court on a marriage celebrated in England or of a foreign court on a marriage celebrated in the country of its jurisdiction, and under the law of that country⁴, between persons domiciled there, is equally conclusive as to the non-existence of the marriage⁵. A mere dismissal of a suit would not have a similar effect⁶.

Any declaration made under the Family Law Act 1986⁷ is binding on Her Majesty and all other persons⁸.

3 Duchess of Kingston's Case (1776) 2 Smith LC (13th Edn) 644; R v Buttery and Macnamara (1818) Russ & Ry 342 (grant of probate not conclusive in favour of accused on indictment for forging a will), not following R v Vincent (1721) 1 Stra 481. In regard to the converse case, ie the admissibility in civil cases of criminal convictions, see the Civil Evidence Act 1968 ss 11, 13; PARA 1196 text and note 8; and PARAS 1208-1210.

4 Marriages celebrated in a British consulate are treated as solemnised in England: see Hay v Northcote [1900] 2 Ch 262. As to the conclusiveness of foreign judgments see CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARA 150 et seq.

5 This seems to follow from the reasoning of the notes to Duchess of Kingston's Case (1776) 2 Smith LC (13th Edn) 644 at 670; and of Blackburn J in Castrique v Imrie (1870) LR 4 HL 414 at 428. De Grey CJ (see 2 Smith LC (13th Edn) 647, 650) did not concede so much to the sentences of ecclesiastical courts; those courts, however, had not the power to effect a dissolution of marriage, and he apparently did not regard the sentence of an ecclesiastical court pronouncing against the fact of marriage as final. See the point discussed in 2 Smith LC (13th Edn) 692. For the modern doctrine as to decrees of nullity as distinguished from decrees of divorce and the statutory provisions relating to recognition of foreign decrees see Ogden v Ogden [1908] P 46, CA; Salvesen (or von Lorang) v Austrian Property Administrator [1927] AC 641, HL; and CONFLICT OF LAWS vol 8(3) (Reissue) PARAS 162, 251 et seq.

6 Needham v Bremner (1866) LR 1 CP 583. In this case the petition was for dissolution, but the same principle would seem to apply to nullity proceedings.

The old cases (eg R v Matthews (1797) 5 Price 202n; A-G v Wakefield (1797) 5 Price 202n; A-G v Reynolds (1804) 5 Price 203n; A-G v King (1817) 5 Price 195; and see also the note to Scott v Shearman (1775) 2 Wm Bl 977), upon the conclusiveness of a record of condemnation in the Exchequer in subsequent proceedings for penalties under the statute creating the forfeiture as to the grounds of condemnation appearing on the record, form an apparent exception to these propositions. Apart from the fact that an information for penalties for breach of the revenue laws is not, strictly speaking, a criminal proceeding (R v Hausmann (1909) 73 JP 516, CCA) they may perhaps be explained by the fact that the parties were in substance the same, the defendant on the one hand, and on the other the Queen, prosecuting in her own name or in that of her Attorney General.

B. PARTIES ESTOPPED BY JUDGMENT DETERMINING RIGHTS

1196. Parties and privies.

A judgment in personam or between parties¹ raises an estoppel only against the parties² to the proceedings in which it is given and their privies³, for example those claiming or deriving title under them⁴. As against all other persons it does not prejudice the persons before the court⁵, and with certain exceptions⁶, although conclusive of the fact that the judgment was obtained and of its terms⁷, is not admissible evidence of the facts established by it⁸.

Privies are of three classes:

- 828 (1) privies in blood, for example, ancestor and heir⁹;
- 829 (2) privies in law, for example (formerly) tenant by the curtesy or in dower¹⁰, and others that came in by act in law¹¹, for example testator and executor, intestate and administrator¹², bankrupt and trustee in bankruptcy¹³;
- 830 (3) privies in estate or interest, for example testator and devisee¹⁴, vendor and purchaser¹⁵, landlord and tenant¹⁶, a husband and his wife claiming under his title and a wife and a husband claiming under hers¹⁷, successive incumbents of the same benefice¹⁸, assignor and assignee of a bond¹⁹, and the employee of a corporation defending a claim of trespass at the cost of his employers and justifying under their title and the corporation itself²⁰.

A judgment of ouster against a corporator would be conclusive evidence against another deriving title under him, for example by his vote²¹.

It is not easy to detect from the authorities what amounts to a sufficient interest²². The question seems to be determined by an examination of the factual identity of interests of the parties and the fairness of binding them by a decision in which they were not represented²³.

1197. Similar interest not privity.

To establish the relation of party and privity, not only must the two persons have a similar interest in the property to which the estoppel related, but also the privity must derive title from the party¹. Thus a tenant admitted by the landlord upon a surrender by the former tenant was not estopped from denying the truth of a recital in the former tenant's deed to the effect that he was seised for life, for his estate came not from the former tenant but from the landlord². As neither a sheriff nor an execution creditor is privity to the debtor, neither of them is bound by an estoppel which prevents the debtor from denying the title of a third person who has in fact no property in the goods³.

So strictly is this rule applied that the determination in Chancery proceedings as to who are a deceased's next of kin is not binding on persons claiming to be entitled to a grant of letters of administration in respect of an independent right arising upon the renunciation of the next of kin, even though they trace their kinship through one of the parties to the former suit⁴. The successive possession of a similar interest is, however, evidence of privity of estate. Thus the fact that a sole claimant was in possession of an estate when the former cause of action accrued, and that he and his co-claimant were so at the time of the later cause of action, is prima facie evidence that the later claimants are privity in estate to the former claimant⁵.

1198. Privy's title must be derived subsequent to proceedings.

In order that a judgment may be conclusive against a person as privy in estate to a party litigant it is necessary to show, apart from his taking with a notice of a pending action¹, that he derives title under the latter by act or operation of law subsequent to the recovery of the judgment², or at least to the beginning of the proceedings, and that the judgment was one affecting the property to which title is derived. Purchasers of land are not estopped by proceedings begun after the purchase³; and a judgment obtained against the mortgagor of land after completion of the mortgage, setting aside his purchase of the land on the ground of fraud, is not even evidence against the mortgagee who was not a party to the proceedings⁴.

1199. Party must sue or defend in same right.

It is necessary to an estoppel by record that the parties to the litigation or their privies should have claimed or defended in the same right in the former proceedings as they represent in the later ones¹. The determination of the issues in a claim by a personal representative for damage sustained by the relatives of the deceased from his death by accident raises no estoppel in a subsequent claim by the same claimant for damage caused to the deceased's estate by the same accident, because the claimant sues in two different rights, and in effect the parties in the two claims are different².

It has been held that a patentee whose patent was, in a claim by himself for infringement, held invalid for want of novelty was not in subsequent proceedings by the defendant as petitioner for the revocation of the same patent precluded from again alleging the novelty of the patent, because the petition was on behalf of the public, and the former defendant was therefore appearing in a different right³.

1200. Position of trustee in bankruptcy and liquidator.

In getting in assets for the estate of a bankrupt or an insolvent company a trustee in bankruptcy or liquidator, as the case may be, is not in any different position from any other assignor. He stands in the shoes of the person from whom he obtained the claim and estoppels operate against him in the normal way¹.

In dealing with the distribution of the assets, after they have been got in, the trustee or liquidator cannot, however, be bound by estoppel so as to prevent his exercising his statutory duty².

JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) FINALITY OF JUDGMENTS AND OF LITIGATION/(iv) Parties Estopped by Judgment/B. PARTIES ESTOPPED BY JUDGMENT DETERMINING RIGHTS/1201. Quasi-privity.

1201. Quasi-privity.

In certain cases, although there is in strictness no privity between a party to a judgment and the person against whom it is set up, the relations between them are such that the latter is not allowed to dispute it¹. There is no privity of estate between the parties to a contract of indemnity² or between a surety and the principal debtor or his trustee in bankruptcy³, but a person who has covenanted to indemnify another against liabilities and claims in respect of them is, as between himself and the party indemnified, estopped from disputing the judgment in a claim against the party indemnified which has been defended with the covenantor's knowledge and approval, not because the covenantor is a privy, but because that is the true meaning of the contract⁴. Where, however, indemnity is claimed independently of contract against trustees who have committed a breach of trust, they are not estopped by a judgment obtained by third parties against the claimants from saying that no damage has arisen from the breach⁵.

Even though trustees and their beneficiaries are different parties, and neither derive their title from the other⁶, equity will not allow the same question to be litigated between a person and the beneficiaries and afterwards between the same person and the trustees⁷; and in ordinary cases a judgment in a claim against trustees or executors who are sued in a representative capacity⁸ is binding upon the beneficiaries where the trustees or executors in fact represented their beneficiaries⁹. It is otherwise, however, where the beneficiaries have solid ground for impeaching a transaction between fraudulent trustees or executors and the claimant. In such a case, where the beneficiaries have not had an opportunity of intervening, they are not precluded from establishing their rights by a judgment against the trustees or executors in a claim in which the trustees or executors have not served a defence, or have served a defence which admitted the claimants' claim¹⁰.

1202. Issue estoppel as between co-defendants.

A line of older authorities suggests that issue estoppel may operate as between co-defendants, provided that the following conditions are satisfied:

- 831 (1) there must be a conflict of interest between the defendants concerned;
- 832 (2) it must be necessary to decide this conflict in order to give the claimant the relief he claims; and
- 833 (3) the question between the defendants must have been finally decided¹.

However, it has recently been pointed out that the authorities concerned were all property disputes, in which judgments had been given determining property claims as between claimants and a number of defendants who were in contention among themselves; and the extent to which they may now apply in other circumstances is doubtful².

The question of issue estoppel between joint defendants was also considered in a case where victims of an explosion sued a water company and the contractors and consulting engineers employed by them, alleging that the explosion had been caused by the negligence of each of the defendants. None of the defendants served a contribution notice on any other defendant, or made any allegation against another defendant, or sought an apportionment of such negligence as might be found. The Court of Appeal held that the explosion had been caused solely by the negligence of the consulting engineers. The water company sued the consulting engineers for damages for their negligence and it was held, on a preliminary issue, that issue estoppel applied, and precluded the consulting engineers from denying their negligence³.

In negligence cases, particularly where traffic accidents are concerned, questions of issue estoppel between co-defendants may be complicated by the fact that different defendants may owe different duties of care to different persons⁴.

1203. Old maxim that estoppels are odious.

Estoppels, being frequently at least opposed to the admission of evidence of the truth, have always been jealously regarded by the courts, and this practice found expression in the old maxim that 'estoppels are odious'¹. Although this maxim hardly expresses the modern view², particularly with regard to estoppel by representation³, the doctrine of estoppel by record is not to be extended beyond what there is authority for⁴. Fraud or collusion will prevent the existence of such an estoppel⁵.

1204. Judgment obtained by fraud.

Fraud is an extrinsic, collateral act which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of courts of justice¹. A judgment obtained by fraud or collusion, even, it seems, a judgment of the House of Lords², may normally be treated as a nullity³. An exception to the generality of these propositions should probably be made where a purchaser has acquired title to property in good faith and for value upon the faith of a judgment in rem⁴. Apart from this they may be accepted without qualification in favour of persons who were not party to the judgment, whether it was in rem⁵ or in personam⁶. On this principle the recovery of penalties, which it is not intended to enforce, in a friendly claim instituted in order to prevent hostile claims, is no bar to a second claim by another party for penalties for the same offence⁷.

In order to avoid being estopped by it, a party to a judgment obtained by fraud should generally apply to have it set aside⁸.

Where in the case of a judgment of a competent foreign court a party has applied unsuccessfully in that jurisdiction to have the first judgment set aside on the ground of fraud, he is estopped in the English courts from raising again the issue of fraud⁹.

In Perry v Meddowcroft (1846) 10 Beav 122 it was said that to make out such a case of fraud, collusion and concert between the parties must be established; and see Meddowcroft v Huguenin (1844) 4 Moo PCC 386. These cases were before the Matrimonial Causes Act 1873 s 1 (repealed: see now the Matrimonial Causes Act

(vi) Procedural Matters

1205. Who may plead estoppel.

The question of who may take advantage of an estoppel is in general governed by the rule that estoppels ought to be mutual¹.

The only persons who may take advantage of an estoppel by record are those who, had the decision been the other way, would have been bound by it, that is to say, in case of a judgment in personam or between parties, the parties and their privies². It is not enough that the person against whom the estoppel is set up was party or privy to the judgment relied on; each party to the later proceeding must have been party or privy to the earlier one³. It follows that the only persons who may take advantage of an estoppel are those who claim or defend in the later proceeding in the same right as they, or those to whom they are privy, claimed or defended in the earlier⁴. The above principles are, however, qualified by specific statutory provisions that a finding in earlier proceedings is to be admissible, and in certain circumstances conclusive, evidence in later proceedings⁵.

A party having defeated one claimant to property by a plea of res judicata may not allege title in that claimant for the purpose of defeating other claimants in the proceedings⁶.

1206. Evidence admissible to show matter in issue.

In order to ascertain what was in issue between the parties in the earlier proceedings the judgment itself must, of course, be looked at¹; and, where there have been pleadings, these should also be examined², being in fact part of the record. The same principle applies where an issue has been directed by the court. In short, whatever goes to make up the record must be looked at³; and no evidence is in that case admissible to contradict the record⁴ or to show that more was in issue than appears upon it⁵. Where, after trial in a court where there are no pleadings, the record of the court is relied upon, oral evidence is, however, admissible to show what facts were in issue and determined as the basis of the judgment, and such a determination is conclusive between the same parties⁶.

The above must now be read in the light of the court's duty, in civil proceedings to which the Civil Procedure Rules 1998⁷ apply, to give effect to the overriding objective of dealing with cases justly⁸ and of its general power to control the evidence⁹.

As a general rule the judge's reasons cannot be looked at for the purpose of discovering the grounds of his decision (Re Bank of Hindustan, China and Japan, Campbell's Case, Hippisley's Case, Alison's Case (1873) 9 Ch App 1); but to this rule there are exceptions, as where the judge tries a claim separately from a counterclaim and, in dismissing the claim, expressly states that he leaves open for consideration some particular fact or facts on the counterclaim (Patchett v Sterling Engineering Co Ltd (1953) 71 RPC 61, CA; revsd on other grounds sub nom Sterling Engineering Co Ltd v Patchett [1955] AC 534, [1955] 1 All ER 369, HL). 1207. Payment into and out of court.

Where money has been paid into court in satisfaction of a particular cause of action¹ and taken out by the claimant, and judgment has been signed for his costs, it seems that the defendant is not estopped from denying material averments in the particulars of claim² although the claimant will be estopped from denying the sufficiency of the amount³; and the same result would seem to follow where the claimant, having taken out the money, merely abandons the proceedings and no judgment is signed. Where a sum is paid into court generally in satisfaction of several causes of action⁴ and the claimant takes out the money and abandons the claim, he is not estopped from proceedings for a particular item unless it appears on inquiry that the sum paid into court included that item⁵.

Where a party to a claim takes out of court money paid into court and thereby apparently elects to pursue one of two alternative remedies, but in fact acts under a mistaken interpretation of the pleadings, the court has jurisdiction to relieve him against the consequences of his mistake if he applies quickly and it is just so to do⁶.

(vii) Previous Convictions

1208. Convictions as evidence in civil proceedings.

In any civil proceedings¹ the fact that a person has been convicted of an offence by or before any court² in the United Kingdom³ or by a court-martial⁴ there or elsewhere is admissible in evidence⁵ for the purpose of proving, where to do so is relevant to any issue in those proceedings, that he committed that offence, whether he was so convicted upon a plea of guilty or otherwise and whether or not he is a party to the civil proceedings⁶. No conviction other than a subsisting one⁷ is admissible in evidence by virtue of these provisions⁸.

In any civil proceedings in which by virtue of these provisions a person is proved to have been convicted of an offence by or before any court in the United Kingdom or by a court-martial there or elsewhere, he must be taken to have committed that offence unless the contrary is proved⁹. Without prejudice to the reception of any other admissible evidence for the purpose of identifying the facts on which the conviction was based, the contents of any document which is admissible as evidence of the conviction, and the contents of the information, complaint, indictment or charge-sheet on which the person in question was convicted, are admissible in evidence for that purpose¹⁰.

In relation to foreign convictions, the rule¹¹ that a previous criminal conviction is inadmissible in subsequent civil proceedings continues to have effect despite the above provisions¹².

1 'Civil proceedings' includes, in addition to civil proceedings in any of the ordinary courts of law, civil proceedings before any other tribunal, being proceedings in relation to which the strict rules of evidence apply, and an arbitration or reference, whether under an enactment or not, but does not include civil proceedings in relation to which the strict rules of evidence do not apply: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 18(1).

2 'Court' does not include a court-martial, and, in relation to an arbitration or reference, means the arbitrator or umpire and, in relation to proceedings before a tribunal (not being one of the ordinary courts of law), means the tribunal: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 18(2). Proceedings before a police disciplinary tribunal are not proceedings before a court for the purposes of s 11 (see the text and notes 3-10): see Thorpe v Chief Constable of Greater Manchester Police [1989] 2 All ER 827, [1989] 1 WLR 665, CA. As from a day to be appointed, the reference to a court-martial is replaced by a reference to a service court: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 18(2) (prospectively amended by the Armed Forces Act 2006 s 378(1), Sch 16 para 53(a)). 'Service court' means the Court Martial, the Summary Appeal Court, the Service Civilian Court, the Court Martial Appeal Court or the Supreme Court on an appeal brought from the Court Martial Appeal Court: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 18(2A) (added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 53(b)). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court of England and Wales is renamed the Senior Courts of England and Wales: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

3 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 221 note 2.

4 For these purposes, 'court-martial' means a court-martial constituted under the Army Act 1955, the Air Force Act 1955 or the Naval Discipline Act 1957 and in relation to a court-martial 'conviction' means a finding of guilty which is, or falls to be treated as, the finding of the court, and 'convicted' is to be construed accordingly: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(6) (amended by the Armed Forces Act 1996 ss 5, 35(2), Sch 1 Pt IV para 100, Sch 7 Pt II; and by the Armed Forces Act 2001 s 38, Sch 7 Pt 1; repealed, as from a day to be appointed, by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 51(1), (5)).

5 le subject to the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(3): s 11(1). Nothing in s 11 prejudices the operation of s 13 (see PARA 1209) or any other enactment whereby a conviction or a finding of fact in any criminal proceedings is for the purposes of any other proceedings made conclusive evidence of any fact: s 11(3). Any reference in the Civil Evidence Act 1968 to any other enactment is a reference thereto as amended, and includes a reference thereto as applied, by or under any other enactment: s 18(3).

6 Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(1). As from a day to be appointed, for the words 'by a court-martial there or elsewhere' there are substituted the words 'of a service offence (anywhere)': Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(1) (prospectively amended by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 51(2)). 'Service offence' has the same meaning as in the Armed Forces Act 2006, and 'conviction' includes anything that under s 376(1), (2) of that Act is to be treated as a conviction, and 'convicted' is to be read accordingly (see ARMED FORCES): Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 18(7) (prospectively added by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 51(5)). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

7 'Subsisting' is not defined for these purposes, but it includes a conviction which is being appealed against: Re Raphael, Raphael v D'Antin [1973] 3 All ER 19 at 22, [1973] 1 WLR 998 at 1001-1002, where it was said that Parliament cannot have intended that civil proceedings should be finally disposed of in reliance on a conviction which was subsequently liable to be quashed, and that it probably assumed that where possible injustice might otherwise result the hearing of the civil action (now known as a 'claim': see PARA 18) would always be adjourned until after the determination of the criminal appeal. As to when convictions are spent and no longer admissible in evidence see PARA 1210.

8 Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(1).

9 Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(2)(a). As from a day to be appointed, for the words 'by a court-martial there or elsewhere' there are substituted the words 'of a service offence': Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(2) (prospectively amended by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 51(3)). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

The Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11 permits a person convicted of an offence, who is the defendant in subsequent civil proceedings, to call evidence tending to show that he was wrongly convicted: J v Oyston [1999] 1 WLR 694, 143 Sol Jo LB 47. The words 'unless the contrary is proved' in the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(2) provide the clearest possible mandate to a defendant in a road traffic accident case to attack his earlier conviction, provided he has some good cause for so doing and can discharge the burden of proof to a civil standard; where these conditions are satisfied a defendant's attempt to re-litigate the issue is not an abuse of process: McCauley v Hope (Carryl, third party) [1999] 1 WLR 1977, [1998] All ER (D) 696, CA. The effect of admitting in evidence a conviction in civil proceedings is to shift the legal burden of proof from the party who would otherwise have to prove the offence to make good his claim to the party who had been convicted who must prove, on the balance of probabilities, that he was innocent and who, unless he discharges that burden, must be treated for all relevant purposes as having committed the offence of which he was convicted; but in determining whether the party convicted has discharged that burden of proof it is not the function of the judge to consider what view he himself might have taken of the criminal trial had he sat on it as juryman or judge: JW Stupple v Royal Insurance Co Ltd [1971] 1 QB 50, [1970] 3 All ER 230, CA. See also Taylor v Taylor [1970] 2 All ER 609, [1970] 1 WLR 1148; Wauchope v Mordecai [1970] 1 All ER 417, [1970] 1 WLR 317, CA. As to the burden and standard of proof see PARAS 769-775.

10 Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(2)(b). Where in any civil proceedings the contents of any document are admissible in evidence by virtue of s 11(2), a copy of that document, or of the material part thereof, purporting to be certified or otherwise authenticated by or on behalf of the court or authority having custody of that document is admissible in evidence and is to be taken to be a true copy of that document or part unless the contrary is shown: s 11(4).

It has been held that the transcript of a summing up is not directly admissible under s 11(2)(b), since the express references to certain specific types of material do not include transcripts of summing up. Such transcripts may only be put in evidence for the purposes specified in s 11(2)(b) if they are admissible under the general law of evidence or as admissible hearsay under the Civil Evidence Act 1995 (see PARA 808 et seq): see Brinks Ltd v Abu-Saleh (No 2) [1995] 4 All ER 74, [1995] 1 WLR 1487.

Nothing in any of the following enactments, ie: (1) the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 14 (under which a conviction leading to discharge is to be disregarded except as therein mentioned); (2) the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1949 s 9 (which makes similar provision in respect of convictions on indictment in Scotland); and (3) the Probation Act (Northern Ireland) 1950 s 8 or any corresponding enactment of the Parliament of Northern Ireland for the time being in force, affects the operation of the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11; and for those purposes any order made by a court of summary jurisdiction in Scotland under the Criminal Justice (Scotland) Act 1949 s 1 or s 2 is to be treated as a conviction: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(5) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 ss 100, 101(2), Sch 11 para 5, Sch 13; and by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 36; modified by the Northern Ireland Act 1998 Sch 12 paras 1-11). As from a day to be appointed, reference to the Armed Forces Act 2006 s 187 (which makes similar provision in respect of service convictions) is added: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 11(5)(aa) (prospectively added by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 51(4)). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

1209. Conclusiveness of convictions for purposes of defamation claims.

In a claim for libel or slander in which the question whether the claimant¹ did or did not commit a criminal offence is relevant to an issue arising in the claim, proof that at the time when that issue falls to be determined, he stands convicted of that offence² is conclusive evidence³ that he committed that offence and his conviction of it is admissible in evidence accordingly⁴.

In any such claim in which by virtue of these provisions the claimant⁵ is proved to have been convicted of an offence, the contents of any document which is admissible as evidence of the conviction, and the contents of the information, complaint, indictment or charge-sheet on which he was convicted, are, without prejudice to the reception of any other admissible evidence for the purpose of identifying the facts on which the conviction was based, admissible in evidence for the purpose of identifying those facts⁶.

1 In the case of a claim for libel or slander in which there is more than one claimant, the references in the text to the claimant are to be construed as references to any of the claimants and proof that any of the claimants stands convicted of an offence is conclusive evidence that he committed that offence so far as that fact is relevant to any issue arising in relation to his cause of action or that of any other claimant: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 13(2A) (s 13(1), (2) amended, and s 13(2A) added, by the Defamation Act 1996 s 12(1)). The statutory language used is 'action', 'plaintiff' and 'plaintiffs', but actions are now known as claims and plaintiffs as claimants: see PARA 18.

2 For these purposes a person is to be taken to stand convicted of an offence if but only if there subsists against him a conviction of that offence by or before a court in the United Kingdom or by a court-martial there or elsewhere: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 13(3). See also note 1. As from a day to be appointed, for the words 'by a court-martial there or elsewhere' there are substituted the words '(in the case of a service offence) a conviction (anywhere) of that service offence': Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 13(3) (prospectively amended by the Armed Forces Act 2006 s 378(1), Sch 16 para 52(a)). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed. As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 1208 note 2; as to the meaning of 'court-martial' see PARA 1208 note 4 (definition applied by the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 13(4)); and as to the meaning of 'service offence' see PARA 1208 note 6 (definition applied by the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 13(4) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 52(b); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed)). As to spent convictions see PARA 1210. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 221 note 2.

3 As to the effect of this provision see Levene v Roxhan [1970] 3 All ER 683, [1970] 1 WLR 1322, CA. 1209 Conclusiveness of convictions for purposes of defamation claims

NOTE 2--Appointed day for amendment of the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 13(3), (4) by the Armed Forces Act 2006 Sch 16 para 52 is 31 October 2009: SI 2009/1167.

1210. Restrictions on evidence of certain convictions.

Subject to certain exceptions¹, no evidence is admissible in any proceedings before a judicial authority exercising its jurisdiction or functions in Great Britain to prove that a rehabilitated person² has committed or been charged with or prosecuted for or convicted of or sentenced for any offence which was the subject of a spent conviction³. Furthermore, in any such proceedings, a person may not be asked, and if asked is not required to answer, any question relating to his past which cannot be answered without acknowledging or referring to a spent conviction or spent convictions or any circumstances ancillary to them⁴. If, however, at any stage in any proceedings before a judicial authority in Great Britain⁵ the authority is satisfied, in the light of any considerations which appear to it to be relevant (including any evidence which has been or may thereafter be put before it), that justice cannot be done in the case except by admitting or requiring evidence relating to a person's spent convictions or to circumstances ancillary thereto, that authority may admit or, as the case may be, require the evidence in question notwithstanding the above provisions and may determine any issue to which the evidence relates in disregard, so far as necessary, of those provisions⁶.

JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) FINALITY OF JUDGMENTS AND OF LITIGATION/(viii) Previous Findings of Adultery and Paternity/1211. Findings of adultery and paternity as evidence in civil proceedings.

(viii) Previous Findings of Adultery and Paternity

1211. Findings of adultery and paternity as evidence in civil proceedings.

In any civil proceedings¹, the fact that a person has been found guilty of adultery in any matrimonial proceedings² and the fact that a person has been found to be the father of a child in relevant proceedings³ before any court⁴ in England and Wales or Northern Ireland or has been adjudged to be the father of a child in affiliation proceedings⁵ before any court in the United Kingdom⁶ is admissible in evidence⁷ for the purpose of proving, where to do so is relevant to any issue in those civil proceedings, that he committed the adultery to which the finding relates or, as the case may be, is (or was) the father of that child⁸. This applies whether or not he offered any defence to the allegation of adultery or paternity and whether or not he is a party to the civil proceedings; but no finding or adjudication other than a subsisting one⁹ is admissible in evidence by virtue of these provisions¹⁰.

In any civil proceedings in which by virtue of these provisions a person is proved to have been found guilty of adultery or to have been found or adjudged to be the father of a child as mentioned above, he must be taken to have committed the adultery to which the finding relates or, as the case may be, to be (or have been) the father of that child, unless the contrary is proved¹¹. Without prejudice to the reception of any other admissible evidence for the purpose of identifying the facts on which the finding or adjudication was based, the contents of any document which was before the court, or which contains any pronouncement of the court, in the other proceedings in question are admissible in evidence for that purpose¹².

1 As to the meaning of 'civil proceedings' see PARA 1208 note 1.

2 For these purposes, 'matrimonial proceedings' means any matrimonial cause in the High Court or a county court in England and Wales or in the High Court in Northern Ireland, any consistorial action in Scotland, or any appeal arising out of any such cause or action: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 12(5). 'Consistorial action' does not include an action of aliment only between husband and wife raised in the Court of Session or an action of interim aliment raised in the sheriff court: s 12(5).

3 For these purposes, 'relevant proceedings' means (1) proceedings on a complaint under the National Assistance Act 1948 s 42 (see SOCIAL SERVICES AND COMMUNITY CARE vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 1040) or the Social Security Act 1986 s 26 (repealed: see now the Social Security Administration Act 1992 s 105; and SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 397); (2) proceedings under the Children Act 1989; (3) proceedings which would have been relevant proceedings for the purposes of the Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 12 in the form in which it was in force before the passing of the Children Act 1989 (see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(3) (2008 Reissue) PARA 99); (4) proceedings which are relevant proceedings as defined in the Civil Evidence Act (Northern Ireland) 1971 s 85: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 12(5) (definition added by the Family Law Reform Act 1987 s 29(1), (4); substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 116, Sch 16 para 2; and amended by the Child Support Act 1991 s 27(5); the Child Support, Pensions and Social Security Act 2000 s 85, Sch 9 Pt IX; and by SI 1995/756).

4 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 1208 note 2.

5 'Affiliation proceedings' means, in relation to Scotland, any action of affiliation and aliment: Civil Evidence Act 1968 s 12(5). Affiliation proceedings in England and Wales were abolished by the Family Law Reform Act 1987 s 17.

6 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 221 note 2.

1212. Judgment against one of two jointly or alternatively liable.

At common law, if one of the two joint contractors was omitted from an action (now known as a 'claim'), even though the plaintiff (now known as the 'claimant')¹ was unaware of his existence, a judgment obtained in that action was a bar at common law to a subsequent action against the joint contractor who was omitted². By statute, however, judgment recovered against any person liable in respect of any debt or damage³ is no bar to a claim, or to the continuance of a claim, against any other person who is (apart from any such bar) jointly liable with him in respect of the same debt or damage⁴. A consent order regularly obtained, and not objectionable on its merits, cannot be set aside by consent of the parties so as to prejudice a third person in whose favour it is a bar⁵. In proceedings against a company for rescission of a contract on the grounds of fraudulent misrepresentation by its agent and damages against the agent, a judgment against the company for rescission of the contract is no bar to judgment against the agent for damages⁶.

Where there are separate causes of action against different defendants for the same damage, a judgment against one of them in a foreign court which has been satisfied is not necessarily a bar to proceedings against the other for the same damnum in the English courts⁷.

2 Hoare v Niblett[1891] 1 QB 781, DC. A plaintiff was similarly barred if he omitted from the action a joint debtor of whom he was aware: Morris v Wentworth-Stanley [1999] QB 1004, [1999] 2 WLR 470, CA.

3 A person is liable in respect of any damage for this purpose if the person who suffered it, or anyone representing his estate or dependants, is entitled to recover compensation from him in respect of that damage, whether the legal basis of his liability is tort, breach of contract, breach of trust or otherwise: Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 s 6(1).

4 See the Civil Liability (Contribution) Act 1978 s 3. However, if more than one claim is brought against the persons liable the plaintiff will be entitled to costs only in the first unless the court is of opinion that there was reasonable ground for bringing more than one claim: see s 4.

Where a claim is for a remedy under the Human Rights Act 1998¹ in respect of a judicial act which is alleged to have infringed the claimant's² article 5 Convention rights³ and the claim is based on a finding by a court or tribunal that the claimant's Convention rights have been infringed, the court hearing the claim⁴ may proceed on the basis of the finding of that other court or tribunal that there has been an infringement but it is not required to do so⁵. 1214. Evidential effect in divorce proceedings of certain orders made in matrimonial and family proceedings.

On any petition for divorce, if the petitioner or respondent has at any time been granted a decree of judicial separation or an order under, or having effect as if made under, the Matrimonial Proceedings (Magistrates' Courts) Act 1960¹ (now repealed) or the Domestic Proceedings and Magistrates' Courts Act 1978² or any corresponding enactments in force in Northern Ireland, the Isle of Man or any of the Channel Islands, on the same or substantially the same facts as those proved in support of the petition for divorce, the court may treat the decree of judicial separation or order as sufficient proof of the adultery, desertion or other fact by reference to which it was granted, but must not grant a decree of divorce without receiving evidence from the petitioner³. Although evidence of the findings of the court in the previous proceedings is admissible in the proceedings for the divorce, the court hearing the divorce proceedings is not bound to accept the earlier judgment as conclusive and no doctrine of estoppel operates to abrogate the duty of the court to inquire into the truth of the petition⁴.

(3) ORDERS RELATING TO THE SALE, MORTGAGE, PARTITION OR EXCHANGE OF LAND

1215. Court's powers to order sale etc of land and delivery up of possession.

Part 40 of the Civil Procedure Rules contains provisions¹ relating to the court's² power to order the sale, mortgage, partition or exchange of land³.

In any proceedings relating to land, the court may order the land, or part of it, to be sold⁴, mortgaged⁵ exchanged⁶ or partitioned⁷. Where the court has made such an order, it may order any party to deliver up to the purchaser or any other person either possession of the land⁸, receipt of rents or profits relating to the land⁹ or both possession and receipt of such rents or profits¹⁰.

Where land subject to any incumbrance¹¹ is sold or exchanged any party to the sale or exchange may apply to the court for a direction¹² that such incumbrances be discharged¹³. The directions a court may give on such an application include a direction for the payment into court of a sum of money that the court considers sufficient to meet the value of the incumbrance and further costs, expenses and interest that may become due on or in respect of the incumbrance¹⁴. Where a payment into court has been made in accordance with such a direction, the court may declare the land to be freed from the incumbrance and make any order it considers appropriate for giving effect to an order made under the provisions set out above¹⁵ or relating to the money in court and the income from it¹⁶.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 CPR 40.15(1)(a). For these purposes, 'land' includes any interest in, or right over, land: CPR 40.15(2).

4 CPR 40.16(a). Where the court has made an order under CPR 40.16 it may give any other directions it considers appropriate for giving effect to the order. In particular the court may give directions (1) appointing a party or other person to conduct the sale; (2) for obtaining evidence of the value of the land; (3) as to the manner of sale; (4) settling the particulars and conditions of the sale; (5) fixing a minimum or reserve price; (6) as to the fees and expenses to be allowed to an auctioneer or estate agent; (7) for the purchase money to be paid either into court, to trustees or to any other person; (8) for the result of a sale to be certified; (9) under CPR 40.18 (reference to conveyancing counsel: see PARA 1216): Practice Direction--1. Court's Powers in Relation to Land. 2. Conveyancing Counsel of the Court PD 40D para 2. Where the court has made an order under CPR 40.16 for land to be sold and a party wishes to bid for the land, he should apply to the court for permission to do so: para 3.1. Such an application must be made before the sale takes place: para 3.2. If the court gives permission to all the parties to bid, it may appoint an independent person to conduct the sale: para 3.3. For these purposes, 'bid' includes submitting a tender or other offer to buy: para 3.4.

If the court has directed either that the purchase money to be paid into court or that the result of the sale be certified, the result of the sale must be certified by the person having conduct of the sale: para 4.1. Unless the court directs otherwise, the certificate must give details of (a) the amount of the purchase price; (b) the amount of the fees and expenses payable to any auctioneer or estate agent; (c) the amount of any other expenses of the sale; (d) the net amount received in respect of the sale; and it must be verified by a statement of truth: para 4.2. If the proceedings are being dealt with in the Royal Courts of Justice, the certificate must be filed in Chancery Chambers and if they are being dealt with anywhere else, it must be filed in the court where the proceedings are being dealt with: see para 4.3. Where the court has ordered the sale of land under CPR 40.16, auctioneer's and estate agent's charges may, unless the court orders otherwise, include commission, fees for valuation of the land, charges for advertising the land and other expenses and disbursements but not charges for surveys (which require the authorisation of the court): see Practice Direction--1. Court's Powers in Relation to Land. 2. Conveyancing Counsel of the Court PD 40D para 5.1. If the total amount of the auctioneer's and estate agent's charges so authorised does not exceed 2.5% of the sale price and does not exceed the rate of commission that that agent would normally charge on a sole agency basis, the charges may, unless the court orders otherwise and subject as follows, be met by deduction of the amount of the charges from the proceeds of sale without the need for any further authorisation from the court: para 5.2. If, however, (i) a charge made by an auctioneer or estate agent (whether in respect of fees or expenses or both) is not so authorised; (ii) the total amount of the charges so authorised exceeds the limits set out in para 5.2; (iii) the land is sold in lots or by valuation; or (iv) the sale is of investment property, business property or farm property, an application must be made to the court for approval of the fees and expenses to be allowed: para 5.3. Such an application may be made by any party or, if he is not a party, by the person having conduct of the sale, and may be made either before or after the sale has taken place: para 5.4. 1216. Reference to conveyancing counsel.

Part 40 of the Civil Procedure Rules contains provisions¹ relating to conveyancing counsel². The appointment of such counsel is discussed elsewhere in this work³.

The court⁴ may direct conveyancing counsel to investigate and prepare a report on the title of any land⁵ or to draft any document⁶ and may take the report on title into account when it decides the issue in question⁷.

Any party to the proceedings may object to the report on title prepared by conveyancing counsel⁸. The objection must be made by application notice stating the matters the applicant objects to and the reason for the objection⁹.

Where there is an objection, the issue will be referred to a judge¹⁰ for determination¹¹.

If the court does not specify a particular conveyancing counsel, references will be distributed among conveyancing counsel in accordance with arrangements made by the chief Chancery master: para 6.2. The court will send a copy of the order, together with all other necessary documents, to conveyancing counsel and such a court order so sent to conveyancing counsel is sufficient authority for him to prepare his report or draft the document: paras 6.4, 6.5.

Where the court refers any matter to the conveyancing counsel of the court the fees payable to counsel in respect of the work done or to be done will be assessed by the court in accordance with CPR 44.3: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 8.8(1). An appeal from a decision of the court in respect of the fees of such counsel will be dealt with under the general rules as to appeals set out in CPR Pt 52 (see PARA 1658 et seq); and if the appeal is against the decision of an authorised court officer, it will be dealt with in accordance with CPR 47.20-CPR 47.23: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 8.8(2). (4) ORDERS FOR THE AWARD OF PROVISIONAL DAMAGES

1217. Order for an award of provisional damages.

The court¹ may make an order for an award of provisional damages² if the particulars of claim³ include a claim for provisional damages and the court is satisfied that the relevant statutory provision⁴ applies⁵.

When giving judgment at trial the judge⁶ will:

- 834 (1) specify the disease or type of deterioration, or diseases or types of deterioration, which for the purpose of the award of immediate damages it has been assumed will not occur and which will entitle the claimant⁷ to further damages if it occurs or they occur at a future date⁸;
- 835 (2) give an award of immediate damages⁹;
- 836 (3) specify the period or periods¹⁰ within which an application for further damages may be made in respect of each disease or type of deterioration¹¹; and
- 837 (4) direct what documents are to be filed and preserved as the case file¹² in support of any application for further damages¹³.

An order for an award of provisional damages must specify the disease or type of deterioration in respect of which an application may be made at a future date and the period within which such an application may be made¹⁴. Such an order may be made in respect of more than one disease or type of deterioration and may, in respect of each disease or type of deterioration, specify a different period within which a subsequent application may be made¹⁵.

The claimant may make more than one application to extend the specified period within which an application may be made at a future date¹⁶.

Causation of any further damages within the scope of the order is to be determined when any application for further damages is made¹⁷.

Where a claim includes claims arising under the Fatal Accidents Act 1976, and the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1934 and a single sum of money is ordered or agreed to be paid in satisfaction of the claims, the court will apportion the money between the different claims¹⁸. Where, in an action in which a claim under the Fatal Accidents Act 1976 is made by or on behalf of more than one person, a single sum of money is ordered or agreed to be paid in satisfaction of the claim, the court will apportion it between the persons entitled to it¹⁹. Unless it has already been apportioned by the court, a jury or agreement between the parties, the court will apportion money under the provisions above when it gives directions as to money recovered by or on behalf of a child or protected party²⁰ or in other cases on application²¹ by one of the parties²².

He will indorse the court file to the effect that it contains the case file documents and with the period during which the case file documents must be preserved, and will preserve the case file documents in the court office where the proceedings took place¹⁰.

Any subsequent order (1) extending the period within which an application for further damages may be made¹¹; or (2) of the Court of Appeal discharging or varying the provisions of the original judgment or of any such subsequent order, will become one of the case file documents and must be preserved accordingly and any variation of the period within which an application for further damages may be made must be indorsed on the court file containing the case file documents¹².

1219. Application for further damages.

The claimant¹ may not make an application for further damages after the end of the period specified in the judgment making an award of provisional damages² or of such period as extended by the court³. Only one application for further damages may be made in respect of each disease or type of deterioration specified in the award of provisional damages⁴.

The claimant must give at least 28 days' written notice to the defendant⁵ of his intention to apply for further damages⁶. If the claimant knows that the defendant is insured in respect of the claim and the identity of the defendant's insurers, he must also give at least 28 days' written notice to the insurers⁷.

Within 21 days after the end of the 28-day notice period, the claimant must apply for directions⁸.

1220. Consent orders for provisional damages.

An application to give effect to a consent order for provisional damages¹ must be made in accordance with Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules². If the claimant³ is a child⁴ or protected party⁵ the approval of the court⁶ must also be sought and the application for approval will normally be dealt with at a hearing⁷.

The order should be in the form of a consent judgment⁸ and should contain:

- 838 (1) details specifying the disease or type of deterioration, or diseases or types of deterioration, which for the purpose of the award of immediate damages it has been assumed will not occur and which will entitle the claimant to further damages if it occurs or they occur at a future date⁹;
- 839 (2) an award of immediate damages¹⁰;
- 840 (3) details specifying the period or periods within which an application for further damages may be made in respect of each disease or type of deterioration¹¹;
- 841 (4) a direction as to the documents to be preserved as the case file documents¹², which will normally be the consent judgment, any statements of case¹³, an agreed statement of facts and any agreed medical report or reports¹⁴.

The claimant or his legal representative¹⁵ must lodge the case file documents in the court office where the proceedings are taking place for inclusion in the court file¹⁶.

Where a defendant¹ fails to file an acknowledgment of service² and fails to file a defence³ within the time specified for doing so, the claimant⁴ may not enter judgment in default⁵ unless he abandons his claim for provisional damages⁶. Instead, he must make an application⁷ for directions⁸.

The master or district judge will normally direct the following issues to be decided: (1) whether the claim is an appropriate one for an award of provisional damages and if so, on what terms; and (2) the amount of immediate damages⁹.

If the judge¹⁰ makes an award of provisional damages, the provisions relating to preservation of the case file¹¹ apply¹².

1222. Orders for periodical payments under the Damages Act 1996.

Provision has been made¹ concerning the exercise of the court's powers² to order that all or part of an award of damages³ in respect of personal injury is to take the form of periodical payments⁴. In a claim for damages for personal injury, each party in its statement of case may state whether it considers periodical payments or a lump sum is the more appropriate form for all or part of an award of damages and where such statement is given must provide relevant particulars of the circumstances which are relied on⁵.

The court must consider and indicate to the parties as soon as practicable whether periodical payments or a lump sum is likely to be the more appropriate form for all or part of an award of damages⁶. Where the court awards damages in the form of periodical payments, the order must specify (1) the annual amount awarded, how each payment is to be made during the year and at what intervals⁷; (2) the amount awarded for future loss of earnings and other income, and care and medical costs and other recurring or capital costs⁸; (3) that the claimant's annual future pecuniary losses, as assessed by the court, are to be paid for the duration of the claimant's life, or such other period as the court orders⁹; and (4) that the amount of the payments is to vary annually by reference to the retail prices index, unless the court orders otherwise¹⁰. Where the court orders that any part of the award is to continue after the claimant's death, for the benefit of the claimant's dependants, the order must also specify the relevant amount and duration of the payments and how each payment is to be made during the year and at what intervals¹¹.

An order for periodical payments must specify that the payments must be funded in accordance with the relevant statutory provision¹², unless the court orders an alternative method of funding¹³. Where the court¹⁴ is satisfied that special circumstances make an assignment or charge of periodical payments necessary, it must, in deciding whether or not to approve the assignment or charge, also have regard to the factors set out in the practice direction¹⁵.

2 I.e powers under the Damages Act 1996 s 2(1): see DAMAGES vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 931.

3 'Damages' means damages for future pecuniary loss: CPR 41.4(2)(b).

4 CPR 41.4(1). 'Periodical payments' means periodical payments under the Damages Act 1996 s 2(1): CPR 41.4(1)(c).

5 CPR 41.5(1). Where such a statement is not given, the court may order a party to make such a statement: CPR 41.5(2). Where the court considers that a statement of case contains insufficient particulars under CPR 41.5(1), the court may order a party to provide such further particulars as it considers appropriate: CPR 41.5(3).

6 CPR 41.6. When considering its indication as to whether periodical payments or a lump sum is likely to be the more appropriate form for all or part of an award of damages under CPR 41.6, or whether to make an order under the Damages Act 1996 s 2(1)(a), the court must have regard to all the circumstances of the case and in particular the form of award which best meets the claimant's needs, having regard to the factors set out in the practice direction: CPR 41.7. Those factors include (1) the scale of the annual payments taking into account any deduction for contributory negligence; (2) the form of award preferred by the claimant including (a) the reasons for the claimant's preference; and (b) the nature of any financial advice received by the claimant when considering the form of award; and (3) the form of award preferred by the defendant including the reasons for

7 CPR 41.8(1)(a).

8 CPR 41.8(1)(b). Where an amount so awarded is to increase or decrease on a certain date, the order must also specify the date on which the increase or decrease will take effect, and the amount of the increase or decrease at current value: CPR 41.8(3). Examples of circumstances which might lead the court to order an increase or decrease under CPR 41.8(3) are where the court determines that (1) the claimant's condition will change leading to an increase or reduction in his need to incur care, medical or other recurring or capital costs; (2) gratuitous carers will no longer continue to provide care; (3) the claimant's educational circumstances will change; (4) the claimant would have received a promotional increase in pay; (5) the claimant will cease earning: Practice Direction--Periodical Payments under the Damages Act 1996 PD 41B para 2.2.

Where damages for substantial capital purchases are awarded, the order must also specify (a) the amount of the payments at current value; (b) when the payments are to be made; and (c) that the amount of the payments are to be adjusted by reference to the retail prices index, unless the court orders otherwise under the Damages Act 1996 s 2(9): CPR 41.8(4). 12 le in accordance with the Damages Act 1996 s 2(4).

13 CPR 41.9(1). Before ordering an alternative method of funding, the court must be satisfied that the continuity of payment under the order is reasonably secure, and the criteria set out in the practice direction are met: CPR 41.9(2). Such an order must specify the alternative method of funding: CPR 41.9(3). The relevant criteria are (1) that a method of funding provided for under the Damages Act 1996 s 2(4) is not possible or there are good reasons to justify an alternative method of funding; (2) that the proposed method of funding can be maintained for the duration of the award or for the proposed duration of the method of funding; and (3) that the proposed method of funding will meet the level of payment ordered by the court: Practice Direction--Periodical Payments under the Damages Act 1996 PD 41B para 3.

14 le under the Damages Act 1996 s 2(6)(a).

15 CPR 41.10. The relevant factors include (1) whether the capitalised value of the assignment or charge represents value for money; (2) whether the assignment or charge is in the claimant's best interests, taking into account whether these interests can be met in some other way; and (3) how the claimant will be financially supported following the assignment or charge: Practice Direction--Periodical Payments under the Damages Act 1996 PD 41B para 4.

23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS

(1) INTRODUCTION

(i) Necessity for Enforcement

1223. Judgments not requiring enforcement.

Many judgments and orders given or made in civil proceedings¹ do not require to be enforced because the judgment or order itself is all that the party obtaining it requires. Thus, a judgment which determines status² does not call for specific enforcement. It not only declares the status of the particular person or thing adjudicated upon but renders it such as it is declared. A decree of divorce dissolves the marriage and makes the parties single persons³; an adjudication in bankruptcy not only declares the debtor a bankrupt, but clothes him and his trustee with the consequences of that status⁴; a sentence in a prize court not only decrees the vessel to be prize, but vests her in the captor⁵. Such a judgment does not order recovery or payment of money, delivery or transfer of property, or any specific act or abstinence which may be subject to any of the various methods of enforcement⁶. Similarly, an order appointing new trustees which also vests the trust property in them requires no further step to be taken⁷. A declaratory judgment is complete in itself, since the relief is the declaration⁸.

1224. Judgments requiring enforcement.

The majority of judgments and orders given or made in civil proceedings¹ require one or more of the parties to do or abstain from doing some act, and, if such a judgment is not obeyed, some further legal process is required to ensure compliance². The following methods of enforcement are discussed in this title: execution against goods³, the enforcement of possession orders⁴, sequestration⁵, third party debt orders⁶, the attachment of earnings to secure payment of a judgment debt⁷, charging orders⁸, stop orders and stop notices⁹, the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution¹⁰, the enforcement of certain fines¹¹ and committal for non-payment of judgment debts¹². Orders for specific performance are discussed elsewhere in this work¹³. In addition to the various methods of enforcement which are discussed in this title, a judgment creditor may seek to recover payment of his judgment debt, or part of it, by bankruptcy¹⁴ or winding-up¹⁵ proceedings. In certain cases it may be necessary to bring further proceedings founded on a previous judgment¹⁶. The right to sue on a judgment becomes statute-barred after six years from the date on which the judgment became enforceable¹⁷, and no arrears of interest in respect of any judgment debt are recoverable after six years from the date on which the interest became due¹⁸.

If a judgment or order is set aside¹⁹, any enforcement of the judgment or order ceases to have effect unless the court otherwise orders²⁰.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/A. APPLICATION OF THE CIVIL PROCEDURE RULES/1225. Application of Parts 70 to 73 of the Civil Procedure Rules.

(ii) General Rules about Enforcement

A. APPLICATION OF THE CIVIL PROCEDURE RULES

1225. Application of Parts 70 to 73 of the Civil Procedure Rules.

Part 70 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR') contains general rules about enforcement of judgments and orders¹. Rules about specific methods of enforcement are contained in Parts 71 to 73 of the CPR, in the preserved and amended Rules of the Supreme Court ('RSC') Orders 45 to 47 and 52 set out in Schedule 1 to the CPR and in the preserved and amended County Court Rules ('CCR') Orders 25 to 29 set out in Schedule 2 to the CPR².

Parts 70 to 73 of the CPR do not apply to any of the following enforcement proceedings which were issued before 25 March 2002³:

- 842 (1) an application for an order for oral examination (now known as an order to obtain information from a judgment debtor)⁴;
- 843 (2) an application for a garnishee order (now known as a third party debt order)⁵;
- 844 (3) an application by a judgment creditor for an order for the payment to him of money standing in court to the credit of a judgment debtor⁶;
- 845 (4) an application for a charging order⁷;
- 846 (5) a claim for the enforcement of a charging order by sale of the property charged⁸; and
- 847 (6) an application for a stop order⁹.

The rules of court in force immediately before 25 March 2002 apply to those proceedings as if those rules had not been amended or revoked¹⁰. Amendments to the relevant rules set out in the Schedules which were consequent on the coming into force of Parts 70 to 73 of the CPR are effective from the same date¹¹.

2 CPR 70.1(1) note. See further PARA 1247 et seq. As to the Schedules to the CPR see PARA 30 text and note 20. Although the CPR contains rules common to most civil proceedings in the courts exercising civil jurisdiction in England and Wales (see PARAS 24-32), there continue to be significant differences in terminology and procedure with regard to enforcement of High Court and county court judgments and orders, as reflected in the separate sets of rules contained in the Schedules; eg the High Court issues writs of execution and county courts issue warrants of execution (see PARA 1265 et seq).

B. JURISDICTION

1226. Meaning of 'judgment or order'.

In Parts 70 to 73 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹, 'judgment or order' includes an award which the court² has registered for enforcement³, ordered to be enforced or given permission to enforce as if it were a judgment or order of the court⁴.

For the same purposes, 'judgment or order for the payment of money' includes a judgment or order for the payment of costs⁵ but does not include a judgment or order for the payment of money into court⁶.

1 As to the application of CPR Pts 70-73 see PARA 1225; and as to their provisions see the text and notes 2-6; and PARA 1228 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 See PARAS 1231-1233.

4 CPR 70.1(2)(c). In relation to such an award, 'the court which made the judgment or order' means the court which registered the award or made such an order: CPR 70.1(2)(c).

5 As to the enforcement of costs orders see further PARA 1227 text and note 8.

6 CPR 70.1(2)(d). As to payments into court under a court order see PARAS 742-744.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1227. High Court and county court jurisdiction in certain enforcement proceedings.

1227. High Court and county court jurisdiction in certain enforcement proceedings.

A judgment or order of a county court for the payment of a sum of money in proceedings arising out of an agreement regulated by the Consumer Credit Act 1974 is to be enforced only in a county court¹. Subject to that, a judgment or order of a county court for the payment of a sum of money which it is sought to enforce wholly or partially by execution against goods² is to be enforced only in the High Court where the sum which it is sought to enforce is £5,000 or more and only in a county court where the sum which it is sought to enforce is less than £600³. In any other case it may be enforced in either the High Court or a county court⁴.

A judgment or order of a county court for possession of land made in a possession claim against trespassers⁵ may be enforced in the High Court or a county court⁶.

Proceedings for the recovery of certain road traffic penalties must be taken in Northampton County Court⁷.

Proceedings for enforcement of default costs certificates, interim costs certificates and final costs certificates may not be issued in the Supreme Court Costs Office⁸.

4 High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 8(1)(c). Where an enactment provides that a sum of money is to be or may be recoverable as if it were payable under a county court order and the recovery of the sum is sought wholly or partially by execution against goods, payment of that sum is to be enforced in accordance with art 8(1)(a)-(c); however, art 8(1)(b) does not apply to the enforcement of money recoverable under the Employment Tribunals Act 1996 s 15(1) or a compromises sum which is recoverable under s 19A(3) (see EMPLOYMENT): High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 8(2), (3) (added by SI 2009/577).

5 For these purposes, 'a possession claim against trespassers' has the same meaning as in CPR Pt 55 (ie a claim for the recovery of land which the claimant alleges is occupied only by a person or persons who entered or remained on the land without the consent of a person entitled to possession of that land but does not include a claim against a tenant or sub-tenant whether his tenancy has been terminated or not: CPR 55.1(b)): High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 8B(2) (art 8B added by SI 2001/2685).

1227 High Court and county court jurisdiction in certain enforcement proceedings

NOTE 8--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1228. Transfer of proceedings for enforcement.

1228. Transfer of proceedings for enforcement.

A judgment creditor¹ wishing to enforce a High Court judgment or order² in a county court must apply to the High Court for an order transferring the proceedings to that county court³. A practice direction may make provisions about the transfer of proceedings for enforcement⁴. The relevant practice direction provides that if a judgment creditor wishes to enforce a High Court judgment or order in a county court, he must file⁵ the following documents in the county court with his application notice or request for enforcement:

- 848 (1) a copy of the judgment or order;
- 849 (2) a certificate verifying the amount due under the judgment or order;
- 850 (3) if a writ of execution⁶ has previously been issued in the High Court to enforce the judgment or order, a copy of the enforcement officer's return to the writ⁷; and
- 851 (4) a copy of the order transferring the proceedings to the county court⁸.

Where proceedings for the enforcement of any judgment or order of the High Court are transferred to a county court⁹, the judgment or order may be enforced as if it were a judgment or order of a county court and it is to be treated as a judgment or order of that court for all purposes¹⁰. However, the powers of any court to set aside, correct, vary or quash a judgment or order of the High Court, and the enactments relating to appeals from such a judgment or order, continue to apply; and the powers of any court to set aside, correct, vary or quash a judgment or order of a county court, and the enactments relating to appeals from such a judgment or order, do not apply¹¹.

If a judgment creditor is required by a rule or practice direction to enforce a judgment or order of one county court in a different county court, he must first make a request in writing to the court in which the case is proceeding to transfer the proceedings to that other court¹². On receipt of such a request, a court officer¹³ will transfer the proceedings to the other court unless a judge orders otherwise¹⁴. The court¹⁵ will give notice of the transfer to all the parties¹⁶. When the proceedings have been transferred, the parties must take any further steps in the proceedings in the court to which they have been transferred, unless a rule or practice direction provides otherwise¹⁷.

Where the judgment creditor makes a request for a certificate of judgment¹⁸ for the purpose of enforcing the judgment or order of a county court in the High Court:

- 852 (a) by execution against goods¹⁹; or
- 853 (b) where the judgment or order to be enforced is an order for possession of land made in a possession claim against trespassers²⁰, the grant of a certificate by the court takes effect as an order to transfer the proceedings to the High Court and the transfer has effect on the grant of that certificate²¹. On the transfer of proceedings in accordance with this provision, the court must give notice to the debtor or the person against whom the possession order was made that the proceedings have been transferred and must make an entry of that fact in the records of the court²². In a case where a request for a certificate of judgment is made²³ for the purpose of enforcing a judgment or order in the High Court and any of the specified proceedings are pending, the request for the certificate must not be dealt with until those proceedings are determined²⁴. The specified proceedings are:

- 854 (i) an application for a variation in the date or rate of payment of money due under a judgment or order²⁵;
- 855 (ii) an application by a party who did not attend trial to restore proceedings, or any part of proceedings, which have been struck out or to set aside a judgment or order²⁶ or an application to set aside or vary a default judgment²⁷;
- 856 (iii) a request for an administration order²⁸; or
- 857 (iv) an application²⁹ for a stay of execution³⁰.

Where proceedings for the enforcement of any judgment or order of a county court are transferred to the High Court by order of the county court³¹, the judgment or order may be enforced as if it were a judgment or order of the High Court and it is to be treated as a judgment or order of that court for all purposes³². However, the powers of any court to set aside, correct, vary or quash a judgment or order of a county court, and the enactments relating to appeals from such a judgment or order, continue to apply and the powers of any court to set aside, correct, vary or quash a judgment or order of the High Court, and the enactments relating to appeals from such a judgment or order, do not apply³³.

25 Where a county court judgment or order has been given or made for the payment of money, the person entitled to the benefit of the judgment or order or, as the case may be, the person liable to make the payment (referred to as the 'judgment creditor' and the 'debtor' respectively) may apply in accordance with the following provisions for a variation in the date or rate of payment: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(1). The judgment creditor may apply in writing, without notice being served on any other party, for an order that the money, if payable in one sum, be paid at a later date than that by which it is due or by instalments or, if the money is already payable by instalments, that it be paid by the same or smaller instalments, and the court officer may make an order accordingly unless no payment has been made under the judgment or order for six years before the date of the application in which case he must refer the application to the district judge: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(2). The judgment creditor may apply to the district judge on notice for an order that the money, if payable in one sum, be paid at an earlier date than that by which it is due or, if the money is payable by instalments, that it be paid in one sum or by larger instalments, and any such application must be made in writing stating the proposed terms and the grounds on which it is made: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(3). Where an application is so made, the proceedings must be automatically transferred to the debtor's home court if the judgment or order was not given or made in that court; and the court officer must fix a day for the hearing of the application before the district judge and give to the judgment creditor and the debtor not less than eight days' notice of the day so fixed, and at the hearing the district judge may make such order as seems just: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(4). The debtor may apply for an order that the money, if payable in one sum, be paid at a later date than that by which it is due or by instalments or, if the money is already payable by instalments, that it be paid by smaller instalments, and any such application must be in the appropriate form stating the proposed terms, the grounds on which it is made and including a signed statement of the debtor's means: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(5). Where such an application is made the court officer must (1) send the judgment creditor a copy of the debtor's application (and statement of means); and (2) require the judgment creditor to notify the court in writing, within 14 days of service of notification upon him, giving his reasons for any objection he may have to the granting of the application: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(6). If the judgment creditor does not notify the court of any objection within the time stated, the court officer must make an order in the terms applied for: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(7). Upon receipt of a notice from the judgment creditor under r 10(6), the court officer may determine the date and rate of payment and make an order accordingly: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(8). Any party affected by an order made under r 10(8) may, within 14 days of service of the order on him and giving his reasons, apply on notice for the order to be reconsidered and, where such an application is made: (a) the proceedings must be automatically transferred to the debtor's home court if the judgment or order was not given or made in that court; and (b) the court officer must fix a day for the hearing of the application before the district judge and give to the judgment creditor and the debtor not less than eight days' notice of the day so fixed: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(9). On hearing such an application, the district judge may confirm the order or set it aside and make such new order as he thinks fit and the order so made must be entered in the records of the court: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(10). Any order made under any of the provisions set out in this note may be varied from time to time by a subsequent order made under any of those provisions: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 10(11). ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1229. Satisfaction of county court judgments and orders for payment of money.

1229. Satisfaction of county court judgments and orders for payment of money.

Where a judgment is given or an order is made by a county court under which a sum of money of any amount is payable, whether by way of satisfaction of the claim or counterclaim in the proceedings or by way of costs or otherwise, the court may, as it thinks fit, order the money to be paid either in one sum, whether forthwith or within such period as the court may fix, or by such instalments payable at such times as the court may fix¹. If at any time it appears to the satisfaction of the court that any party to any proceedings is unable from any cause to pay any sum recovered against him (whether by way of satisfaction of the claim or counterclaim in the proceedings or by way of costs or otherwise) or any instalment of such a sum, the court may, in its discretion, suspend or stay any judgment or order given or made in the proceedings for such time and on such terms as the court thinks fit, and so from time to time until it appears that the cause of the inability has ceased².

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1230. Set-off in cases of cross judgments in county courts and High Court.

1230. Set-off in cases of cross judgments in county courts and High Court.

Where one person has obtained a judgment or order in a county court against another person, and that other person has obtained a judgment or order against the first-mentioned person in the same or in another county court or in the High Court, either such person may, in accordance with rules of court, give notice in writing to the court or the several courts as the case may be, and may apply to the court or any of the said courts in accordance with rules of court for leave to set off any sums, including costs, payable under the several judgments or orders¹. The district judge of the court to which the application is made and the district judge of any other court to which notice is given must forthwith stay execution on any judgment or order in his court to which the application relates and any money paid into court under the judgment or order must be retained until the application has been disposed of². Upon any such application, the set-off may be allowed in accordance with the practice for the time being in force in the High Court as to the allowance of set-off and in particular in relation to any solicitor's lien for costs³.

Where the cross judgments or orders have not been obtained in the same court, a copy of the order made on any such application must be sent by the officer of the court to which the application is made to the officer of the other court⁴.

1 County Courts Act 1984 s 72(1). The application must be made as follows: (1) where the judgments or orders have been obtained in the same county court, the application may be made to that court on the day when the last judgment or order is obtained, if both parties are present, and in any other case must be made on notice; (2) where the judgments or orders have been obtained in different county courts, the application may be made to either of them on notice, and notice must be given to the other court: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 11(1)-(3). See Revenue and Customs Comrs v Xicom Systems Ltd [2008] EWHC 1945 (Ch), [2008] STC 3492, [2008] All ER (D) 39 (Aug) (leave for set-off by Commissioners for Revenue and Customs).

2 CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 11(4).

3 County Courts Act 1984 s 72(2). The application may be heard and determined by the court and any order giving permission must direct how any money paid into court is to be dealt with: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 11(5).

4 County Courts Act 1984 s 72(3). Where the judgments or orders have been obtained in different courts, the court in which an order giving permission is made must send a copy of the order to the other court, which must deal with any money paid into that court in accordance with the order: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 11(6). The court officer or, as the case may be, each of the court officers affected must enter satisfaction in the records of his court for any sums ordered to be set off, and execution or other process for the enforcement of any judgment or order not wholly satisfied will issue only for the balance remaining payable: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 11(7). Where an order is made by the High Court giving permission to set off sums payable under several judgments and orders obtained respectively in the High Court and a county court, the court officer of the county court must, on receipt of a copy of the order, proceed in accordance with r 11(7): CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 22 r 11(8). As to the meaning of 'court officer' see PARA 49 note 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1231. Enforcement of decisions of bodies other than the High Court and county courts and compromises enforceable by enactment.

1231. Enforcement of decisions of bodies other than the High Court and county courts and compromises enforceable by enactment.

If an enactment provides that a decision or compromise is enforceable or a sum of money is recoverable if a court so orders, an application for such an order must be made as follows¹. The application must be made to the court for the district where the person against whom the order is sought resides or carries on business, unless the court otherwise orders². Where a compromise requires a person to whom a sum of money is payable under the compromise to do anything in addition to discontinuing or not starting proceedings (a 'conditional compromise') an application must be made on notice³, but otherwise the application may be made without notice⁴. The application notice must be in the form and contain the information required by the relevant practice direction⁵, and a copy of the decision or compromise must be filed with the application notice⁶. An application other than in relation to a conditional compromise may be dealt with by a court officer⁷ without a hearing⁸. Where an application relates to a conditional compromise, the respondent may oppose it by filing a response within 14 days of service of the application notice and if the respondent: (1) does not file a response within the time allowed, the court will make the order; (2) files a response within the time allowed, the court will make such order as seems appropriate⁹.

Otherwise, a party may enforce the decision or compromise by applying for a specific method of enforcement¹⁰, and must: (a) file with the court a copy of the decision or compromise being enforced; and (b) provide the court with the information required by the relevant practice direction¹¹.

If an enactment provides that a decision or compromise may be enforced in the same manner as an order of the High Court if it is registered, any application to the High Court for registration must be made in accordance with the relevant practice direction¹².

1 CPR 70.5(3). CPR 70.5 applies where an enactment provides that either a decision of a court, tribunal, body or person other than the High Court or a county court, or a compromise, may be enforced as if it were a court order or that any sum of money payable under that decision or compromise may be recoverable as if payable under a court order: CPR 70.5(1). However, CPR 70.5 does not apply to: (1) any judgment to which CPR Pt 74 applies; (2) arbitration awards; (3) any order to which CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 115 applies; or (4) proceedings to which CPR Pt 75 applies: CPR 70.5(2). CPR Pt 74 provides for registration in the High Court for the purpose of enforcement of judgments from other jurisdictions and European Community judgments; and CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 115 provides for registration in the High Court for the purposes of enforcement of certain orders made in connection with criminal proceedings and investigations. See further PARAS 1232-1233. CPR Pt 75 deals with traffic enforcement: see ROAD TRAFFIC. As to arbitration awards see ARBITRATION.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1232. Enforcement of European Community judgments etc.

1232. Enforcement of European Community judgments etc.

European Community judgments¹ and Euratom inspection orders² are enforceable in England and Wales by virtue of the relevant treaties and by Order in Council³.

Upon application to the High Court by the person entitled to enforce it, the High Court must forthwith register any Community judgment to which the Secretary of State has appended an order for enforcement⁴ or any Euratom inspection order⁵.

An application to the High Court for the registration of a Community judgment⁶ may be made without notice⁷. The application must be supported by written evidence exhibiting (1) the Community judgment and the order for its enforcement, or an authenticated copy; and (2) where the judgment is not in English, a translation of it into English either certified by a notary public or other qualified person or accompanied by written evidence confirming that the translation is accurate⁸. Where the application is for registration of a Community judgment which is a money judgment, the evidence must state:

- 858 (a) the name of the judgment creditor and his address for service⁹ within the jurisdiction;
- 859 (b) the name of the judgment debtor and his address or place of business, if known;
- 860 (c) the amount in respect of which the judgment is unsatisfied; and
- 861 (d) that the European Court ('ECJ')¹⁰ has not suspended enforcement of the judgment¹¹.

A copy of the order granting permission to register a Community judgment (the 'registration order') must be served on every person against whom the judgment was given¹². The registration order must state the name and address for service of the person who applied for registration, and must exhibit a copy of the registered Community judgment and a copy of the order for its enforcement¹³. In the case of a Community judgment which is a money judgment, the registration order must also state the right of the judgment debtor to apply within 28 days for the variation or cancellation of the registration¹⁴. An application to vary or cancel the registration of a Community judgment which is a money judgment on the ground that at the date of registration the judgment had been partly or wholly satisfied must be made within 28 days of the date on which the registration order was served on the judgment debtor¹⁵ and must be supported by written evidence¹⁶. No steps may be taken to enforce a Community judgment which is a money judgment before the end of that 28-day period or, where an application is made for its variation or cancellation as described above, until the application has been determined¹⁷.

For the purposes of execution¹⁸ a registered Community judgment is of the same force and effect as if the judgment had been a High Court judgment given or made on the date of registration, and proceedings may be taken on it, and any sum payable under it carries interest, accordingly¹⁹.

The provisions set out above²⁰ which apply to the registration of a Community judgment also apply to the registration of a Euratom inspection order²¹ but with the necessary modifications²². An application to give effect to a Euratom inspection order may be made on written evidence²³.

Where the matter is urgent it may be made without notice²⁴ and otherwise it may be made by claim form²⁵. Upon registration of a Euratom inspection order the High Court may make such order as it thinks fit against any person for the purpose of ensuring that effect is given to the registered order²⁶.

Enforcement of a Community judgment may be suspended only by a decision of the ECJ²⁷. Where the ECJ has made an order that the enforcement of a registered Community judgment should be suspended, an application for the registration of that order in the High Court, which may be made without notice²⁸, is made by filing²⁹ a copy of the order in the Central Office of the Supreme Court³⁰. The order must then be registered forthwith, whereupon it is of the same effect as if it had been a High Court order made on the date of its registration staying the execution of the judgment for the same period and on the same conditions as are stated in the ECJ order, and no steps may be taken to enforce the judgment while the order remains in force³¹.

1 'Community judgment' means any decision, judgment or order which is enforceable under or in accordance with the relevant provisions of the EC Treaty, the Euratom Treaty, the ECSC Treaty, EC Council Regulation 40/94 (OJ L11, 14.01.1994, p 1) (regulation of 20 December 1993 on the Community trade mark) or EC Council Regulation 6/2002 (OJ L3, 5.1.2002, p 1) art 71 (regulation of 12 December 2001 on Community designs): see the European Communities (Enforcement of Community Judgments) Order 1972, SI 1972/1590, art 2(1) (amended by SI 1998/1259; and SI 2003/3204). Where, after the date of registration of a Community judgment under which a sum of money is payable, it is shown that at that date the judgment had been partly or wholly satisfied, the registration must be varied or cancelled accordingly with effect from that date: art 3(5).

6 'Community judgment' means any judgment, decision or order which is enforceable under (1) the EC Treaty art 244 or art 256; (2) the Euratom Treaty art 18, art 159 or art 164; (3) the ECSC Treaty art 44 or art 92; (4) EC Council Regulation 40/94 (OJ L11, 14.01.1994, p 1) art 82; (5) EC Council Regulation 6/2002 (OJ L3, 5.1.2002, p 1) art 71: CPR 74.19(a).

1233. Reciprocal enforcement of judgments.

Provision is made for the reciprocal enforcement of judgments in member states of the European Union and for the reciprocal enforcement of Commonwealth and certain foreign judgments¹. These provisions are considered in detail elsewhere in this work².

1234. Claim on an order.

An order to pay a definite sum of money may be enforced by a claim in the same manner as a judgment¹, but if the amount ordered to be paid can be obtained by execution it is an abuse of the process of the court to proceed by claim, and the claimant runs the risk of having his claim stayed and having to pay all the costs occasioned by its being brought².

An undertaking to the court to pay money to another party does not have the same effect as an order to pay; it does not confer any personal right or remedy on any other party unless the circumstances in which it was given were such that a collateral obligation to a party was created³.

Where it is desired to enforce by bankruptcy notice an order which is not a final order, a claim must be brought upon the order⁴.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/B. JURISDICTION/1235. Jurisdiction must be exercised in accordance with Convention rights.

1235. Jurisdiction must be exercised in accordance with Convention rights.

Under the Human Rights Act 1998, it is unlawful for a court or tribunal to act in a way which is incompatible with a Convention right¹. The following Convention rights are particularly relevant in the context of the enforcement of judgments and orders:

- 862 (1) everyone has the right to liberty and security of person; no one is to be deprived of his liberty save in the permitted cases which include the lawful arrest or detention of a person for non-compliance with the lawful order of a court or in order to secure the fulfilment of any obligation prescribed by law² and in accordance with a procedure prescribed by law³;
- 863 (2) everyone who is deprived of his liberty by arrest or detention is entitled to take proceedings by which the lawfulness of his detention is to be decided speedily by a court and his release ordered if the detention is not lawful⁴;
- 864 (3) in the determination of his civil rights and obligations or of any criminal charge against him, everyone is entitled to a fair and public hearing within a reasonable time by an independent and impartial tribunal established by law⁵;
- 865 (4) everyone charged with a criminal offence must be presumed innocent until proved guilty according to law⁶ and has certain minimum rights⁷;
- 866 (5) everyone has the right to respect for his private and family life, his home and his correspondence⁸; there must be no interference by a public authority with the exercise of this right except such as is in accordance with the law and is necessary in a democratic society for, inter alia, the protection of the rights and freedoms of others⁹;
- 867 (6) every natural or legal person is entitled to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions and no one must be deprived of his possessions except in the public interest and subject to the conditions provided for by law and by the general principles of international law¹⁰.

The rights set out in heads (1), (2) and (3) above normally come into play when the judgment or order is made rather than on its enforcement¹¹ but are particularly relevant in the context of imprisonment for contempt of court where a person has disobeyed a judgment or order¹². Further, it is now settled law that both imprisonment for contempt and imprisonment under the Debtors Act 1869 fall under head (4) above so that the standard of proof required is proof beyond reasonable doubt¹³. The rights under head (5) above may be particularly relevant in the context of enforcement proceedings (including possession proceedings) affecting the family home but have also been considered in the context of committal¹⁴ while the rights set out under head (6) above may be relevant both in the context of execution against a debtor's property¹⁵ and in the context of undue delay in executing a possession order¹⁶.

For these purposes, a home is not limited to a property that is lawfully occupied or a home that is lawfully established. Rather, 'home' is an autonomous concept that does not depend on the introduction of domestic legal concepts. Whilst it is clearly inherent in the definition of a home that an individual has to be in actual residence, whether an individual has a legitimate proprietary or contractual interest in the property forms no part of the test: Harrow London Borough Council v Qazi [2001] EWCA Civ 1834, [2002] HLR 276, [2001] All ER (D) 16 (Dec).

See further LANDLORD AND TENANT.

In the context of insolvency legislation, it has been held that there must be a balancing exercise between the rights of the bankrupt and the rights of the creditors; that balancing exercise is to be found in the Insolvency Act 1986 s 335A which provides that where an application is made for the sale of a property after the end of the period of one year from the date when it first vested in the trustee, then unless the circumstances of the case are exceptional, the court is to assume that the interests of the creditors outweigh all other considerations; an order for sale in such circumstances was not a breach of the bankrupt's or his daughter's human rights: see Karia v Franses [2001] All ER (D) 161 (Nov). See further BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY.

In the context of committal by a magistrates' court, it has been held that committal of a single mother for non-payment of instalments due on various fines and compensation orders was a disproportionate interference with her children's right to family life under the Human Rights Act 1998 Sch 1 Pt I art 8: see R (on the application of Stokes) v Gwent Magistrates' Court [2001] EWHC Admin 569, [2001] All ER (D) 125 (Jul). ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/C. PARTIES TO ENFORCEMENT/1236. Meaning of 'judgment creditor' and 'judgment debtor'.

C. PARTIES TO ENFORCEMENT

1236. Meaning of 'judgment creditor' and 'judgment debtor'.

For the purposes of Parts 70 to 73 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')¹, 'judgment creditor' means a person who has obtained or is entitled to enforce a judgment or order² and 'judgment debtor' means a person against whom a judgment or order was given or made³. The like meaning is given to these terms for the purposes of Orders 25 to 29 of the preserved and amended County Court Rules ('CCR')⁴ contained in Schedule 2 to the CPR⁵.

1 Ie CPR Pts 70-73.

2 As to the meaning of 'judgment or order' see PARA 1226.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/C. PARTIES TO ENFORCEMENT/1237. Enforcement by or against a non-party.

1237. Enforcement by or against a non-party.

If a judgment or order¹ is given or made in favour of or against a person who is not a party to proceedings², it may be enforced by or against that person by the same methods as if he were a party³.

1 As to the meaning of 'judgment or order' see PARA 1226.

2 As to parties to proceedings see generally PARA 207 et seq.

3 CPR 70.4. As to methods of enforcement see PARA 1244 et seq.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/C. PARTIES TO ENFORCEMENT/1238. Enforcement against companies and other incorporated bodies.

1238. Enforcement against companies and other incorporated bodies.

Speaking generally, judgments and orders for the payment of money or for the giving of possession of land against incorporated bodies, whether public or private, are enforced in the same manner as against individuals¹, and their real or personal property may be taken in execution².

In the case of wilful disobedience to a judgment or order against a corporation, its property is liable to sequestration³ and its directors or officers and their property are liable to committal and sequestration respectively⁴. In certain circumstances a liquidator may bring proceedings against shareholders to the extent of unpaid share capital⁵, but except in these cases no execution can be issued against a member under a judgment or order against the company⁶. A judgment or order against a company may also entitle the judgment creditor to bring a winding-up petition⁷. Where a company is wound up an execution creditor may not retain the benefit of his execution unless it was completed before the winding up⁸. Execution issued after the commencement of a winding up is void⁹.

1 Although the CPR do not expressly so provide, the Interpretation Act 1978 applies to their interpretation: see s 23; and STATUTES vol 44(1) (Reissue) PARA 1522. 'Person' includes any body of persons corporate or unincorporate: Interpretation Act 1978 Sch 1, Sch 2 para 4(1).

3 See CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 5(1)(b)(i); and PARA 1249.

4 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 5(1)(b)(ii), (iii): see PARA 1249.

5 See COMPANIES vol 14 (2009) PARA 310. In a winding up where a contributory or other person from whom money is due to a company has been ordered to pay the amount into the Bank of England to the account of the liquidator instead of to the liquidator, and it is desired to enforce the order by a writ of fieri facias, the liquidator must obtain an order for the payment to himself of the sum in question: see Re Leeds Banking Co (1866) 1 Ch App 150; and see the Insolvency Act 1986 s 151; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 677.

6 This is because there is no privity between the judgment creditor and the individual shareholder.

7 As to winding up see COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(3) (2004 Reissue) PARA 1 et seq.

8 See COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 882. As to the enforcement officer's duty to retain the proceeds of execution for 14 days and subsequently if he has notice of a meeting to propose winding up or of a winding-up petition see PARA 1354.

9 See the Insolvency Act 1986 s 128(1); and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 888.

1239. Enforcement by or against the Crown.

An order¹ in favour of the Crown in any civil proceedings to which the Crown² is a party³ may be enforced in the same manner as between subjects⁴ and not otherwise⁵.

Arrest and imprisonment for debt were abolished in 1947 in regard to sums of money payable and debts due to the Crown as for debts due to subjects⁶, but the power of the county courts to commit in respect of default in the payment of certain judgment debts due to the Crown was preserved⁷.

The Civil Procedure Rules and their practice directions now apply to civil proceedings by or against the Crown⁸ and to other civil proceedings to which the Crown is a party⁹ unless a rule, a practice direction or any other enactment provides otherwise¹⁰. None of the ordinary rules about enforcement¹¹ applies in respect of any order against the Crown¹². A special procedure is prescribed for the enforcement of such orders¹³. Where in any civil proceedings by or against the Crown, or in any proceedings in the Administrative Court or in connection with an arbitration to which the Crown is a party, an order (including an order for costs) is made in favour of any person against the Crown or against a government department or an officer of the Crown as such¹⁴, the court officer will on the application of that person at any time after the expiration of 21 days from the order issue a certificate in the prescribed¹⁵ form¹⁶ containing particulars of the judgment¹⁷. A copy of the certificate may then be served by the applicant on the person named on the record as the solicitor or the person acting as solicitor for the Crown or for the department or officer¹⁸. If the order provides for the payment of any money by way of damages or otherwise, or of any costs, the certificate must state the amount so payable and the appropriate government department must, unless payment is ordered to be suspended pending an appeal or otherwise¹⁹, pay to the person entitled or his solicitor the amount appearing to be due to him together with interest, if any²⁰.

Apart from what has been stated above, no execution or attachment or process in the nature thereof can be issued against the Crown²¹, and no person is individually liable under any order for payment by the Crown, or any government department or any officer of the Crown as such, of any such money or costs²². Similarly, the normal procedures for third party debt orders²³, the appointment of a sequestrator²⁴ or the appointment of a receiver²⁵ are not available for debts due from the Crown²⁶; but alternative procedures are available²⁷.

1 'Order' includes judgment, decree, rule, award or declaration: Crown Proceedings Act 1947 s 38(2).

2 The Crown Proceedings Act 1947 does not apply to proceedings by or against Her Majesty in her private capacity or in right of her Duchy of Lancaster or by or against the Duke of Cornwall: see CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 103.

3 In the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 Pt III (ss 24-27) (judgments and execution) and Pt IV (ss 28-40) (miscellaneous and supplemental matters), references to civil proceedings to which the Crown is a party or to civil proceedings by or against the Crown are to be construed as including a reference to civil proceedings to which the Attorney General or any government department or any officer of the Crown as such is a party (s 38(4)), although the Crown is not deemed to be a party to any proceedings by reason only that they are brought by the Attorney General upon the relation of some other person (s 38(4) proviso). As to the meaning of 'civil proceedings by or against the Crown' see generally CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 103.

4 In general, enactments and rules relating to stay of execution apply to proceedings by or against the Crown in the same manner as to proceedings between subjects: see the Crown Proceedings Act 1947 s 22; and CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 137. As to methods of enforcement see generally PARA 1244 et seq; and as to stay of execution see PARA 1357 et seq.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) General Rules about Enforcement/C. PARTIES TO ENFORCEMENT/1240. Enforcement against personal representatives.

1240. Enforcement against personal representatives.

A money judgment in respect of goods of a testator or intestate¹ which come into the hands of the personal representative after the date of the judgment can, in the first instance, only be enforced by the issue of execution² against those goods of the deceased³. If the relevant enforcement officer indorses the writ with a statement that there are no goods available to satisfy the execution⁴, the claimant may bring proceedings against the personal representative alleging that he has mismanaged the deceased's estate⁵; if the claimant is successful he will obtain a judgment which can be enforced against the personal representative's own property⁶. A judgment against the personal representative who has not pleaded that he has fully administered the estate, or fully administered it except for certain assets⁷, amounts to an admission of assets⁸, and, if such a judgment is followed by a return that there are no goods available to satisfy the execution, there is in relation to the claim which formed the subject matter of the judgment a rebuttable presumption that the personal representative has mismanaged the deceased's estate⁹.

² As to execution see PARA 1265 et seq.

Where a person liable to satisfy the judgment or order, or to pay the rent or another debt, or to perform the obligation, in question is for the time being performing a period of relevant service¹, or was performing such a period of relevant service while an application was made to the appropriate court² for leave to exercise a right or remedy mentioned below³, and in certain other circumstances⁴, no person is entitled⁵ except with the leave of the appropriate court:

- 868 (1) to proceed to execution on, or otherwise to the enforcement of, a judgment or order of any court other than a county court⁶ for the payment or recovery of a sum of money⁷;
- 869 (2) to proceed to exercise any remedy which is available to him by way of the levying of distress, the taking of possession of any property, the appointment of a receiver of any property, re-entry upon land, the realisation of a security or the forfeiture of a deposit⁸;
- 870 (3) to institute proceedings for foreclosure or for sale in lieu of foreclosure, or for the recovery of possession of mortgaged property, or to take any step in any such proceedings instituted before the relevant date⁹;
- 871 (4) to proceed to execution on, or otherwise to the enforcement of, a judgment or order of any court¹⁰ for the recovery of possession of land in default of payment of rent or for the delivery of any property other than mortgaged property by reason of a default in the payment of money¹¹.

These statutory restrictions are subject to a number of exceptions¹².

The procedure for making an application for enforcement under these provisions, and the effect of failure to observe the restrictions set out above, are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work¹³.

1 For these purposes, 'relevant service' means service after 15 July 1951 of a description specified in the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951 Sch 1: s 64(1). See also the Army Act 1992 s 2; and see further ARMED FORCES.

Subject to certain limited exceptions, the normal enforcement procedures do not apply against a foreign sovereign or a person subject to diplomatic immunity¹, unless the privilege has been waived².

If judgment is obtained against a defendant under a mental disability, a stay of execution may be granted³ to enable an application to be made by the receiver of the income to the Court of Protection for leave to pay the amount of the judgment debt out of the patient's estate⁴. When a charging order is obtained⁵ against the property of a mentally disordered person, the court has no power to make an order providing that the amount to be charged shall be determined by a judge of the Court of Protection, for the judgment creditor is entitled to an unconditional order⁶. Mental incapacity is no bar to being made bankrupt⁷.

All property belonging to a trade union, other than a special register body⁸, must be vested in trustees in trust for it; and a judgment, order or award made in proceedings of any description brought against a trade union is enforceable, by way of execution⁹, punishment for contempt¹⁰ or otherwise, against any property held in trust for it to the same extent and in the same manner as if it were a body corporate¹¹.

The rights and liabilities of the judgment creditor or judgment debtor (except a merely personal liability) may, by reason of alienation, bankruptcy or death, devolve upon some other person¹, who may then issue, or be the subject of, an enforcement process². Where, following a change in the parties entitled or liable to execution, enforcement is sought by means of a writ or warrant of execution, the permission of the court is required³. In such circumstances enforcement by the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution is unavailable⁴, as is enforcement by a charging order⁵, unless an order for the substitution of the parties is made under Part 19 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁶.

1 It is not necessary for the trustee in bankruptcy of a judgment creditor to be made a party before leave will be given to him to issue execution: Re Bagley [1911] 1 KB 317, CA, overruling on that point Re Clements, ex p Clements [1901] 1 KB 260. (iii) Methods of Enforcement; in general

1244. Judgment creditor's choice of enforcement method.

A judgment creditor¹ may, except where an enactment, rule or practice direction provides otherwise, use any method of enforcement which is available and use more than one method of enforcement, either at the same time or one after another². The relevant practice direction sets out methods of enforcing judgments or orders for the payment of money³.

Certain enforcement methods require the filing of a formal request; these are implemented administratively and as of right⁴. Other methods require the permission of the court⁵.

1245. Methods of enforcing money judgments.

A judgment creditor¹ may enforce a judgment or order for the payment of money² by any of the following methods:

- 872 (1) a writ of fieri facias³ or warrant of execution⁴;
- 873 (2) a third party debt order⁵;
- 874 (3) a charging order⁶, stop order⁷ or stop notice⁸;
- 875 (4) in a county court, an attachment of earnings order⁹;
- 876 (5) the appointment of a receiver¹⁰.

In addition the court¹¹ may make the following orders against a judgment debtor¹²:

- 877 (a) an order of committal¹³, but only if permitted by a rule¹⁴ and by the Debtors Acts 1869 and 1878¹⁵; and
- 878 (b) in the High Court, a writ of sequestration¹⁶, but only if permitted by the relevant rule¹⁷.

The enforcement of a judgment or order may be affected by the enactments relating to insolvency¹⁸ and county court administration orders¹⁹.

A freezing order (formerly known as a 'Mareva injunction') may be granted at any stage in the proceedings, including after judgment, where there is a risk that assets may be dissipated, since the purpose of such an order is to ensure that the orders of the court are effectively enforced²⁰.

8 Nothing in CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 26 r 17 prejudices any power to enforce a judgment or order for the recovery of land by an order of committal: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 26 r 18. Every order for possession does not, however, routinely have a penal notice attached; the normal way to enforce a possession order is by requesting and obtaining the issue of a warrant of possession and if the last resort of a contempt application appears necessary it is normally more appropriate for this to be based primarily on the defendant's obstruction of the bailiff when executing the warrant: see Bell v Tuohy [2002] EWCA Civ 423, [2002] 3 All ER 975, [2002] All ER (D) 449 (Mar).

1248. Enforcement of judgment for delivery of goods.

In the High Court, a judgment or order¹ for the delivery of any goods which does not give a person against whom the judgment is given or order made the alternative of paying the assessed value of the goods may be enforced² by one or more of the following means: (1) writ of delivery³ to recover the goods without alternative provision for recovery of their assessed value (a 'writ of specific delivery')⁴; (2) in certain cases⁵, an order of committal⁶ or writ of sequestration⁷. A judgment or order for the delivery of any goods or payment of their assessed value may be enforced⁸ by one or more of the following means: (a) writ of delivery to recover the goods or their assessed value; (b) by order of the court⁹, writ of specific delivery; (c) in certain cases¹⁰, writ of sequestration¹¹.

A judgment or order for the payment of the assessed value of any goods may be enforced by the same means as any other judgment or order for the payment of money¹².

In county courts, except where an Act or rule of court provides otherwise, a judgment or order for the delivery of any goods is enforceable by warrant of delivery¹³. If the judgment or order does not give the person against whom it was given or made the alternative of paying the value of the goods, it may be enforced by a warrant of specific delivery, that is to say, a warrant to recover the goods without alternative provision for recovery of their value¹⁴. If the judgment or order is for the delivery of the goods or payment of their value, it may be enforced by a warrant of delivery to recover the goods or their value¹⁵. Nothing in these provisions prejudices any power to enforce a judgment or order for the delivery of goods by an order of committal¹⁶.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(iii) Methods of Enforcement; in general/1249. Enforcement of judgment to do or abstain from doing any act.

1249. Enforcement of judgment to do or abstain from doing any act.

In the High Court, where (1) a person required by a judgment or order¹ to do an act within a time specified in the judgment or order² refuses or neglects to do it within that time or, as the case may be, within that time as extended or abridged under a court order or by the written agreement of the parties³; or (2) a person disobeys a judgment or order requiring him to abstain from doing an act, then the judgment or order may be enforced⁴ by one or more of the following means: (a) with the permission of the court⁵, a writ of sequestration⁶ against the property of that person; (b) where that person is a body corporate, a writ of sequestration against the property of any director or other officer of the body, but only with the permission of the court; (c) subject to the provisions of the Debtors Acts 1869 and 1878⁷, an order of committal⁸ against that person or, where that person is a body corporate, against any such officer⁹.

Where under any judgment or order requiring the delivery of any goods the person liable to execution¹⁰ has the alternative of paying the assessed value of the goods, the judgment or order is not enforceable by order of committal under the above provisions but the court may, on the application of the person entitled to enforce the judgment or order, make an order requiring the first mentioned person to deliver the goods to the applicant within a time specified in the order, and that order may be so enforced¹¹.

An order¹² is not to be enforced¹³ under these provisions unless a copy of the order has been served personally¹⁴ on the person required to do or abstain from doing the act in question and, in the case of an order requiring a person to do an act, the copy has been so served before the expiration of the time within which he was required to do the act¹⁵. Further, an order requiring a body corporate to do or abstain from doing an act is not to be enforced¹⁶ as mentioned in head (b) or head (c) above unless a copy of the order has also been served personally on the officer against whose property permission is sought to issue a writ of sequestration or against whom an order of committal is sought and, in the case of an order requiring the body corporate to do an act, the copy has been so served before the expiration of the time within which the body was required to do the act¹⁷. There must be prominently displayed on the front of the copy of an order served under these provisions a warning to the person on whom the copy is served that disobedience to the order would be a contempt of court punishable by imprisonment, or (in the case of an order requiring a body corporate to do or abstain from doing an act) punishable by sequestration of the assets of the body corporate and by imprisonment of any individual responsible¹⁸. With the copy of an order required to be served under these provisions, being an order requiring a person to do an act, there must also be served a copy of any order or agreement¹⁹ extending or abridging the time for doing the act²⁰. The court may dispense with service of a copy of an order under these provisions if it thinks it just to do so²¹.

An order requiring a person to abstain from doing an act may be enforced²² notwithstanding that service of a copy of the order has not been effected²³ if the court is satisfied that pending such service, the person against whom or against whose property it is sought to enforce the order has had notice of it either by being present when the order was made or by being notified of the terms of the order, whether by telephone, telegram or otherwise²⁴.

If a mandatory order²⁵, an injunction²⁶ or a judgment or order for the specific performance of a contract²⁷ is not complied with, then, without prejudice to its powers to nominate a person to execute a document or indorse a negotiable instrument²⁸ and its powers to punish the disobedient party for contempt²⁹, the court may direct that the act required to be done may, so far as practicable, be done by the party by whom the order or judgment was obtained or some other person appointed by the court, at the cost of the disobedient party, and upon the act being done the expenses incurred may be ascertained in such manner as the court may direct and execution may issue against the disobedient party for the amount so ascertained and for costs³⁰.

In county courts, where a person required by a judgment or order to do an act refuses or neglects to do it within the time fixed by the judgment or order or any subsequent order, or where a person disobeys a judgment or order requiring him to abstain from doing an act, then, subject to the Debtors Acts 1869 and 1878³¹ and to the provisions of the relevant rules³², the judgment or order may be enforced, by order of the judge, by a committal order against that person or, if that person is a body corporate, against any director or other officer of the body³³.

1 As to the meaning of 'judgment or order' see PARA 1226. See also note 2.

2 Notwithstanding that a judgment or order requiring a person to do an act specifies a time within which the act is to be done, the court has power to make an order requiring the act to be done within another time, being such time after service of that order, or such other time, as may be specified therein: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 6(1). Where a judgment or order requiring a person to do an act does not specify a time within which the act is to be done, the court has power subsequently to make an order requiring the act to be done within such time after service of that order, or such other time, as may be specified therein: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 6(2). An application for an order under this provision must be made in accordance with CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq) and the application notice must be served on the person required to do the act in question: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 6(3). Where a judgment or order requires a person to do an act within a time therein specified and an order is subsequently made under CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 6 requiring the act to be done within some other time, references in CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 5(1) (see the text and notes 1, 3-9) to a judgment or order are to be construed as references to the order made under CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 6: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 5(2). Where a judgment or order enforceable by committal order under r 1(1) has been given or made, the court officer must, if the judgment or order is in the nature of an injunction, at the time when the judgment or order is drawn up, and in any other case on the request of the judgment creditor, issue a copy of the judgment or order, indorsed with or incorporating a notice as to the consequences of disobedience, for service in accordance with r 1(2); CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29 r 1(3). Without prejudice to its powers under CPR Pt 6 (see PARA 138 et seq), the court may dispense with service of a copy of a judgment or order under CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29 r 1(2) if the court thinks it just to do so: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29 r 1(7). Further, a judgment or order requiring a person to abstain from doing an act may be enforced under r 1(1) notwithstanding that service of a copy of the judgment or order has not been effected in accordance with r 1(2) if the judge is satisfied that, pending such service, the person against whom it is sought to enforce the judgment or order has had notice of the judgment or order either (a) by being present when the judgment or order was given or made; or (b) by being notified of the terms of the judgment or order whether by telephone, fax, e-mail or otherwise: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29 r 1(6). A warrant of committal may not, without further order of the court, be enforced more than two years after the date on which the warrant is issued: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29 r 1(5A). 1249 Enforcement of judgment to do or abstain from doing any act

NOTE 2--A failure to specify the time renders the order unenforceable: R (on the application of Bates) v Chief Constable of Avon and Somerset Constabulary (2009) Times, 21 July, DC.

1250. Registration of writs and orders affecting land.

A writ or order affecting land¹, and issued for the purpose of enforcing a judgment², should be registered³ or, if the title to the land is registered, should be protected by a notice or restriction in the register⁴. In general, failure to register as a land charge renders the writ or order void against a purchaser, including a mortgagee, of the land for valuable consideration⁵. A purchaser in good faith and for valuable consideration who acquires title under a registered disposition is not, in general, concerned with any writ or order which is not protected by a notice or restriction⁶.

These provisions are considered in detail elsewhere in this work⁷.

2 'Judgment' includes any order or decree having the effect of a judgment: Land Charges Act 1972 s 17(1); and see the Land Registration Act 2002 s 87(1). As to proceedings by the Crown see CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE.

(iv) Orders to Obtain Information from Judgment Debtors

1251. In general.

Part 71 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹ contains rules which provide for a judgment debtor² to be required to attend court³ to provide information, for the purpose of enabling a judgment creditor⁴ to enforce a judgment or order⁵ against him⁶. Such orders were previously known as orders for the examination of judgment debtors⁷.

1252. Order to attend court.

A judgment creditor¹ may apply for an order requiring a judgment debtor² or, if a judgment debtor is a company or other corporation, an officer of that body, to attend court to provide information about the judgment debtor's means or any other matter about which information is needed to enforce a judgment or order³. Such an application, which must be made by filing⁴ an application notice in the prescribed form⁵, may be made without notice⁶ and must be issued in the court which made the judgment or order which it is sought to enforce, except that if the proceedings have since been transferred to a different court, it must be issued in that court⁷.

The application notice must be in the form and contain the information required by the relevant practice direction⁸. It must:

- 881 (1) state the name and address of the judgment debtor;
- 882 (2) identify the judgment or order which the judgment creditor is seeking to enforce;
- 883 (3) if the application is to enforce a judgment or order for the payment of money⁹, state the amount presently owed by the judgment debtor under the judgment or order;
- 884 (4) if the judgment debtor is a company or other corporation, state the name and address of the officer of that body whom the judgment creditor wishes to be ordered to attend court and his position in the company;
- 885 (5) if the judgment creditor wishes the questioning to be conducted before a judge¹⁰, state this and give his reasons;
- 886 (6) if the judgment creditor wishes the judgment debtor (or other person to be questioned) to be ordered to produce specific documents at court, identify those documents; and
- 887 (7) if the application is to enforce a judgment or order which is not for the payment of money, identify the matters about which the judgment creditor wishes the judgment debtor (or officer of the judgment debtor) to be questioned¹¹.

The application may be dealt with by a court officer¹² without a hearing¹³. In any appropriate case, however, the court officer considering the application notice may refer it to a judge¹⁴ and the officer will refer it to a judge for consideration if the judgment creditor requests the judgment debtor (or officer of the judgment debtor) to be questioned before a judge¹⁵.

If the application notice complies with the requirements set out above, an order to attend court will be issued¹⁶. The order will provide for the judgment debtor (or other person to be questioned) to attend the county court for the district in which he resides or carries on business, unless a judge decides otherwise¹⁷. Such an order will contain a notice in the following terms: 'You must obey this order. If you do not, you may be sent to prison for contempt of court.'¹⁸

A person served¹⁹ with an order issued under these provisions must attend court at the time and place specified in the order²⁰. When he does so, he must produce at court documents in his control which are described in the order²¹ and must answer on oath such questions as the court may require²².

1256. Conduct of the hearing.

The person ordered to attend court¹ will be questioned on oath². The questioning will be carried out by a court officer³ unless the court⁴ has ordered that the hearing is to be before a judge⁵.

The court officer will ask a standard series of questions⁶. The judgment creditor⁷ or his representative may either attend court and ask questions himself⁸ or request the court officer to ask additional questions, by attaching a list of proposed additional questions to his application notice⁹. The court officer will make a written record of the evidence given, unless the proceedings are tape recorded¹⁰. At the end of the questioning, he will read the record of evidence to the person being questioned and ask him to sign it¹¹ and if the person refuses to sign it, note that refusal on the record of evidence¹².

Where the hearing takes place before a judge, the judgment creditor must attend¹³. The questioning will be conducted by the judgment creditor or his representative¹⁴, and the standard questions will not be used¹⁵. The proceedings will be tape recorded and the court will not make a written record of the evidence¹⁶.

If the hearing is adjourned¹⁷, the court will give directions as to the manner in which notice of the new hearing is to be served¹⁸ on the judgment debtor¹⁹.

1257. Failure to comply with order.

If a person against whom an order to attend court has been made¹ fails to attend court, refuses at the hearing to take the oath² or to answer any question or otherwise fails to comply with the order, the court³ will refer the matter to a High Court judge⁴ or circuit judge⁵. The judge⁶ or court officer⁷ referring the matter must certify in writing the respect in which the judgment debtor⁸ failed to comply with the order⁹.

The High Court judge or circuit judge to whom the matter is referred may¹⁰ make a committal order¹¹ against the person¹²; but such an order may not be made unless the judgment creditor¹³ has complied with the rules relating to the payment of travelling expenses¹⁴ and the filing of an affidavit¹⁵ or affidavits¹⁶.

If a committal order is made, the judge will direct that the order is to be suspended provided that the person attends court at a time and place specified in the order¹⁷ and complies with all the terms of that order and the original order¹⁸. If the person fails to comply with any term on which the committal order is suspended¹⁹, he must be brought before a judge²⁰ to consider whether the committal order should be discharged²¹. At the hearing the judge will discharge the committal order unless he is satisfied beyond reasonable doubt²² that the judgment debtor has failed to comply with the original order to attend court and the terms on which the committal order was suspended and that both orders have been duly served²³ on the judgment debtor²⁴. If the judge decides that the committal order should not be discharged, a warrant of committal²⁵ must be issued immediately²⁶.

(v) Enforcement Agents; in general

1258. Enforcement officers and district judges.

The functions of enforcement officers¹ in relation to enforcement of High Court judgments and orders, which are concerned solely with the execution of writs of execution² and warrants³, are discussed in detail below and elsewhere where relevant in this work. The relevant officer⁴ has in relation to writs directed to⁵, and warrants issued to⁶, one or more enforcement officers the duties, powers, rights, privileges and liabilities that a sheriff of a county would have had at common law if the writ had been directed to him or the warrant had been issued to him and the district in which it is to be executed had been within his county⁷. Any rule of law requiring a writ of execution issued from the High Court to be directed to a sheriff has been abolished⁸.

In relation to county courts, every district judge⁹ is responsible for the acts and defaults of himself and of the bailiffs appointed to assist him¹⁰ in like manner as the sheriff of any county in England and Wales is responsible for the acts and defaults of himself and his officers¹¹. In the County Courts Act 1984 'bailiff', unless (as in this paragraph) the context otherwise requires, includes a district judge¹².

At one time every county court had a high bailiff whose duties were, by himself or by the bailiffs appointed to assist him, to serve all process and execute all warrants issued out of the court, except where otherwise specially provided. No appointment has been made to this office since 1924 and no further appointments may now be made¹³. References to a high bailiff in any enactment, Order in Council, order, rule, regulation or any document must be construed as references to a district judge¹⁴.

A district judge, where he neglects to levy execution, is liable to a claim for damages at common law in the same manner as a enforcement officer is liable¹⁵.

1 An enforcement officer is an individual who is authorised to act as such by the Lord Chancellor or a person acting on his behalf: Courts Act 2003 s 99(1), Sch 7 para 2(1). England and Wales are to be divided into districts for the purposes of Sch 7: Sch 7 para 1(1). The districts are to be those specified in regulations made under Sch 7 para 12: Sch 7 para 1(2). The Lord Chancellor or a person acting on his behalf must assign at least one enforcement officer to each district: Sch 7 para 2(2). The Lord Chancellor or a person acting on his behalf may assign an enforcement officer to more than one district, and change any assignment of an enforcement officer so that he is assigned to a different district or to different districts: Sch 7 para 2(3). As to regulations made under Sch 7 para 12 see the High Court Enforcement Officers Regulations 2004, SI 2004/400 (amended by SI 2004/673).

4 'Relevant officer' means (1) in relation to a writ (a) if the writ is directed to a single enforcement officer under the Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 3(1)(a) or (c), that officer; (b) if the writ is directed to two or more enforcement officers collectively under Sch 7 para 3(1)(b), the officer to whom, in accordance with approved arrangements, the execution of the writ is allocated; (2) in relation to a warrant (a) if the warrant is issued to a single enforcement officer in accordance with Sch 7 para 3A(2)(a) or (b), that officer; (b) if the warrant is issued to two or more enforcement officers collectively in accordance with Sch 7 para 3A(2)(a), the officer to whom, in accordance with approved arrangements, the execution of the warrant is allocated: Sch 7 para 4(3) (substituted by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 140(1), (3), (6)). These provisions apply to a person acting under the authority of the relevant officer as they apply to the relevant officer: Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 4(4) (substituted by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 140(7)). 1259. Tipstaffs, bailiffs etc.

In the High Court, an order of committal¹ is executed by the tipstaff of the court under a warrant issued in pursuance of the order². Although the enforcement officer to whom a writ of execution³ is addressed is responsible for its enforcement⁴, it is actually executed by officers called bailiffs, whose authority is a warrant addressed to them by name by the enforcement officer⁵. The form of the warrant usually follows that of the writ, but a variance between the writ and the warrant does not render the enforcement officer liable for an illegal execution since, in any proceedings against him, he would and could only justify under the writ⁶. The warrant is usually addressed to the 'bound bailiffs' who have made a declaration under the Sheriffs Act 1887 and are bound to the enforcement officer in an obligation with sureties for the due execution of their office, and are his regular officers but, at the request of the judgment creditor, the warrant may be addressed to any other person, who will then be called a 'special bailiff', and for whose acts and defaults the judgment creditor, and not the enforcement officer, will be liable⁷.

In county courts, warrants are executed by bailiffs⁸ or other court officers⁹.

Where a county court bailiff employed to levy any execution against goods¹⁰ loses, by neglect, connivance or omission, the opportunity of levying the execution, any party aggrieved thereby may complain to the judge¹¹ of that court¹². On any such complaint the judge, if the neglect, connivance or omission is proved to his satisfaction, must order the bailiff to pay the damages sustained by the complainant, not exceeding in any case the sum for which the execution issued¹³.

Enforcement agents, including certificated bailiffs, may be employed by local authorities, government departments, landlords and other public and private sector bodies which are frequently judgment creditors in the civil courts or undertake distress for rent procedures¹. Private sector enforcement agents who are recovering debts owed to the public sector perform the vast majority of enforcement work². There are a number of professional associations which uphold standards and regulate the conduct of such agents³. The Association of Civil Enforcement Agencies⁴ and the Certificated Bailiffs Association⁵ operate non-statutory complaints and disciplinary procedures. The Lord Chancellor's Department recommends that enforcement agents should join an appropriate organisation relevant to their sphere of activity⁶.

1261. The National Standards for Enforcement Agents.

In May 2002 the Lord Chancellor's Department ('LCD', now the Ministry of Justice) produced the National Standards for Enforcement Agents with the aim of building on and improving existing good practice and raising the level of professionalism across the whole sector¹. The guidance is not legally binding and does not replace local agreements, existing agency codes of practice or legislation²; rather it sets out what the LCD, those in the industry and some major users regard as minimum standards³.

The specific guidance set out in the National Standards is referred to below⁴.

1 National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Introduction'. At the date at which this title states the law, the National Standards were available at www.dca.gov.uk.

2 In March 1998 the Lord Chancellor announced a review of the enforcement system. The remit of the review was broadened on 6 March 2001 to look at structures for, and regulation of, civil enforcement agents generally, not just those within the High Court and county courts. In July 2001 a Green Paper Towards Effective Enforcement was issued by the LCD and on 8 May 2002 the consultation report for the Green Paper was published. The accompanying press release stated that the majority of the proposals in the Green Paper required primary legislation and that the LCD intended to produce a White Paper early in 2003: see LCD Press Notice 158/02.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(v) Enforcement Agents; in general/1262. Statutory or financial requirements for enforcement agencies.

1262. Statutory or financial requirements for enforcement agencies.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents require enforcement agencies¹:

- 890 (1) to ensure that audited accounts are available on request, where it is appropriate that these are kept, having an annual audit of the agency's accounts by independent accountants undertaken at least once a year for businesses where this is appropriate²;
- 891 (2) to comply with the relevant statutory obligations³;
- 892 (3) to maintain a separate account for moneys due to the creditor⁴ and to keep accurate books and accounts and make these available to establish moneys owed to the creditor while keeping a complete record of all financial transactions in whatever capacity undertaken⁵;
- 893 (4) to maintain suitable and comprehensive insurance cover for both professional indemnity and other risks including employer's liability and public liability⁶.

1 For these purposes, 'enforcement agency' means the business that employs enforcement agents, unless specifically indicated where different arrangements exist, and includes those public sector organisations that have in-house enforcement agents; and 'enforcement agent' means someone who is responsible for the enforcement of court orders against goods (warrants of distress and execution) or the person (arrest warrants) and includes those employed in the public and private sector, bailiffs, sheriffs' officers and distrainers: National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Terms Used'. As to the national standards and their advisory status see PARA 1261. As to the issue of warrants of execution see PARAS 1283-1284; and as to when permission is required see PARA 1285. As to distress for rent see generally DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 905 et seq.

2 National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Statutory or Financial Requirements for Enforcement Agencies'. Separate provisions regarding financial accounting may apply to public sector organisations who directly employ their own enforcement agents: National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), endnote 1. As to local authority accounting procedures see LOCAL GOVERNMENT vol 29(1) (Reissue) PARA 628 et seq; and as to court funds see PARA 1548 et seq.

3 National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Statutory or Financial Requirements for Enforcement Agencies'. The statutory obligations referred to are eg those regarding companies legislation, value added tax, the Inland Revenue, data protection and health and safety: see generally COMPANIES; CONFIDENCE AND DATA PROTECTION; HEALTH AND SAFETY AT WORK; INCOME TAXATION; VALUE ADDED TAX. See also note 2.

4 For these purposes, where standards identify some responsibilities for creditors, 'creditor' includes a local authority, major or frequent judgment creditors in the civil courts (including government departments and magistrates' courts' committees to whom financial penalties are paid (to the Consolidated Fund)) and landlords seeking distress for rent procedures: National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Terms used'.

5 National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Statutory or Financial Requirements for Enforcement Agencies'. See also note 2.

6 National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Statutory or Financial Requirements for Enforcement Agencies'. Insurance requirements must actively be revisited each year to the satisfaction of the client and to ensure adequate and appropriate arrangements are in place: National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Statutory or Financial Requirements for Enforcement Agencies'. Separate provisions regarding insurance may apply to public sector organisations who directly employ their own enforcement agents: National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), endnote 1.

1263. Training and certification.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents require enforcement agencies¹ to ensure:

- 894 (1) that all agents², employees and contractors are provided with appropriate training to ensure that they understand and are able to act, at all times, within the bounds of the relevant legislation³;
- 895 (2) that all employees, contractors and agents will at all times act within the scope of current legislation⁴ and have an appropriate knowledge and understanding of it and will be aware of any statutory obligations and provide relevant training⁵;
- 896 (3) that in relation to distress for rent⁶, the legislation restricting the enforcement⁷ activity to certificated bailiffs⁸ is complied with⁹.

2 As to the meaning of 'enforcement agent' see PARA 1262 note 1.

3 National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Training and Certification'. This training must be provided at the commencement of employment and at intervals afterwards to ensure that the agent's knowledge is kept up to date. Professional training/assessment must be to an appropriate standard, eg to that of the NVQ for Civil Enforcement Officers, or membership of the Sheriffs' Officers' Association: National Standards for Enforcement Agents (May 2002, LCD), 'Training and Certification'. 1264. Complaints and discipline.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents require enforcement agencies¹:

897 (1) to operate complaints and disciplinary procedures with which agents² must be fully conversant³;

898 (2) to have a complaints procedure which is set out in plain English, has a main point of contact, sets time limits for dealing with complaints and includes an independent appeal process where appropriate, as well as maintaining a register to record all complaints⁴.

1265. Meaning of 'writ of execution'.

For the purposes of the rules relating to writs of execution¹, unless the context otherwise requires, 'writ of execution' includes a writ of fieri facias², a writ of possession³, a writ of delivery⁴, a writ of sequestration⁵ and any further writ in aid of any of the above-mentioned writs⁶.

Writs of restitution⁷ and writs of assistance⁸, which are now rarely used in practice, are writs in aid of execution.

¹ See for the purposes of CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 46: see PARA 1273 et seq. As to when execution is available to a judgment creditor see PARA 1245.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/A. HIGH COURT WRITS OF EXECUTION ETC/(A) Forms of Writ/1266. Writs of fieri facias.

1266. Writs of fieri facias.

A writ of fieri facias¹ (commonly known as 'fi fa') must be in such of the prescribed forms² as is appropriate in the particular case³. The writ is addressed to a named enforcement officer or to the enforcement officers assigned to a particular district⁴. The standard form of the writ informs the enforcement officer that a judgment or order has been made by the court as detailed in the schedule to the writ and commands him to seize in execution the goods, chattels and other property of the defendant authorised by law⁵ and to raise therefrom the sums detailed in the schedule to the writ, together with the fees and charges to which he is entitled⁶ and immediately after execution to pay those sums and interest to the appropriate person⁷. The writ also commands the enforcement officer to indorse on the writ immediately after execution a statement of the manner in which he has executed it and to send a copy of the statement to the claimant or defendant⁸. The writ is issued by the Central Office or a district registry of the High Court⁹.

As from a day to be appointed, writs of fieri facias (except writs of fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis) are to be renamed writs of control¹⁰.

1 As to the issue of writs of fieri facias see PARA 1273 et seq.

The forms of writ are as follows: Form 53 (writ of fieri facias); Form 54 (writ of fieri facias on order for costs: see PARA 1277); Form 56 (writ of fieri facias after levy of part); Form 57 (writ of fieri facias against personal representatives; as to enforcement against personal representatives see PARA 1240); Form 58 (writ of fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis (ie against ecclesiastical goods): see PARA 1272); Form 62 (writ of fieri facias to enforce a Northern Irish or Scottish judgment; as to reciprocal enforcement of judgments see PARA 1233; and see generally CONFLICT OF LAWS); and Form 63 (writ of fieri facias to enforce a foreign registered judgment; as to registration of foreign judgments see CONFLICT OF LAWS).

4 As to enforcement officers see PARA 1258; and as to the assignment of enforcement officers to districts see PARA 1258 note 1. In CPR Sch 1 RSC Ords 45-47, 'enforcement officer' means an individual who is authorised to act as an enforcement officer under the Courts Act 2003: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 45 r 1A(a).

5 As to seizure of goods in execution see PARA 1315 et seq.

6 As to the expenses of execution see PARAS 1368-1373. Where a judgment or order is for less than £600 and does not entitle the claimant to costs against the person against whom the writ of fieri facias to enforce the judgment or order is issued, the writ may not authorise the enforcement officer to whom it is directed to levy any fees, poundage or other costs of execution: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 47 r 4. As to the meaning of 'claimant' see PARA 18.

7 See Practice Direction--Forms PD 4 para 4, Table 2, Form 53. Payment will be made to the judgment creditor with any balance being paid to the defendant.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/A. HIGH COURT WRITS OF EXECUTION ETC/(A) Forms of Writ/1267. Writs of possession.

1267. Writs of possession.

A writ of possession¹ must be in one of the prescribed forms², whichever is appropriate³. The writ is addressed to a named enforcement officer or to the enforcement officers assigned to a particular district⁴. The writ, and any further writ in aid of the writ, may include provision for enforcing the payment of any money adjudged or ordered to be paid by the judgment or order which is to be enforced by the writ⁵.

The standard form of the writ informs the enforcement officer that a judgment or order has been made that the defendant⁶ is to give the claimant⁷ possession of the land detailed in the first schedule to the writ and commands him to enter the land and cause the claimant to have possession of it, and also to seize in execution the goods, chattels and other property of the defendant authorised by law⁸ and to raise therefrom the sums detailed in the second schedule to the writ, together with the fees and charges to which the enforcement officer is entitled⁹ and immediately after execution to pay those sums and interest to the appropriate person¹⁰. The writ also commands the enforcement officer to indorse on the writ immediately after execution a statement of the manner in which he has executed it and to send a copy of the statement to the claimant or defendant¹¹.

The form of writ to be used in summary proceedings for the possession of land¹² is in similar terms except that the instruction to seize goods, chattels and other property in execution only applies where there is an order for costs against a named defendant (which may not be the case in a claim against trespassers)¹³.

Writs of possession are issued by the Central Office or a district registry of the High Court¹⁴.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/A. HIGH COURT WRITS OF EXECUTION ETC/(A) Forms of Writ/1268. Writs of delivery.

1268. Writs of delivery.

A writ of delivery¹ must be in one of the prescribed forms², whichever is appropriate³. The writ is addressed to a named enforcement officer or to the enforcement officers assigned to a particular district⁴. A writ of specific delivery⁵, a writ of delivery to recover any goods or their assessed value⁶, and any further writ in aid of the writ, may include provision for enforcing the payment of any money adjudged or ordered to be paid by the judgment or order which is to be enforced by the writ⁷.

A writ of specific delivery informs the enforcement officer that a judgment or order has been made for specific delivery of the goods detailed in the first schedule to the writ and for interest, damages and costs as set out in the second schedule, and commands him to cause the goods detailed in the first schedule to be delivered to the claimant⁸ and to seize in execution the goods, chattels and other property of the defendant⁹ authorised by law¹⁰ and to raise from them the sums detailed in the second schedule together with fees and charges to which the enforcement officer is entitled¹¹ and immediately after execution to pay those sums and interest to the appropriate person¹². The writ also commands the enforcement officer to indorse on the writ immediately after execution a statement of the manner in which he has executed it and to send a copy of the statement to the claimant or defendant¹³.

A writ of delivery to recover any goods or their assessed value informs the enforcement officer that a judgment or order has been made for specific delivery of the goods detailed in the first schedule to the writ, or for the payment of their assessed value as set out in the second schedule, and for interest, damages and costs as set out in the second schedule, and commands him to cause the goods so detailed to be delivered to the claimant or, if he is unable to obtain those goods, to seize in execution the goods, chattels and other property of the defendant authorised by law and raise from them the assessed value of the goods so detailed¹⁴. In any event he is commanded to seize in execution the goods, chattels and other property of the defendant authorised by law and raise from them the remaining sums detailed in the second schedule together with fees and charges to which the enforcement officer is entitled, and immediately after execution to pay those sums and interest to the appropriate person¹⁵. He must also make a return to the writ as described above¹⁶.

1269. Writs of sequestration.

A writ of sequestration¹ must be in the prescribed form². The writ is addressed to no fewer than four named commissioners³, stating that the defendant⁴ is in contempt of court for failing to comply with a specified court order⁵ and that the claimant⁶ has been given permission to issue the writ⁷. The commissioners, or any two or three of them, are authorised and commanded to enter upon and take possession of all the real and personal estate of the defendant, to collect, receive and take into their hands the rents and profits of his real estate and all his personal estate, and to keep the same under sequestration in their hands until the defendant complies with the relevant order and clears his contempt and the court makes other order to the contrary⁸.

A writ of restitution, which is a writ in aid of execution¹, may be issued by order of the court² where the defendant or a third party wrongly resumes or takes possession of land³ after entry by the enforcement officer under a writ of possession⁴. The writ is addressed to a named enforcement officer⁵ or to the enforcement officers assigned to a particular district and commands him to enter the land and cause the claimant⁶ to have restitution of the land⁷. The enforcement officer is also commanded to indorse on the writ immediately after execution a statement of the manner in which he has executed it and to send a copy of the statement to the claimant⁸.

A writ of assistance, which is a writ in aid of execution¹, may be issued by order of the court² where a defendant³ has been ordered to give possession of land or goods to the claimant⁴ but the defendant and other persons have retained possession of the land or goods in contempt of the court order⁵. The writ is addressed to a named enforcement officer or to the enforcement officers assigned to a particular district⁶. The enforcement officer is commanded either (1) to enter the land and eject the defendant, his tenants, servants and accomplices, each and every of them, from the land and every part of it and put the claimant and his assigns into full, peaceable and quiet possession of it; or (2) to put the claimant and his assigns into full peaceable and quiet possession of the goods; and (3) to defend and keep him and his assigns in such peaceable and quiet possession, when and as often as any interruption of it is at any time effected, according to the intent of the relevant court orders⁷.

Special forms of writs of fieri facias or of sequestration may be issued in circumstances where the person liable to execution is the incumbent of a Church of England benefice. These writs are discussed elsewhere in this title¹. They may be regarded as writs in aid of execution² since they may only be issued on the return of a writ of fieri facias³.

(B) ISSUE OF WRIT

1273. Issue of writ of execution; general procedure.

Issue of a writ of execution¹ takes place on its being sealed² by a court officer³ of the appropriate office⁴.

Before such a writ is issued, a praecipe⁵ for its issue must be filed⁶. The praecipe must be signed by or on behalf of the solicitor of the person entitled to execution⁷ or, if that person is acting in person, by him⁸.

No such writ may be sealed unless at the time of the tender of it for sealing:

- 899 (1) the person tendering it produces:
 - 19 33. (a) the judgment or order⁹ on which the writ is to issue, or an office copy of it;
 - 34. (b) where the writ may not issue without the permission of the court¹⁰, the order granting such permission or evidence of the granting of it;
 - 35. (c) where judgment on failure to acknowledge service¹¹ has been entered against a state¹², evidence that the state has been duly served¹³ and that the judgment has taken effect¹⁴; and
- 20 900 (2) the court officer authorised to seal it is satisfied that the period, if any, specified in the judgment or order for the payment of any money or the doing of any other act under it has expired¹⁵.

Every writ of execution must bear the date of the day on which it is issued¹⁶.

1273 Issue of writ of execution; general procedure

NOTE 4--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604. CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 46 r 6(6) amended: SI 2009/2092.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/A. HIGH COURT WRITS OF EXECUTION ETC/(B) Issue of Writ/1274. Cases where the court's permission is required for issue of the writ.

1274. Cases where the court's permission is required for issue of the writ.

A writ of execution¹ in aid of any other writ of execution² must not issue without the permission of the court³.

A writ of execution to enforce a judgment or order⁴ may not issue without the permission of the court in the following cases, that is to say:

- 901 (1) where six years or more have elapsed since the date of the judgment or order⁵;
- 902 (2) where any change has taken place, whether by death or otherwise, in the parties entitled or liable to execution under the judgment or order⁶;
- 903 (3) where the judgment or order is against the assets of a deceased person coming to the hands of his executors or administrators after the date of the judgment or order, and it is sought to issue execution against such assets⁷;
- 904 (4) where under the judgment or order any person is entitled to a remedy subject to the fulfilment of any condition which it is alleged has been fulfilled⁸;
- 905 (5) where any goods sought to be seized under a writ of execution are in the hands of a receiver appointed by the court or a sequestrator⁹.

A writ of possession¹⁰ to enforce a judgment or order for the giving of possession of any land must not be issued without the permission of the court except where the judgment or order was given or made in proceedings by a mortgagee or mortgagor or by any person having the right to foreclose or redeem any mortgage¹¹, being proceedings in which there is a claim for:

- 906 (a) payment of money secured by the mortgage;
- 907 (b) sale of the mortgaged property;
- 908 (c) foreclosure;
- 909 (d) delivery of possession (whether before or after foreclosure or without foreclosure) to the mortgagee by the mortgagor or by any person who is alleged to be in possession of the property;
- 910 (e) redemption;
- 911 (f) reconveyance of the land or its release from the security; or
- 912 (g) delivery of possession by the mortgagee¹².

Except in relation to an order for possession in a possession claim against trespassers under Part 55 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')¹³, such permission must not be granted unless it is shown:

- 913 (i) that every person in actual possession of the whole or any part of the land has received such notice of the proceedings as appears to the court sufficient to enable him to apply to the court for any relief to which he may be entitled; and
- 914 (ii) if the operation of the judgment or order is suspended under the provision of the Landlord and Tenant Act 1954 giving relief for a tenant where the landlord is proceeding to enforce covenants¹⁴, that the applicant has not received notice in writing from the tenant that he desires that the order is not to have effect except if and in so far as it provides for the payment of costs and that the tenancy is thereafter to have effect, and that Part I of that Act¹⁵ is to have effect in relation to it, as if it had been granted for a term expiring at the expiration of seven months from the making of the order¹⁶.

In the case of a possession order in a possession claim against trespassers under Part 55 of the CPR, no writ of possession to enforce such an order must be issued after the expiry of three months from the date of the order without the permission of the court¹⁷.

The issue of a writ of sequestration¹⁸ requires the permission of the court¹⁹.

5 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 46 r 2(1)(a). When exercising its discretion to permit the issue of execution after the expiry of six years under this rule, the court will not, in general, extend time beyond the six years save where it is demonstrably just to do so. The burden of demonstrating that rests on the judgment creditor: see Duer v Frazer [2001] 1 All ER 249, [2001] 1 WLR 919, applied in Patel v Singh [2002] EWHC 1816 (Ch), [2002] All ER (D) 453 (Jul). UPDATE

1274 Cases where the court's permission is required for issue of the writ

NOTE 5--The court would permit enforcement after the expiry of six years from the date of judgment where the claimant has been active in seeking enforcement, but his attempts have been thwarted by his inability to locate the defendant's assets:

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/A. HIGH COURT WRITS OF EXECUTION ETC/(B) Issue of Writ/1275. Application for permission to issue writ.

1275. Application for permission to issue writ.

An application for permission¹ to issue a writ of execution² may be made in accordance with Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')³ but, except in the case of an application to issue a writ of sequestration⁴, the application notice need not be served⁵ on the respondent unless the court directs⁶. In the case of an application for permission to issue a writ of possession to enforce an order for possession in a possession claim against trespassers⁷, the application may be made without notice being served on any other party unless the court otherwise directs⁸.

Particular provision is made with regard to applications for writs of sequestration⁹. With regard to other applications for writs of execution, such an application must be supported by a witness statement or affidavit¹⁰:

- 915 (1) identifying the judgment or order¹¹ to which the application relates and, if the judgment or order is for the payment of money¹², stating the amount originally due thereunder and the amount due thereunder at the date the application notice is filed¹³;
- 916 (2) stating, where six years or more have elapsed since the judgment or order¹⁴, the reasons for the delay in enforcing the judgment or order¹⁵;
- 917 (3) stating, where any change has taken place in the parties entitled or liable to execution¹⁶, the change which has taken place in such parties since the date of the judgment or order¹⁷;
- 918 (4) stating, where the judgment or order is against the assets of a deceased person coming to the hands of his executors or administrators after the date of the judgment or order and it is sought to issue execution against such assets¹⁸, or where under the judgment or order any person is entitled to a remedy subject to the fulfilment of any condition which it is alleged has been fulfilled¹⁹, that a demand to satisfy the judgment or order was made on the person liable to satisfy it and that he has refused or failed to do so²⁰;
- 919 (5) giving such other information as is necessary to satisfy the court that the applicant is entitled to proceed to execution on the judgment or order in question and that the person against whom it is sought to issue execution is liable to execution on it²¹.

The court hearing such application may grant permission in accordance with the application or may order that any issue or question, a decision on which is necessary to determine the rights of the parties, be tried in any manner in which any question of fact or law arising in proceedings may be tried and, in either case, may impose such terms as to costs or otherwise as it thinks just²².

Notwithstanding anything set out above²³, an application for permission to issue a writ of sequestration must be made in accordance with Part 23 of the CPR and be heard by a judge²⁴. The application notice, stating the grounds of the application and accompanied by a copy of the witness statement or affidavit in support of the application, must be served personally²⁵ on the person against whose property it is sought to issue the writ²⁶; but the court may dispense with such service if it thinks it just to do so²⁷. The judge hearing an application for permission to issue a writ of sequestration may sit in private in any case in which, if the application were for an order of committal²⁸, he would be entitled²⁹ to do so but, except in such a case, the application must be heard in public³⁰.

Where it appears upon the return of any writ of fieri facias¹ that the person against whom the writ was issued has no goods or chattels in the county of the sheriffs² to whom the writ was directed or the district of the relevant enforcement officer³ but that he is the incumbent of a benefice named in the return, then, after the writ and return have been filed⁴, the party by whom the writ of fieri facias was issued may issue a writ of fieri facias de bonis ecclesiasticis or a writ of sequestrari de bonis ecclesiasticis directed to the bishop of the diocese within which that benefice is⁵. Any such writ must be delivered to the bishop to be executed by him⁶. The bishop is commanded by the writ either to levy execution on the defendant's ecclesiastical property in the diocese⁷, or to enter the rectory or vicarage and parish church, sequester them and hold them in possession until sufficient income has accrued to satisfy the judgment and costs of execution⁸. Only such fees for the execution of any such writ are to be taken by or allowed to the bishop or any diocesan officer as are for the time being authorised by or under any enactment, including any measure of the General Synod⁹.

The bishop is also commanded to indorse on the relevant writ immediately after execution a statement of the manner in which he has executed it and to send a copy of the statement to the claimant¹⁰.

1280. Renewal of writ.

Where a writ of execution¹ has not been wholly executed² the court³ may by order extend the validity of the writ from time to time for a period of 12 months at any one time beginning with the day on which the order is made, if an application for extension is made to the court before the day next following that on which the writ would otherwise expire or such later day, if any, as the court may allow⁴.

Before a writ the validity of which had been extended under the above provision is executed either the writ must be sealed⁵ with the seal of the office out of which it was issued showing the date on which the order extending its validity was made or the applicant for the order must serve a notice in the prescribed form⁶ sealed in the same manner, on the sheriff⁷ to whom the writ is directed or the relevant enforcement officer⁸ informing him of the making of the order and the date of it⁹. The production of a writ of execution, or of such a notice, purporting in either case to be sealed in such manner, is evidence that the validity of that writ, or, as the case may be, of the writ referred to in that notice, has been extended under the above provision¹⁰.

The priority of a writ, the validity of which has been extended under these provisions, is to be determined by reference to the date on which it was originally delivered to the enforcement officer¹¹.

(D) RETURN TO WRIT

1282. Return to writ of execution.

Any party¹ at whose instance or against whom a writ of execution² was issued³ may serve⁴ a notice on the sheriff⁵ to whom the writ was directed or the relevant enforcement officer requiring him, within such time as may be specified in the notice, to indorse on the writ a statement of the manner in which he has executed it and to send to that party a copy of the statement⁶. If a sheriff or enforcement officer on whom such a notice is served fails to comply with it the party by whom it was served may apply to the court for an order directing the sheriff or enforcement officer to comply with the notice⁷.

Where the enforcement officer indorses the writ with a statement that he has complied with the writ and holds money being the whole or a part of the money to be levied, the sum returned thereby as made is recoverable from the enforcement officer by the judgment creditor; and where no return has been made, the amount in fact levied is so recoverable⁸. A claim lies for the amount levied or returned as levied, as for money had and received⁹; or an application may be made to the court for an order that the enforcement officer pay over the money¹⁰. The enforcement officer is estopped from denying, after such a return, the receipt of the money¹¹, or from pleading a subsequent loss or rescue of the goods¹², but he is not precluded from showing that goods returned as those of the debtor were in fact those of another person¹³, or that the debtor's title has been defeated subsequently¹⁴, or that the execution has been defeated by the insolvency of the debtor¹⁵.

A false statement in a return will give the judgment creditor a right of action against the enforcement officer for a false return if it causes damage to the creditor, but not otherwise¹⁶.

1 As to parties to enforcement see PARA 1236 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'writ of execution' see PARA 1265. Note, however, that since a notice under the provisions set out in the text is addressed to the enforcement officer (see the text to notes 4-5), a writ of sequestration, which is addressed to the sequestrators, does not fall within those provisions. As to writs of sequestration see PARAS 1269, 1313, 1380 et seq.

5 As to enforcement officers see PARA 1258; and SHERIFFS.

6 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 46 r 9(1). As to the execution of writs see PARA 1302 et seq.

There are three ordinary forms of return specially applicable to the writ of fieri facias: (1) fieri feci; (2) nulla bona; (3) 'the goods and chattels seized remain in my hands unsold for want of buyers'. The return of fieri feci is applicable when the enforcement officer has seized and sold goods sufficient in value to satisfy the amount to be levied under the fieri facias. It states that the enforcement officer has caused to be made the sum by the indorsement of the writ directed to be levied. Where the goods seized have realised insufficient to discharge the whole sum due, the return of fieri feci as to part will be combined with one of the other forms. The return of nulla bona is applicable when there are no goods of the judgment debtor in the enforcement officer's bailiwick, the proceeds of which are available to satisfy the writ: Milner v Rawlings (1867) LR 2 Exch 249. Thus the return is good to a writ delivered with the intention of defrauding creditors, whether there are goods available or not:

Shattock v Carden(1851) 6 Exch 725. It is therefore a good return if there are no goods at all, or if the proceeds of such goods as have been sold have not proved more than sufficient to satisfy the costs of the levy (Dennis v Whetham(1874) LR 9 QB 345), and any claims prior to those of the writ, such as other prior writs (Dennis v Whetham(1874) LR 9 QB 345), executions on behalf of the Crown (Grove v Aldridge (1832) 9 Bing 428), or landlord's claims under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1709 s 1 (see PARA 1352) (see Wintle v Freeman (1841) 1 Gal & Dav 93; Heeman v Evans (1841) 3 Man & G 398). It states that the judgment debtor has no goods or chattels whereof the sum directed to be levied, or any part thereof, can be made. The return that 'the goods and chattels seized remain in my hands unsold for want of buyers' is applicable not only to the case in which no bid is made for the goods (Barnard v Leigh (1815) 1 Stark 43), but also when no offer is made of a sum reasonably approaching their value. If the enforcement officer sells the goods at an excessively low price he will be liable at the suit of the judgment creditor for damages: Keightley v Birch (1814) 3 Camp 521. The value of the goods, estimated by the enforcement officer, should be stated in the return: Barton v Gill (1843) 1 Dow & L 593; Wintle v Lord Chetwynd (1839) 7 Dowl 554. The omission to state the value is a mere irregularity and does not make the return a nullity: Chambers v Coleman (1841) 9 Dowl 588. The effect of the return of value is to bind the enforcement officer as to that value in case the goods are lost or rescued from him: Clerk v Withers (1704) 2 Ld Raym 1072.

Other forms of return are sometimes applicable. Thus, where the execution is stayed by order (Cleghorn v Des Anes (1819) 3 Moore CP 83), or by direction of the judgment creditor's solicitor (Levi v Abbott(1849) 4 Exch 588), or where the judgment debtor is the incumbent of a benefice and has no goods or chattels in the county (see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 47 r 5; and PARAS 1278), these facts should be stated in the return. The return must not fail to state whether the debtor has goods within the county or bailiwick; thus a return to the effect that the debtor's house is barricaded so that the enforcement officer cannot ascertain whether he has goods or not is not a good return, and will be set aside: Munk v Cass (1841) 9 Dowl 332; applied in Re a Debtor (No 340 of 1992), ex p the Debtor v First Commercial Bank plc[1996] 2 All ER 211, [1995] 15 LS Gaz R 40, CA. When the writ to which a return has to be made is one of several writs, the enforcement officer should return specifically whether he has seized under the writ, and the form applicable to such a return is, after a recital of all the writs delivered, that he has seized 'by virtue of the said several writs, and according to the priority thereof': Chambers v Colman (1841) 9 Dowl 588, explaining Wintle v Lord Chetwynd (1839) 7 Dowl 554. When several writs of fieri facias are delivered simultaneously, the form of return is doubtful: Ashworth v Earl of Uxbridge (1842) 2 Dowl NS 377. (A) WARRANTS OF EXECUTION 1283. Procedure for issuing warrants of execution; in general.

Subject to the prescribed monetary limits¹, any sum of money payable under a judgment or order of a county court² may be recovered, in case of default or failure of payment, forthwith or at the time or times and in the manner thereby directed, by execution against the goods of the party³ against whom the judgment or order was obtained⁴. A judgment creditor⁵ desiring a warrant of execution to be issued must file⁶ a request in that behalf⁷ certifying (1) the amount remaining due under the judgment or order; and (2) where the order made is for payment of a sum of money by instalments⁸, that the whole or part of any instalment due remains unpaid and the amount for which the warrant is to be issued⁹.

The court officer¹⁰, on the application of the party prosecuting any such judgment or order, must issue a warrant of execution¹¹ in the nature of a writ of fieri facias¹² whereby the district judge¹³ is empowered to levy or cause to be levied by distress and sale of the goods, wherever they may be found within the district of the court, the money payable under the judgment or order and the costs of the execution¹⁴. The precise time of the making of the application to the court to issue such a warrant must be entered by the court officer in the record prescribed for the purpose¹⁵ and on the warrant¹⁶.

In or upon every warrant of execution issued from a county court against the goods of any person, the district judge must cause to be inserted or indorsed the total amount to be levied, inclusive of the fee for issuing the warrant but exclusive of the fees for its execution¹⁷.

It is the duty of every constable¹⁸ within the court's jurisdiction to assist in the execution of every such warrant¹⁹.

COUNTY COURT WARRANTS OF EXECUTION, DELIVERY AND POSSESSION/(A) Warrants of Execution/1284. Issue of warrant of execution where order is for payment of money by instalments.

1284. Issue of warrant of execution where order is for payment of money by instalments.

Where a county court has made an order for payment of any sum of money by instalments, execution on the order must not be issued until after default in payment of some instalment according to the order¹. Rules of court may prescribe the cases in which execution is to issue if there is any such default and limit the amounts for which and the times at which execution may issue². Except so far as may be otherwise provided by rules of court made for those purposes, execution or successive executions may issue if there is any such default for the whole of the above-mentioned sum of money and costs then remaining unpaid or for such part as the court may order either at the time of the original order or at any subsequent time; but except so far as may be otherwise provided by such rules, no execution may issue unless at the time when it issues the whole or some part of an instalment which has already become due remains unpaid³.

The relevant rules provide that where the court⁴ has made an order for payment of a sum of money by instalments and default has been made in payment of such an instalment, a warrant of execution may be issued for the whole of that sum of money and costs then remaining unpaid or⁵ for such part as the judgment creditor⁶ may request, not being in the latter case less than £50 or the amount of one monthly instalment or, as the case may be, four weekly instalments, whichever is the greater⁷. However, in any such case no warrant must be issued unless at the time when it is issued (1) the whole or part of an instalment which has already become due remains unpaid; and (2) any warrant previously issued for part of the above-mentioned sum of money and costs has expired or has been satisfied or abandoned⁸.

Where a warrant is issued for the whole or part of the above-mentioned sum of money and costs, the court officer⁹ must, unless the district judge¹⁰ responsible for execution of the warrant directs otherwise, send a warning notice to the person against whom the warrant is issued and, where such a notice is sent, the warrant must not be levied until seven days thereafter¹¹.

COUNTY COURT WARRANTS OF EXECUTION, DELIVERY AND POSSESSION/(A) Warrants of Execution/1285. Cases where court's permission is required for issue of warrant.

1285. Cases where court's permission is required for issue of warrant.

Without prejudice to any enactment, rule or direction by virtue of which a person is required to obtain the permission of the court¹ for the issue of a warrant or to proceed to execution or otherwise to the enforcement of a judgment or order², a warrant of execution may not issue without the permission of the court where:

- 920 (1) six years or more have elapsed since the date of the judgment or order³;
- 921 (2) any change has taken place, whether by death or otherwise, in the parties entitled to enforce the judgment or order or liable to have it enforced against them⁴;
- 922 (3) the judgment or order is against the assets of a deceased person coming into the hands of his executors or administrators after the date of the judgment or order and it is sought to issue execution against such assets⁵; or
- 923 (4) any goods to be seized under a warrant of execution are in the hands of a receiver appointed by a court⁶.

An application for permission must be supported by a witness statement or affidavit⁷ establishing the applicant's right to relief and may be made without notice being served⁸ on any other party in the first instance; but the court may direct the application notice to be served on such persons as it thinks fit⁹. Where, by reason of one and the same event, a person seeks permission under head (2) above to enforce more judgments or orders than one, he may make one application only, specifying in a schedule all the judgments or orders in respect of which it is made¹⁰.

Where it is desired to enforce by warrant of execution a judgment or order of the High Court, or a judgment, order, decree or award which is or has become enforceable as if it were a judgment of the High Court, permission to issue execution is not required if permission has already been given by the High Court¹¹.

Any restriction imposed by the relevant rules⁶ on the issue of execution applies as if the judgment, order, decree or award were a judgment or order of the county court⁷, except that permission to issue execution is not required if permission has already been given by the High Court⁸.

A warrant of execution¹ is valid for the purpose of execution in the first instance for 12 months beginning with the date of its issue, but if not wholly executed², it may be renewed from time to time, by order of the court³, for a period of 12 months at any one time, beginning with the day next following that on which it would otherwise expire, if an application for renewal is made before that day or such later day, if any, as the court may allow⁴. COUNTY COURT WARRANTS OF EXECUTION, DELIVERY AND POSSESSION/(B) Warrants of Delivery and Possession/1291. Issue etc of warrants of delivery.

(B) WARRANTS OF DELIVERY AND POSSESSION

1291. Issue etc of warrants of delivery.

The rules relating to application for, the issue of and the duration and renewal of warrants of execution¹ have effect, so far as applicable and with the necessary modifications, in relation to warrants of delivery² as they have effect in relation to warrants of execution³.

Where a warrant of delivery is issued, the judgment creditor⁴ is entitled, by the same or a separate warrant, to execution against the debtor's⁵ goods for any money payable under the judgment or order⁶ which is to be enforced by the warrant of delivery⁷. Where a judgment or order is given or made for the delivery of goods or payment of their value and a warrant is issued to recover the goods or their value, money paid into court under the warrant must be appropriated first to any sum of money and costs awarded⁸.

Nothing in these provisions prejudices any power to enforce a judgment or order for the delivery of goods by an order of committal⁹.

COUNTY COURT WARRANTS OF EXECUTION, DELIVERY AND POSSESSION/(B) Warrants of Delivery and Possession/1292. Issue etc of warrants of possession.

1292. Issue etc of warrants of possession.

The person desiring a warrant of possession¹ to be issued must file² a request certifying that the land which is subject of the judgment or order³ has not been vacated⁴. Where a warrant of possession is issued, the judgment creditor⁵ is entitled, by the same or a separate warrant, to execution against the debtor's⁶ goods for any money payable under the judgment or order which is to be enforced by the warrant of possession⁷. In such a case, or where an order for possession has been suspended on terms as to payment of a sum of money by instalments, the judgment creditor must certify in his request (1) the amount of money remaining due under the judgment or order; and (2) that the whole or part of any instalment due remains unpaid⁸.

The duration of any warrant of possession issued by a county court to enforce a judgment or order for the recovery of land or for the delivery of possession of land is such as may be fixed by or in accordance with rules of court⁹. The rules relating to permission to issue warrants of execution¹⁰ and the duration and renewal of such warrants¹¹ apply, with the necessary modifications, in relation to a warrant of possession as they apply in relation to a warrant of execution¹².

Nothing in the above provisions prejudices any power to enforce a judgment or order for the recovery of land by an order of committal¹³.

Special provision is made in relation to warrants to enforce an order for possession in a possession claim against trespassers¹⁴ under Part 55 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹⁵. Such a warrant for possession may be issued at any time after the making of the order¹⁶; but no such warrant of possession must be issued after the expiry of three months from the date of the order without the permission of the court¹⁷. An application for such permission may be made without notice being served¹⁸ on any other party unless the court otherwise directs¹⁹. Nothing in this provision authorises the issue of a warrant of possession before the date on which possession is ordered to be given²⁰.

1293. Issue etc of warrant of restitution.

A warrant of restitution may be issued, with the permission of the court¹, in aid of any warrant of possession². An application for permission may be made without notice being served³ on any other party⁴. The application must be supported by evidence of wrongful re-entry into possession following the execution of the warrant of possession and of such further facts as would, in the High Court, enable the judgment creditor⁵ to have a writ of restitution⁶ issued⁷.

The rules relating to permission to issue warrants of execution⁸ and the duration and renewal of such warrants⁹ apply, with the necessary modifications, in relation to such a warrant in aid of a warrant of possession as they apply in relation to a warrant of execution¹⁰.

Nothing in the above provisions prejudices any power to enforce a judgment or order for the recovery of land by an order of committal¹¹.

C. EFFECT OF WRITS AND WARRANTS

(A) HIGH COURT WRITS OF EXECUTION

1294. Effect of writs of execution against goods.

A writ of fieri facias¹ or other writ of execution² against goods binds the property³ in the goods of the execution debtor⁴ from the time when the writ is received by the person who is under a duty to indorse it⁵. Such a writ does not, however, prejudice the title to any goods of the execution debtor acquired by a person in good faith⁶ and for valuable consideration⁷ unless the person acquiring goods of the execution debtor had notice, at the time of the acquisition:

- 924 (1) that the writ or any other writ by virtue of which the goods of the execution debtor might be seized or attached had been received by the person who was under a duty to indorse it but had not been executed⁸; or
- 925 (2) that an application for the issue of a warrant of execution against the goods of the execution debtor had been made to the district judge of a county court⁹ and the warrant issued on the application either remained unexecuted¹⁰ in the hands of the district judge of the court from which it was issued, or had been sent for execution to, and received by, the district judge of another county court and remained unexecuted in the hands of that district judge¹¹.

1 As to writs of fieri facias see PARA 1266.

2 As to writs of execution see PARA 1265 et seq.

3 I.e. the property cannot be conveyed except subject to the right of the execution creditor: Woodland v Fuller (1840) 11 Ad & El 859 (decided under earlier legislation). For these purposes, 'property' means the general property in goods, and not merely a special property: Courts Act 2003 s 99(1), Sch 7 para 8(5) (repealed, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 ss 62(3), 146, Sch 13 paras 148, 151(1), (4), Sch 23 Pt 3; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

4 For these purposes, any reference to the goods of the execution debtor includes a reference to anything else of his that may lawfully be seized in execution: Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 8(7). As to goods that may be seized see PARA 1315.

5 Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 8(1). Schedule 7 para 8 applies to any writ of execution against goods which is issued from the High Court: Sch 7 para 6. As from a day to be appointed, however, Sch 7 para 8 does not apply to any writ that confers power to use the procedure in the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 (see PARA 1386 et seq), but does apply to any other writ of execution against goods which is issued from the High Court: Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 6(2) (Sch 7 para 6 prospectively substituted by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 62(3), Sch 13 paras 148, 151(1), (3)). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

6 For these purposes, a thing is to be treated as done in good faith if it is in fact done honestly, whether it is done negligently or not: Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 8(6).

7 Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 8(2). As to what constitutes valuable consideration see CONTRACT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 728 et seq.

8 Courts Act 2003 Sch 7 para 8(3).

9 As to district judges in county courts see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 728 et seq.

10 The words 'remain unexecuted' do not include the case where the goods have actually been seized but are not in the physical possession of the enforcement officer or district judge: see Lloyds and Scottish Finance Ltd v Modern Cars and Caravans (Kingston) Ltd [1966] 1 QB 764, [1964] 2 All ER 732 (decided under earlier legislation).

1295. How goods are bound by the writ.

When it is said that the debtor's goods, or the property in them, are 'bound'¹, what is meant is that the enforcement officer acquires a legal right to seize the goods. Notwithstanding the binding effect of the writ, the ownership continues in the judgment debtor² until the sale, and he can legally, until seizure, deal with the goods himself³ or, until sale, pass the property to others⁴. Any transfer or assignment of the goods after the date at which the binding power of the writ operates⁵ will (except in the case of a purchaser in good faith for valuable consideration and without notice⁶) be subject to the enforcement officer's right to follow up and seize the goods under the writ⁷.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/C. EFFECT OF WRITS AND WARRANTS/(A) High Court Writs of Execution/1297. Priority of writs.

1297. Priority of writs.

If several writs of the same description are delivered to the enforcement officer by different judgment creditors for execution against the same judgment debtor, he must execute them in order, according to the day and hour at which each was delivered to him¹. A renewed writ ranks according to the time of the delivery of the original². Delivery to the sheriff's deputy in London has been held to be equivalent to delivery to the sheriff himself³. If the first judgment creditor orders the enforcement officer to suspend execution he will lose his priority if another writ is delivered during the suspension⁴. However, the priority of a writ is not necessarily lost by its temporary invalidity, since priority is a matter of equity and accordingly, if the temporary invalidity of the writ is not caused by any fault or voluntary action or inaction on the part of the creditor but by an erroneous decision of a lower court, the court will ensure that when the matter is put right the creditor does not lose the benefit of action taken under what is subsequently held to have been throughout a valid judgment⁵.

If several writs are handed to the enforcement officer at the same moment by one solicitor acting for several judgment creditors there is no priority; the enforcement officer must execute them simultaneously and make a return to that effect⁶, and he cannot call upon the solicitor to say which is to be executed first⁷.

If the enforcement officer executes one writ which ought to have been postponed to another, and the goods are actually sold, the purchaser obtains a good title, and the money must be handed to the creditor whose writ was executed⁸, unless he had notice of the prior writ⁹; but the creditor whose writ was entitled to priority has a cause of action against the enforcement officer¹⁰.

If several writs have to be executed against the same judgment debtor, the enforcement officer need not make separate seizures, but one seizure enures for the benefit of all in order of priority¹¹.

Effect of warrants of execution.

(B) COUNTY COURT WARRANTS OF EXECUTION

1298. Effect of warrants of execution.

Subject to the following provision, and to the provisions relating to execution out of the court's jurisdiction¹, a warrant of execution² against goods issued from a county court binds the property³ in the goods of the execution debtor as from the time at which application for the warrant was made to the district judge of the county court⁴. Such a warrant does not, however, prejudice the title to any goods of the execution debtor acquired by a person in good faith⁵ and for valuable consideration⁶ unless he had at the time when he acquired his title:

- 926 (1) notice that an application for the issue of a warrant of execution against the goods of the execution debtor had been made to the district judge of a county court and that the warrant issued on the application either remained unexecuted⁷ in the hands of the district judge of the court from which it was issued or had been sent for execution to, and received by, the district judge of another county court, and remained unexecuted in the hands of the district judge of that court; or
- 927 (2) notice that a writ of fieri facias⁸ or other writ of execution⁹ by virtue of which the goods of the execution debtor might be seized or attached had been delivered to and remained unexecuted in the hands of an enforcement officer or other officer charged with the execution of the writ¹⁰.

The effect of the binding power of a warrant of execution is similar to that of a writ of execution¹¹, and similar exceptions apply¹². The priority of several warrants of execution issued by a county court against the same debtor is determined by the time at which the applications for them were made¹³, except where the warrant is to be executed outside the jurisdiction of that court, in which case the property in the goods is bound from the time at which the district judge of the court which is to execute the warrant receives it¹⁴. The priority of a warrant is not necessarily lost by its temporary invalidity¹⁵.

3 le the property cannot be conveyed except subject to the right of the execution creditor: Woodland v Fuller (1840) 11 Ad & El 859 (decided under earlier legislation). For these purposes, 'property' means the general property in goods, and not merely a special property: County Courts Act 1984 s 99(4)(a).

4 County Courts Act 1984 s 99(1) (s 99 amended by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1), (3)). It is the duty of the district judge, without fee, on application for a warrant of execution being made to him to indorse on its back the hour, day, month and year when he received the application: County Courts Act 1984 s 99(3) (as so amended). As to district judges in county courts see PARA 60; and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 728 et seq.

5 For these purposes, a thing is to be treated as done in good faith if it is in fact done honestly whether it is done negligently or not: County Courts Act 1984 s 99(4)(c).

10 County Courts Act 1984 s 99(2) (as amended (see note 4); further amended by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 274(1), (2)). 'Enforcement officer' means an individual who is authorised to act as an enforcement officer under the Courts Act 2003: County Courts Act 1984 s 99(4)(za) (added by the Courts Act 2003 s 109(1), Sch 8 para 274(3)).

The County Courts Act 1984 s 99 is substituted by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 69 as from a day to be appointed. From such date, the provisions apply to (1) a warrant of control issued under the County Courts Act 1984 85(2); (2) a warrant of delivery or of possession, but only if it includes a power to take control of and sell goods to recover a sum of money and only for the purposes of exercising that power: s 99(1) (as so substituted). The person to whom the warrant is directed must, as soon as possible after receiving it, endorse it by inserting on the back the date and time when he received it: s 99(2) (as so substituted). No fee may be charged for endorsing a warrant under s 99: s 99(3) (as so substituted). As from a day to be appointed, s 99 is repealed by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 ss 62(3), 146, Sch 13 paras 68, 74, Sch 23 Pt 3. Every district judge¹ by whom a warrant or order is issued² or received³ for execution must⁴ from time to time state in the records of his court⁵ what has been done in the execution of the warrant or order⁶. If the warrant or order has not been executed within one month from the date of its issue or receipt by him, the court officer⁷ of the court responsible for its execution must, at the end of that month and every subsequent month during which the warrant remains outstanding, send notice of the reason for non-execution to the judgment creditor⁸ and, if the warrant or order was received from another court, to that court⁹.

The district judge responsible for executing a warrant or order must give such information respecting it as may reasonably be required by the judgment creditor and, if the warrant or order was received by him from another court, by the district judge of that court¹⁰.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(i) Writs and Warrants/C. EFFECT OF WRITS AND WARRANTS/(B) County Court Warrants of Execution/1300. Execution out of county court's jurisdiction; in general.

1300. Execution out of county court's jurisdiction; in general.

Where a warrant of execution¹ has been issued from a county court (a 'home court') against the goods of any person and the goods are out of the jurisdiction of that court², the court officer³ of that court may send the warrant of execution to the district judge⁴ of any other county court within the jurisdiction of which the goods are or are believed to be, with a warrant indorsed on it or annexed to it requiring execution of the original warrant⁵.

The original warrant binds the property⁶ in goods of the execution debtor which are within the jurisdiction of the court to which it is sent as from the time when it is received by the district judge of that court⁷. It is the duty of the district judge of the court to which the warrant is sent, without fee, on receipt of the warrant to indorse on its back the hour, day, month and year when he received it⁸.

On the receipt of the warrant, the district judge of the other county court must act in all respects as if the original warrant of execution had been issued by the court of which he is district judge and must within the prescribed time report to the district judge of the home court what he has done in the execution of the warrant⁹ and pay over all moneys received¹⁰ in pursuance of the warrant¹¹.

Where a warrant of execution has been received from another court, the court to which it has been sent for execution (the 'foreign court') must return the warrant to the home court either on the execution of the warrant¹² or, if the warrant is not executed, on the making of a final return to the warrant or on suspension¹³ of the warrant¹⁴.

Where, after a warrant has been sent to a foreign court for execution but before a final return has been made to the warrant, the home court is notified of a payment made in respect of the sum for which the warrant is issued, the home court must send notice of the payment to the foreign court¹⁵. The powers to stay execution and suspend any judgment or order in connection with such warrants are discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁶.

As from a day to be appointed, the County Courts Act 1984 s 103 is repealed by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 ss 62(3), 146, Sch 13 paras 68, 76, Sch 23 Pt 3. 10 Where money is received in pursuance of a warrant of execution or committal sent by one court to another court, the court to which it is sent for execution (the 'foreign court') must, subject to CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 25 r 7(5) and to the Insolvency Act 1986 ss 183, 184 (see PARA 1354; and COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 882 et seq) and to s 346 (see PARA 1355; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 678 et seq), send the money to the judgment creditor in the manner prescribed by the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821 (see PARA 1568 et seq) and, where the money is received in pursuance of a warrant of committal, make a return to the home court: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 25 r 7(4); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(a). Where, however, interpleader proceedings are pending, the court must not proceed in accordance with this provision until the interpleader proceedings are determined and the district judge must then make a return showing how the money is to be disposed of and, if any money is payable to the judgment creditor, the court must proceed in accordance with CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 25 r 7(4): CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 25 r 7(5). Where a writ¹ against the goods of any person issued from the High Court is delivered to an enforcement officer² who is under a duty to execute the writ or to a sheriff³, then on demand from the district judge⁴ of a county court that person must (1) in the case of an enforcement officer, by writing signed by that officer or a person acting under his authority; and (2) in the case of a sheriff, by writing signed by any clerk in the office of the under-sheriff⁵, inform the district judge of the precise time the writ was delivered to him⁶. A bailiff⁷ of a county court must on demand show his warrant⁸ to any enforcement officer, any person acting under the authority of an enforcement officer and any sheriff's officer⁹.

B. GENERAL GUIDANCE FOR ENFORCEMENT AGENTS

1304. Vulnerable or hazardous situations.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents recommend:

- 928 (1) that enforcement agents¹ should withdraw from domestic premises if the only person is, or appears to be, under the age of 18 years although, if appropriate, they may ask when the debtor² will be home³; and that they should withdraw without making inquiries if the only persons present are children who appear to be under the age of 12 years⁴;
- 929 (2) that enforcement agents, enforcement agencies⁵ and creditors⁶ recognise that they each have a role in ensuring that the vulnerable and socially excluded are protected and that the recovery process includes procedures agreed between the agent or agency and creditor about how such situations should be dealt with. The exercise of appropriate discretion is needed, not only to protect the debtor, but also the enforcement agent, who is required to avoid taking action which could lead to accusations of inappropriate behaviour. Those who might be potentially vulnerable include the elderly, people with a disability, the seriously ill, the recently bereaved, single parent families, pregnant women, unemployed people, and those who have obvious difficulty in understanding, speaking or reading English⁷;
- 930 (3) that enforcement agents are trained to recognise and avoid potentially hazardous and aggressive situations and to withdraw when in doubt about their own or others' safety⁸. In circumstances where the enforcement agency requires it, and always where there have been previous acts or threats of violence by a debtor, a risk assessment should be undertaken prior to the enforcement agent attending a debtor's premises⁹.

1305. Professionalism and conduct of the enforcement agent; general guidance.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents require that enforcement agents¹:

- 931 (1) always produce relevant identification² on request, together with a written authorisation to act on behalf of the creditor³;
- 932 (2) act within the law at all times, including all defined legislation, and observe all health and safety requirements in carrying out enforcement⁴;
- 933 (3) maintain strict client confidentiality⁵;
- 934 (4) carry out their duties in a professional, calm and dignified manner, dressing appropriately and acting with discretion and fairness⁶;
- 935 (5) do not discriminate unfairly on any grounds, including those of age, disability, ethnicity, gender, race, religion or sexual orientation⁷;
- 936 (6) do not misrepresent their powers, qualifications, capacities, experience or abilities⁸;
- 937 (7) gain access to goods, for the purpose of distress⁹ or execution, without the use of unlawful force¹⁰;
- 938 (8) make available details of the comments and complaints procedure¹¹ on request or when circumstances indicate it would be appropriate to do so¹².

In addition to this non-statutory guidance, there are statutory restrictions on the use of information about clients¹³. Certain forms of discrimination¹⁴ and the harassment of debtors¹⁵ are prohibited by statute.

1306. Information and confidentiality.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents require that:

- 939 (1) all notices, correspondence and documentation issued by the enforcement agent¹ or agency² are clear and unambiguous and to the satisfaction of the creditor³;
- 940 (2) copies of the National Standards are freely available from the offices of enforcement agencies, or agents on request, and wherever possible from creditors and that enforcement agents provide clear and prompt information to debtors⁴ and, where appropriate, creditors⁵;
- 941 (3) all information obtained during the administration and enforcement⁶ of warrants⁷ is treated as confidential and that enforcement agents avoid, so far as it is practical, disclosing the purpose of their visit to anyone other than the debtor⁸;
- 942 (4) on each and every occasion when a visit is made to a debtor's property which incurs a fee for the debtor, enforcement agents leave a notice detailing the fees charged to date, including the one for that visit, and the fees which will be incurred if further action becomes necessary. If a written request is made an itemised account of fees should be provided. Enforcement agents should clearly explain and give in writing the consequences of the seizure of a debtor's goods and ensure that debtors are aware of the additional charges that will be incurred⁹;
- 943 (5) on returning any unexecuted warrants, the enforcement agent reports the outcome to the creditor and provides further appropriate information, where this is requested and paid for by the creditor¹⁰.

1307. Responsibilities of debtors and creditors; general guidance.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents recommend that:

- 944 (1) the debtor¹ behaves lawfully and is encouraged to co-operate with the enforcement agent²;
- 945 (2) in order for the enforcement³ process to work effectively, creditors⁴ are fully aware of their own responsibilities, which should be observed and set out in terms of agreement with their enforcement agent or agency⁵;
- 946 (3) creditors notify the enforcement agency of all payments received and other contacts with the debtor. They have a responsibility to tell the debtor that if payment is not made within a specified period of time, action may be taken to enforce payment. Creditors should not issue a warrant⁶ knowing that the debtor is not at the address, as a means of tracing the debtor at no cost. They should provide a contact point at appropriate times to enable the enforcement agent or agency to make essential queries particularly where they have cause for concern⁷;
- 947 (4) creditors do not request the suspension of a warrant⁸ or make direct payment arrangements with debtors without appropriate notification and payment of fees due to the enforcement agent⁹.

For the purpose of executing a warrant to give possession of any premises¹, it is not necessary to remove any goods from those premises².

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(ii) Execution of Writs and Warrants/C. RIGHTS OF ENTRY AND SEIZURE/(A) Executing Writs and Warrants of Possession/1309. Delivery of possession.

1309. Delivery of possession.

On the writ or warrant of possession¹ being issued, the claimant, or someone authorised on his behalf to receive possession, must go upon the premises, together with the enforcement officer or bailiff², to point out the property of which possession is to be given. The enforcement officer or bailiff must, as soon as is reasonably practicable³, proceed to deliver to the claimant complete and vacant⁴ possession of the premises, turning out, by force if need be, all other persons⁵, although if the person in possession attorns to the claimant this would appear to be sufficient⁶. If the enforcement officer or bailiff, however, in the claimant's presence, turns out a lawful undertenant who is protected by the Rent Acts, the only remedy of the undertenant is to intervene in the proceedings and have the judgment set aside⁷.

In executing a writ of possession the enforcement officer or bailiff may break into a house⁸.

The whole of the premises comprised in the writ must be delivered to the claimant, but the delivery of actual physical possession of one of several houses or part of a large estate, to be delivered in the name of the whole, is a sufficient delivery of the whole, unless other parts are in the possession of different persons, when each such part must be separately delivered⁹.

Possession must be delivered in such a manner as not to interfere with an easement, such as a right of way existing over the land¹⁰.

The execution is not complete until quiet possession has been delivered to the claimant and the bailiffs have gone away¹¹. If there is interference with the enforcement officer or bailiff in the execution of the writ or warrant, an order of committal for contempt can be applied for¹². An order of committal may also be applied for against the defendant if he dispossesses the claimant¹³ as distinguished from merely disturbing him¹⁴, but not unless the dispossession follows immediately upon the completion of the execution¹⁵.

Prolonged delay in executing a writ or warrant of possession may be in breach of the claimant's right to the peaceful enjoyment of his possessions under the first protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms, now incorporated into domestic law¹⁶.

Where there has been a breach by one party of the obligation to give vacant possession of a property under a warrant for possession in the other party's favour, there remains an obligation on that other party to do what is right and reasonable with regard to any goods left at the premises¹⁷.

(B) EXECUTING WRITS AND WARRANTS AGAINST GOODS

1310. Rights of entry in order to levy execution.

The enforcement officer, bailiff or other enforcement agent proceeding to levy an execution against goods¹ may legally enter the dwelling house and premises of the judgment debtor² or of any stranger to whose premises the debtor's property has been removed³, but he must not gain entry by force against the will of the judgment debtor or such stranger⁴.

When acting under a writ of fieri facias⁵ or warrant of execution⁶ the enforcement agent is not warranted in breaking open the outer door of a dwelling house⁷, but he may enter if the door is open⁸, or may open it by any of the usual means, such as by turning the key, lifting the latch or drawing back the bolt⁹, or by turning the handle. He may also make an entry through an open window¹⁰, or by further opening a window which is already partly open¹¹, but not by opening a window which is shut, even if it is not fastened¹².

If he is locked in, or unable to take out goods lawfully seized, he may break out if there is nobody there to open the door or after refusal to open it¹³; and if, after an entry has been made, he is forcibly expelled, he may break open the outer door to re-enter without any previous demand for re-entry¹⁴.

The privilege of not having an outer door broken open, and the rule that forcible entry must not be made against the judgment debtor's or occupier's will, only extend to the occupier of the house, and do not operate to protect a person who flees or puts his goods there to prevent the execution of process¹⁵. In order to justify the entering and searching of a stranger's house to seize the goods of the person against whom the process is issued, the enforcement officer or bailiff must prove that the goods to be seized were in fact in the house. He cannot justify by proving that there was reasonable ground of suspicion¹⁶. He may, however, justify entering an administrator's house, on a writ of fieri facias against an intestate, to search for the goods even though they may not be found there, because the administrator may naturally be expected to be in custody of them¹⁷.

The privilege is confined to dwelling houses. The outer door of premises occupied by the debtor, but not being his dwelling house nor within the curtilage of his dwelling house, may lawfully be broken open¹⁸.

In the case of an execution against property, the fact that an outer door is illegally broken open does not affect the validity of the subsequent seizure and sale of the property, although it gives a right of action to the person aggrieved¹⁹.

Once an entry has been made, the doors of particular rooms, cupboards or trunks may be broken open in order to complete the execution²⁰. It is not necessary to demand that inner doors, cupboards or trunks be opened before the breaking²¹.

The enforcement officer or bailiff must not remain upon premises for an unreasonable time²². In the case of a stranger's premises, the enforcement officer or bailiff enters subject to the further peril of being a trespasser if the debtor's goods are not found upon the premises²³.

The enforcement officer or bailiff may not legally take goods from the judgment debtor's person²⁴.

1311. Notice of seizure.

When first executing a writ of fieri facias¹, the relevant enforcement officer² must deliver to the debtor or leave at each place where execution is levied a notice in the prescribed form³ informing the debtor of the execution⁴.

Any bailiff upon levying execution must deliver to the debtor or leave at the place where execution is levied a notice of the warrant⁵.

1312. Entry to enforce writ or warrant of delivery.

The rules regarding rights of entry set out above¹ apply in so far as they are applicable to the delivery of goods². Thus, an enforcement officer or bailiff cannot break into a house to execute a writ or warrant of delivery or even of specific delivery³.

RIGHTS OF ENTRY AND SEIZURE/(B) Executing Writs and Warrants against Goods/1313. Entry to enforce writ of sequestration.

1313. Entry to enforce writ of sequestration.

Generally speaking, it is the duty of the sequestrators immediately¹ upon receipt of the writ of sequestration² to enter upon the contemnor's property and to take possession of all his real and personal estate. In so doing they act upon the instructions of the person on whose application the writ was issued, who is answerable in damages for any wrong done to any third person³.

In taking possession of property under the writ, sequestrators are not expected to use force. They may, however, break inner doors or boxes to get possession of property affected by the writ⁴. They may not interfere with the person of the contemnor⁵ and they must resort to the court for assistance in obtaining possession if they are otherwise unable to obtain it. Any resistance to or interference with the sequestrators in their duties by any person, whether in defence of his own property or otherwise, is a contempt of court⁶ and on such resistance or disturbance an injunction will be granted to give the sequestrators possession⁷.

A sequestrator may be guilty of contempt of court if he abuses his powers⁸.

1314. Protection of officers.

No county court officer¹ in executing a court warrant, and no person at whose instance any such warrant is executed, is to be deemed a trespasser by reason of any irregularity or informality in any proceeding on the validity of which the warrant depends, or in the form of the warrant, or in the mode of executing it². Any person aggrieved³ may bring a claim for any special damage sustained by him by reason of the irregularity or informality against the person guilty of it⁴ but, unless the damages awarded exceed £2, can recover no costs⁵.

In any claim commenced against a person for anything done in pursuance of the County Courts Act 1984, the production of the county court warrant is to be deemed sufficient proof of the authority of the court previous to the issue of the warrant⁶.

No claim may be commenced against any bailiff⁷ for anything done in obedience to a warrant issued by the district judge⁸ unless (1) a demand for inspection of the warrant and for a copy of it is made or left at the office of the bailiff by the party intending to bring the claim, or his legal representative⁹ or agent; and (2) the bailiff refuses or neglects to comply with the demand within six days after it is made¹⁰. The demand must be in writing and signed by the person making it¹¹.

If a claim is commenced against a bailiff in a case where such a demand has been made and not complied with, judgment must be given for the bailiff if the warrant is produced or proved at the trial, notwithstanding any defect of jurisdiction or other irregularity in the warrant; but the district judge who issued the warrant may be joined as a defendant in the claim¹². If the district judge is so joined and judgment is given against him, the costs to be recovered by the claimant against the district judge include such costs as the claimant is liable to pay to the bailiff¹³.

1315. Property which may be seized; in general.

Where an enforcement officer¹ or other person who is under a duty to execute a writ of execution² is executing it, the officer may, by virtue of the writ, seize any goods³ of the execution debtor that are not exempt goods, and any money, banknotes, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialties or securities for money belonging to the execution debtor⁴. Exempt goods are:

- 948 (1) such tools, books, vehicles and other items of equipment as are necessary to the execution debtor for use personally by him in his employment, business or vocation⁵;
- 949 (2) such clothing, bedding, furniture, household equipment and provisions as are necessary for satisfying the basic domestic needs of the execution debtor and his family⁶.

Similarly, every bailiff or officer executing any warrant of execution⁷ issued from a county court against the goods of any person⁸ may by virtue of it seize any of that person's goods except those listed in heads (1) and (2) above, and may also seize any money, banknotes, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialties or securities for money belonging to that person⁹.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents require the enforcement agent¹⁰ to produce an inventory of the goods seized and leave it with the debtor¹¹, or at the premises, with any other documents that are required by regulations or statute¹².

The goods and chattels and other property seized under a writ of fieri facias must be those of the judgment debtor and not of any other person¹³. At common law, goods and corporeal chattels, capable of sale, were alone seizable under a writ of fieri facias, and in general real property was not so seizable¹⁴.

1316. Guidance for enforcement agents seizing goods.

The National Standards for Enforcement Agents stress that enforcement agents¹ may only take goods in accordance with the appropriate regulations² or statute³. In addition creditors⁴ may agree other restrictions with agents acting on their behalf⁵.

The National Standards require enforcement agents:

- 950 (1) to ensure that goods are handled with reasonable care so that they do not suffer any damage while in the agents' possession and to have insurance in place for goods in transit so that if damage occurs this is covered by the policy. A receipt for the goods removed should be given to the debtor or left at the premises⁶;
- 951 (2) not to remove anything clearly identifiable as an item belonging to, or for the exclusive use of, a child⁷;
- 952 (3) to take reasonable steps to satisfy themselves that the value of the goods impounded in satisfaction of the judgment does not exceed the value of the debt and charges owed⁸.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/A. SEIZURE OF PROPERTY/(A) Property which may be Seized/1317. Leasehold interests.

1317. Leasehold interests.

Leasehold interests in land are affected by the writ of fieri facias¹. The term is bound by the issue of the writ in the same manner as were goods at common law². In the case of a term of years no seizure of the land by the enforcement officer is possible, as he has no right to possession³, but the judgment debtor's term is sold by the enforcement officer and assigned under his seal of office without seizure or possession⁴. The judgment debtor cannot be ejected by the enforcement officer⁵, but the purchaser has a right of entry upon which, if necessary, he must bring a claim⁶.

A sale of a term of years by the enforcement officer is not an assignment of the term by the judgment debtor so as to cause a forfeiture of the lease operating in the event of assignment⁷. If a forfeiture occurs under a covenant expressly directed against an execution this does not entitle a purchaser to recover money paid upon a contract to purchase 'the debtor's interest (if any)'⁸.

1 In the case of leaseholds, this applies however short the term (Sparrow v Earl of Bristol (1813) 1 Marsh 10; Doe d Westmoreland v Smith (1827) 1 Man & Ry KB 137), eg a yearly tenancy, where the execution debtor had entered under an agreement for a lease and paid rent: Doe d Westmoreland v Smith (1827) 1 Man & Ry KB 137; see also Ronan v King [1894] 2 IR 648, CA. As to other chattels real see PARA 1318.

2 See PARA 1295. An assignment by the execution debtor subsequent to the issue of the writ is therefore of no effect against an assignment by the enforcement officer: Burdon v Kennedy (1757) 3 Atk 739. Where the writ is returned without the term being sold, however, a person who became an incumbrancer on the term while the writ was in the hands of the enforcement officer will rank before a second fieri facias issued after the return: Williams v Craddock (1831) 4 Sim 313. As to the registration of writs and orders affecting land see PARA 1250.

3 Coleman v Rawlinson (1858) 1 F & F 330.

4 A deed is required under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 52(1): Coleman v Rawlinson (1858) 1 F & F 330; Harley v Harley (1860) 11 I Ch R 451 (decided under earlier legislation). It has been held that the deed may be executed with the sheriff's seal by the undersheriff, and is good on ejectment without proof of his authority: Doe d James v Brawn (1821) 5 B & Ald 243; Wood v Rowcliffe (1846) 6 Hare 183. The sale of the term is good, notwithstanding that the assignment was not executed until after the return of the writ: Doe v Donston (1818) 1 B & Ald 230. The deed is, however, necessary for the vesting of the term in the purchaser (Playfair v Musgrove (1845) 14 M & W 239), and entry and payment of the purchase price are not a substitute for it (Doe d Hughes v Jones (1842) 1 Dowl NS 352).

5 R v Deane (1680) 2 Show 85. The enforcement officer is liable to a claim for trespass if he attempts it: Playfair v Musgrove (1845) 14 M & W 239.

6 If he cannot enter peaceably (Taylor v Cole (1791) 1 Hy BI 555, Ex Ch; explained in Playfair v Musgrove (1845) 14 M & W 239 at 247 per Rolfe B); see also Doe d Batten v Murless (1817) 6 M & S 110; and Bac Abr, Execution (C), where the proposition in the text is directly asserted.

8 Griffin v Caddell (1875) IR 9 CL 488. As to the effect of such a contract see also Ronan v King [1894] 2 IR 648, CA. If the enforcement officer makes a misdescription of the term the contract will be avoided, but not if he sells all the debtor's interest: see Palmer's Case (1597) 4 Co Rep 74a. A sale of 'the debtor's interest' does not pass a licence: Re Gilmer (1885) 17 LR 1r 1.

Rentcharges and incorporeal property.

1318. Rentcharges and incorporeal property.

A rentcharge upon land for a term of years or a Crown annuity in the nature of such a rentcharge can be sold under a writ of fieri facias¹. A writ of fieri facias which affects land² should be registered or protected at the Land Registry³.

At common law incorporeal things are generally exempt from seizure under a fieri facias, but this is now subject to the statutory exceptions in respect of the judgment debtor's specialities or securities for money⁴.

2 For these purposes, 'land' includes land of any tenure and mines and minerals, whether or not severed from the surface, buildings or parts of buildings (whether the division is horizontal, vertical or made in any other way) and other corporeal hereditaments, also a manor, an advowson and a rent and other incorporeal hereditaments, and an easement, right, privilege or benefit in, over or derived from land, but not an undivided share in land, and 'hereditament' means real property which, on an intestacy occurring before 1 January 1926, might have devolved on an heir: Land Charges Act 1972 s 17(1); and see LAND CHARGES.

1319. Fixtures.

The fact that no real property can be seized under a writ of fieri facias excludes from its operation such fixtures as would, under the old law, have descended to the judgment debtor's heir as distinguished from his personal representative¹; but such fixtures as can, between landlord and tenant, be severed by the tenant can be seized on a fieri facias against the tenant². Where the lease comprises tenant's fixtures, the enforcement officer may sever them and sell them separately³.

Such fixtures include eg a dyer's vat (Day v Bisbitch (1595) Cro Eliz 374), and millstones, tackling and implements of a mill (Place v Fagg (1829) 4 Man & Ry KB 277); see also Bain v Brand (1876) 1 App Cas 762, HL; and LANDLORD AND TENANT vol 27(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 173.

1320. Heirlooms.

Heirlooms, properly so called, are exempt from seizure under a fieri facias as being realty, while chattels held under trusts, which are commonly known as heirlooms, are also probably excluded¹.

¹ As to heirlooms and quasi heirlooms generally see REAL PROPERTY vol 39(2) (Reissue) PARA 89. As to the question of equitable interests generally see PARA 1325; and see Foley v Burnell (1785) 4 Bro Parl Cas 319, HL, where the property in chattels left as heirlooms had vested absolutely in the judgment debtor, and the chattels became seizable.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/A. SEIZURE OF PROPERTY/(A) Property which may be Seized/1321. Growing crops.

1321. Growing crops.

Growing crops which are produced by human labour¹ can be seized under a fieri facias². Thus the enforcement officer can seize corn or potatoes, but not trees, or grass, or apples upon trees³. Having seized growing crops the enforcement officer may cut, thresh or dress them⁴, and the usual time for the removal of the goods by a purchaser from the enforcement officer will be extended until the ripening of the crops seized⁵.

Where the judgment debtor is tenant of land let to farm, there are certain statutory provision for the landlord's benefit, which may be summarised as follows⁶. The enforcement officer may not remove or sell for removal any straw, chaff, colder, turnips or manure⁷, and where there exists any covenant or written agreement against the removal of produce from the land, between the tenant and landlord, the enforcement officer, if he has written notice of the covenant or agreement⁸, cannot (except at the suit of the Crown)⁹ remove such produce or sell it for removal¹⁰.

The enforcement officer may, however, sell to a purchaser under a written contract to abide by the terms of such covenants or agreements, or by the tenant's customary liabilities¹¹. Further, whether or not there are such covenants or agreements, any purchaser¹² will be bound by the judgment debtor's customary or contractual liabilities in respect of the taking or disposal of those crops, manures etc¹³. No clover or artificial grasses growing under standing corn can be seized or sold in execution¹⁴.

The enforcement officer is not liable for any breach or omission to comply with these statutory provisions unless the breach or omission is wilful¹⁵.

Corn may be seized by the enforcement officer when green in the blade (Gwilliam v Barker (1815) 1 Price 274), though probably not if not appearing above ground (Baghaw v Farnsworth (1860) 2 LT 390). When the corn belongs to a tenant, note, however, the prior right of distress given to a landlord by the Landlord and Tenant Act 1851 s 2: see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 1043. 4 The expenses of cutting etc may not, however, be deducted against the judgment creditor or the debtor without their authority (Re Woodham, ex p Conder (1887) 20 QBD 40); nor can they be allowed against the trustee in bankruptcy (Re Woodham, ex p Conder (1887) 20 QBD 40).

The whole Act is repealed, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 ss 62(3), 146, Sch 13 para 5, Sch 23 Pt 3. At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

7 See the Sale of Farming Stock Act 1816 s 1 (prospectively repealed: see note 6). 'Colder' is believed to be an East Anglian term for corn not separated from the chaff by ordinary threshing.

8 The tenant must give notice to the enforcement officer of all such covenants or agreements of which he knows, and of his landlord's address, and forthwith on executing process the enforcement officer must give notice of his so doing to the landlord and his agent, waiting for a reply until the last day possible for the sale: see the Sale of Farming Stock Act 1816 s 2 (ss 2-11 amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1888 and prospectively repealed (see note 6)).

10 See the Sale of Farming Stock Act 1816 s 1 (prospectively repealed: see note 6). The Act does not extend to straw, turnips or other articles which the tenant may remove from the farm consistently with some contract in writing: see s 8 (as amended (see note 8) and prospectively repealed (see note 6)).

11 See the Sale of Farming Stock Act 1816 s 3 (as amended (see note 8) and prospectively repealed (see note 6)). Under any such contract the purchaser will have the facilities which the tenant would have had for consuming his crop (use of the barns, stables and buildings etc (see s 3) (as so amended and prospectively repealed)), and will be protected from any distress by the landlord upon the crop or the objects so used in consuming it (see s 6 (as so amended and prospectively repealed)); and the enforcement officer or purchaser will be protected against claims for trespass based upon the exercise of such facilities (see s 10 (as so amended and prospectively repealed)). The enforcement of contracts made under these provisions is provided for: see s 4 (as so amended and prospectively repealed). The enforcement officer must before sale make inquiry as to the landlord's address: see s 5 (as so amended and prospectively repealed).

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/A. SEIZURE OF PROPERTY/(A) Property which may be Seized/1322. Money and securities for money.

1322. Money and securities for money.

At common law the requirement that the property seizable under fieri facias should be capable of sale¹ excluded from the operation of the writ money belonging to the debtor, but to this rule a statutory exception was created, under which the enforcement officer may seize the money or bank notes (whether of the Bank of England or of any other bank) and any cheques, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialities or other securities for money belong to the judgment debtor². To be seizable under this provision, the money must be in the debtor's possession or control, and not merely be payable to³ or held in trust for him⁴. It has been held that a cheque payable to the debtor and in the hands of the Accountant General of the High Court, but not delivered, cannot be seized⁵; and that securities for money do not include life insurance policies⁶. When execution issues against a pawnbroker the enforcement officer may seize goods in pledge in the pawnbroker's possession, but may sell only those in respect of which the period for redemption has expired; with respect to the rest he has a right to possess the pawnbroker's qualified interest⁷, to sell when the time for redemption has expired or to receive any money paid for redemption⁸.

On the seizure of money or bank notes the enforcement officer's duty is to deliver them, or a sufficient part of them, to the judgment creditor, and to pay over any surplus remaining after payment of his poundage and expenses to the judgment debtor⁹.

On the seizure of other securities the enforcement officer's duty is to hold them as security for the amount due under the writ, and he has power¹⁰ to sue for the recovery of the sum secured when the time for payment arrives¹¹. Payment to the enforcement officer by a party liable on such security discharges him to the extent of his payment. The enforcement officer must pay over the money recovered, or a sufficient part of it, to the judgment creditor, and any surplus remaining, after payment of his poundage and expenses, to the judgment debtor¹².

The provisions summarised above must now be considered with the new provision made in the Courts Act 2003¹³ and the County Courts Act 1984¹⁴ allowing the seizure of money, banknotes, bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, specialities or securities for money. These provisions are discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁵.

The enforcement officer may seize a ship (whether British or foreign¹) or share of a ship². Seizure may be effected by putting a man aboard with a warrant, which he should affix to the mast, but actual seizure of a British ship does not appear to be necessary³. The sale of a registered British ship is completed by transfer of the ship, or share, by bill of sale⁴.

See also Chasteauneuf v Capeyron (1882) 7 App Cas 127, PC; Harley v Harley (1860) 11 I Ch R 451. In the latter case the sheriff had himself registered as transferee, and then transferred by bill of sale to a purchaser. There appears to be no reason why a share in ship which is not at sea should not be sold by the enforcement officer in whose district the ship is registered.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/A. SEIZURE OF PROPERTY/(A) Property which may be Seized/1325. Equitable interests.

1325. Equitable interests.

As a general rule, equitable interests cannot be seized under a writ of fieri facias¹, but this does not apply where the whole of the beneficial interest is vested in the judgment debtor². Thus under a fieri facias against a beneficiary his equitable interests cannot be seized³ unless he is also entitled to the whole of the beneficial interest⁴. The rule also excludes from the operation of the writ all equities of redemption⁵. Where, however, the legal ownership vests in the judgment debtor by virtue of a rule of equity, as under a contract for the sale to him of after-acquired property, the enforcement officer can seize the goods⁶.

2 Stevens v Hince (1914) 110 LT 935.

3 Under the old divided system of the courts of law and equity it was, however, the practice of the Court of Chancery where the judgment creditor had issued his writ to grant an order authorising the sheriff to seize the chattels or land, or even to grant an order giving validity to acts done by him, where the only bar to his seizure at law was the fact that there was a trustee holding the legal ownership: see eg Horsley v Cox (1869) 4 Ch App 92. As to the reforms of the court system effected by the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 (repealed) see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 601 et seq.

4 Stevens v Hince (1914) 110 LT 935.

5 Since the Law of Property Act 1925, a mortgagor of a legal estate in land retains a legal estate: this is not affected by a fieri facias since, at common law prior to the Judicature Acts, a fieri facias could not touch equities of redemption: Scott v Scholey (1807) 8 East 467; Lyster v Dolland (1792) 1 Ves 431; Re Duke of Newcastle (1869) LR 8 Eq 700. Nor does a fieri facias affect the equity of redemption of chattels legally mortgaged: Ladbroke v Crickett (1788) 2 Term Rep 649; Dickinson v Kitchen (1858) 8 E & B 789 (ships); Steward v Lombe (1820) 1 Brod & Bing 506; Cross v Barnes (1877) 46 LJQB 479 (fixtures comprised in a mortgage).

6 Under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 49(1), which provides that in case of a conflict between the rules of law and the rules of equity, the rules of equity are to prevail: see Anon [1875] WN 203. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. For property to vest under this rule it must be taken into possession (Holroyd v Marshall (1862) 10 HL Cas 191), and, if it has so vested in another person, it cannot be seized under a fieri facias against the judgment debtor (see Anon (1876) Bitt Prac Cas 128). All the cases cited in this note were decided under earlier legislation. As to after-acquired property generally see SETTLEMENTS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 644 et seq.

Goods in the hands of trustees or executors.

1326. Goods in the hands of trustees or executors.

Under a fieri facias against a trustee, chattels of the trust estate cannot be seized by the enforcement officer¹, and where a fieri facias has issued against an executor or administrator of a deceased person in respect of a personal debt of the executor or administrator, the enforcement officer cannot take in execution goods and chattels of the deceased in his hands as such personal representative², unless there has been such lapse of time and there are such circumstances³ as to lead to the conclusion that the deceased's creditors have been satisfied⁴.

If, however, the goods are sold by the enforcement officer upon a fieri facias against an executor who is also residuary legatee, and the purchaser (though having knowledge that the goods were assets of the testator) has no knowledge of outstanding debts or other reason why the sale of the goods is improper, the sale will be valid (Nugent v Gifford (1738) 1 Atk 463, explained in Graham v Drummond [1896] 1 Ch 968 at 974; and see Mead v Lord of Orrery (1745) 3 Atk 235; Taylor v Hawkins (1803) 8 Ves 209; Whale v Booth (1784) 4 Doug KB 36; Storry v Walsh (1854) 18 Beav 559; see also Graham v Drummond [1896] 1 Ch 968 where the same rule is extended to equitable execution), although the executor could have challenged the enforcement officer's right to seize (Fenwick v Laycock (1841) 2 QB 108). In a claim for a false return of nulla bona it lies upon the enforcement officer to prove, if such is the case, that the debtor's title was merely that of a personal representative: Kelly v Browne (1883) 12 LR Ir 348. As to returns of nulla bona see PARA 1282.

Joint property and property of husband and wife.

1327. Joint property and property of husband and wife.

Where goods belong to the judgment debtor jointly or in common with some other person, they may be seized under a fieri facias unless the co-owner has become solely entitled by survival upon the death of the debtor before the delivery of the writ¹.

Where execution has issued against a husband, property given by the husband to his wife may be seized if after the gift it continues to be in the husband's order and disposition or reputed ownership² or if it is avoided under certain provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986³. Similarly, goods claimed by a wife under a deed not registered as a bill of sale may be taken if they are in the husband's possession or apparent possession⁴, but personal chattels belonging to a wife will not be deemed to be in her husband's possession or apparent possession, or in his order and disposition or reputed ownership, merely because they remain in the house where the husband and wife are living together⁵.

(B) EFFECT OF SEIZURE BY ENFORCEMENT OFFICER UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS

1328. What constitutes seizure.

For an act of the enforcement officer or bailiff to constitute a seizure of goods it is not necessary that there should be any physical contact with the goods seized¹, nor does such contact necessarily amount to seizure². An entry upon the premises on which the goods are situated, together with an intimation of an intention to seize the goods, will amount to a valid seizure³, even where the premises are extensive and the property seized widely scattered⁴, but some act must be done sufficient to intimate to the judgment debtor or his employees that a seizure has been made⁵, and it is not sufficient to enter upon the premises and demand the debt⁶. Any act which, if not done with the court's authority, would amount to a trespass to goods will constitute a seizure of them when done under the writ or warrant⁷. Whether or not there has been a seizure is a question of fact⁸. The enforcement officer or bailiff should clearly specify which of the debtor's goods have been seized as he must not over-levy⁹.

1329. Effect of seizure under writ of fieri facias.

By the seizure the goods are placed in the custody of the law, and the seizure is for the benefit of those who are by law entitled¹. The general property in the goods remains in the execution debtor², though what is called a special property in them vests in the enforcement officer, so that he can maintain claims for trespass or conversion against any person who takes them away³. No property in the goods passes to the execution creditor⁴. By the seizure they are taken out of the execution debtor's order and disposition⁵, and may be taken out of his apparent possession⁶.

Where the debtor becomes bankrupt after seizure of the goods but before their sale, the official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy is entitled to the benefit of the execution in priority to the judgment creditor⁷.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/A. SEIZURE OF PROPERTY/(B) Effect of Seizure by Enforcement Officer under High Court Process/1330. Retaining possession after seizure; 'walking possession'.

1330. Retaining possession after seizure; 'walking possession'.

After seizure of goods under a writ of fieri facias it is the enforcement officer's duty to retain possession of them until sale¹. If he abandons the goods, they are no longer subject to the writ², and he will be liable to the judgment creditor for damages³. He may, however, after withdrawal, re-enter if directed to do so by the judgment creditor⁴. The question whether an abandonment has taken place is a question of fact, in determining which any absence of the enforcement officer or any person acting under his authority, unless satisfactorily explained (for example that it was caused by some urgent necessity⁵), will be considered to be prima facie an abandonment⁶.

Once the enforcement officer has completed seizure, he may retain possession of the goods even without leaving a person on the premises, if he has taken 'walking possession'⁷. Walking possession is usually taken by obtaining the judgment debtor's written consent⁸, but the consent may be signed in the debtor's absence by any responsible person in the house such as the judgment debtor's wife or a caretaker⁹. Whether the enforcement officer has retained possession of goods where the judgment debtor has failed or refused to sign an agreement to give walking possession is a matter of inference to be deduced from the evidence as a whole¹⁰. Seizure relates only to those goods which the enforcement officer has clearly indicated he has seized, and walking possession is also restricted to those goods¹¹. Where walking possession is taken of the contents of a shop, the enforcement officer's continual possession is not defeated by an oral undertaking by the judgment debtor to replace stocks sold¹².

A withdrawal so as to facilitate a sale of a business to a limited company is an abandonment: Bagshawes Ltd v Deacon [1898] 2 QB 173, CA. The fact that the officer, after seizure and before departure from the premises, has left his warrant in a drawer in the debtor's house, will not prevent his absence from being an abandonment: Blades v Arundale (1813) 1 M & S 711.

7 In National Commercial Bank of Scotland Ltd v Arcam Demolition and Construction Ltd [1966] 2 QB 593 at 599, [1966] 3 All ER 113 at 114-115, CA, Lord Denning MR described walking possession thus: 'It was at one time thought that, in order to retain possession the bailiff, as the sheriff's officer, must actually remain in the house with the goods. He used to sit down in the kitchen and make himself at home; but that has long since been regarded as unnecessary. It is sufficient if he visits the house frequently to make sure that the goods are safely there and not removed. He then still retains possession; but he need not even do as much as that--he need not visit the house--if he gets an agreement signed by some responsible person in the house to see that the goods are not removed. After getting such an agreement he is said to take 'walking possession'. In the same case Davies LJ (at 600-601 and at 115) approved the Lord Chancellor's departmental circular to county court registrars (now known as district judges), part of which read: 'The Lord Chancellor considers that it is to the public advantage that walking possession should be adopted by high bailiffs (now district judges) to the utmost possible extent, goods being removed or a possession man being put into close possession only in the cases where it is considered that the course is necessary to safeguard the goods'. See also Watson v Murray & Co [1955] 2 QB 1, [1955] 1 All ER 350; and PARA 1371. As to walking possession in distress cases generally and in distress for non-domestic rates or council tax cases see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARAS 1018, 1106, 1118.

8 A copy of the written consent is left with the judgment debtor. The consent includes a list of the goods seized, and an undertaking by the judgment debtor not to remove the goods, to inform any other person who may wish to levy that the goods have already been seized, and to notify the enforcement officer of any such visit, and also an authorisation for the enforcement officer to re-enter the premises at any time. 1335. Penalty for rescuing goods seized in execution.

If any person rescues or attempts to rescue any goods seized in execution¹ under process of a county court, he is liable on summary conviction to imprisonment for a term not exceeding one month or a fine of an amount not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, or to both², or, alternatively, may be committed to prison by the judge³ for contempt of court⁴ for a specified period not exceeding one month or fined by the judge an amount not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale, or both⁵. A bailiff⁶ of the court may take the offender into custody with or without a warrant and bring him before the judge⁷.

The judge may at any time revoke an order committing a person to prison under these provisions and, if he is already in custody, order his discharge⁸.

Before imposing any penalty under this jurisdiction, the judge must give the alleged offender the opportunity to obtain legal advice and representation and allow time for him to contest the allegations if he does not admit them and put forward any mitigation⁹. An alleged contemnor has a common law right to adequate notice of what is being alleged, and nothing in the above provisions cuts down that right. Moreover, as a matter of good practice, the charge should be put in writing and, unless it is clear that the defendant has already read and understood it, it must be read over to him at the outset of a hearing under these provisions in order to eliminate any possibility that he is unaware of the case which he has to answer¹⁰.

At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

3 In relation to a county court, 'judge' for the purposes of the County Courts Act 1984 means a judge assigned to the district of that court under s 5(1), and any person sitting as a judge for that district under s 5(3), (4): s 147(1). See COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 724.

B. SALES UNDER EXECUTION

(A) SALE OF GOODS BY ENFORCEMENT OFFICER UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS

1336. Sale by enforcement officer.

The enforcement officer is not entitled to hand over goods seized under a writ of fieri facias to the judgment creditor in satisfaction of the debt¹, although at a sale the judgment creditor² or judgment debtor may be a purchaser of the goods³. It is the enforcement officer's duty, within a reasonable time after the seizure⁴, to sell the goods⁵ for a reasonable price⁶, and it is also his duty not to conduct the sale as to prevent them fetching such a price as might have been obtained⁷. He may not sell on the debtor's premises without the debtor's consent, except possibly if a sale elsewhere is impossible⁸. When the enforcement officer's term of office expires after the seizure of the goods but before they have been sold, it seems that he may sell the goods after he is out of office⁹.

Where any goods seized under a writ of execution issued from the High Court by an enforcement officer or other person under a duty to execute it, are to be sold for a sum exceeding £20 (including legal incidental expenses), the sale must, unless the court otherwise orders, be made by public auction, and not by bill of sale or private contract, and must be publicly advertised on, and during three days preceding, the day of sale¹⁰. It has, however, been held that if the sale is made otherwise than in fulfilment of these requirements its validity is not affected until set aside by the court¹¹.

4 It is no excuse that he considered the delay beneficial to all parties: Re Sheriff of Essex, Terrell v Fisher (1862) 10 WR 796. A week's delay to verify a notice of an act of bankruptcy has been held to be unreasonably long (Ayshford v Murray (1870) 23 LT 470), but no precise time is specified. Any unreasonable delay will, on proof of damage, but not otherwise (Re Sheriff of Essex, Terrell v Fisher (1862) 10 WR 796), render the enforcement officer liable to the judgment creditor (Aireton v Davis (1833) 3 Moo & S 138; Ayshford v Murray (1870) 23 LT 470; see also Mullet v Challis (1851) 16 QB 239), and to the judgment debtor (Carlile v Parkins (1822) 3 Stark 163; Ash v Dawnay (1852) 8 Exch 237).

5 The enforcement officer need not accept an indemnity offered by a claimant for not selling a chattel having special value, but may proceed to sell notwithstanding such offer: Harrison v Forster (1836) 4 Dowl 558.

6 It is not sufficient that he sells them to the highest bidder greatly under their value (Keightley v Birch (1814) 3 Camp 521); cf Cramer v Murphy (1887) 20 LR Ir 572, where it was held that the enforcement officer can sell at any price if the goods have been properly advertised and there is no negligence. The proper course, if an adequate price cannot be obtained at the sale, is to adjourn the sale to a named day (Edge v Kavanagh (1888) 24 LR Ir 1; and see Cramer v Murphy (1887) 20 LR Ir 572, where there were two adjournments), or to return that the goods remain on his hands for want of buyers (Keightley v Birch (1814) 3 Camp 521; Edge v Kavanagh (1888) 24 LR Ir 1).

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/B. SALES UNDER EXECUTION/(A) Sale of Goods by Enforcement Officer under High Court Process/1337. Sale otherwise than by public auction.

1337. Sale otherwise than by public auction.

An order of the court¹ that a sale under of goods seized under an execution may be made otherwise than by public auction² may be made on the application of (1) the person at whose instance the writ of execution³ under which the sale is to be made was issued; (2) the person against whom that writ was issued (the 'judgment debtor'); (3) if the writ was directed to a sheriff, that sheriff; and (4) if the writ was directed to one or more enforcement officers, the relevant enforcement officer⁴. Such an application must be made in accordance with Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁵ and the application notice must contain a short statement of the grounds of the application⁶.

Where the applicant for an order under these provisions is not the sheriff or enforcement officer, the sheriff or enforcement officer must, on the demand of the applicant, send to the applicant a list stating whether he has notice of the issue of another writ or writs of execution against the goods of the judgment debtor and, so far as is known to him, the name and address of every creditor who has obtained the issue of another such writ of execution, and where the sheriff or enforcement officer is the applicant, he must prepare such a list⁷.

If the person who seized the goods has notice of another execution or other executions, the court must not consider an application for leave to sell privately until the prescribed notice⁸ has been given to the other execution creditor or creditors⁹. An execution creditor given such notice is entitled to appear before the court and to be heard on the application for the order¹⁰. Not less than four clear days before the hearing the applicant must serve the application notice on each of the other persons by whom the application might have been made and on every person named in the list mentioned above¹¹.

The applicant must produce the list to the court on the hearing of the application¹². Every person on whom the application notice was served may attend and be heard on the hearing of the application¹³.

Where a creditor has issued execution against the goods or land of a company or has attached any debt due to it, and the company is subsequently wound up, then despite the rights of the liquidator as against the creditor and the enforcement officer¹, a person who purchases in good faith under a sale² by an enforcement officer or other officer charged with the execution of the writ³ any goods of a company on which execution has been levied in all cases acquires a good title to them against the liquidator⁴. Where the district judge¹ responsible for the execution of the warrant² is the district judge by whom it was issued and he has no notice of any other warrant or writ of execution³ against the goods of the debtor, an order that a sale under an execution may be made otherwise than by public auction⁴ may be made by the court⁵ of its own initiative⁶ with the consent of the execution creditor and the debtor or after giving them an opportunity of being heard⁷. Subject to that, such an order⁸ may be made on the application of the execution creditor or the debtor or the district judge responsible for the execution of the warrant⁹.

Where he is not the applicant for such an order, the district judge responsible for the execution of the warrant must, on the demand of the applicant, furnish him with a list containing the name and address of every execution creditor under any other warrant or writ of execution against the goods of the debtor of which the district judge has notice. 1345. Title acquired by purchaser.

Where any goods in the possession of an execution debtor at the time of seizure by a district judge¹ or other officer charged with the enforcement of a warrant or other process of execution² issued from a county court³ are sold by that district judge or other officer⁴ without any claims having been made to them, the purchaser of the goods so sold acquires a good title to those goods⁵, subject to the right of any lawful claimant⁶ to any remedy to which he may be entitled against any person other than the district judge or other officer⁷.

Where a creditor has issued execution against the goods or land of a company or has attached any debt due to it, and the company is subsequently wound up, then despite the rights of the liquidator as against the creditor and the district judge⁸, a person who purchases in good faith under a sale by an enforcement officer⁹ or other officer charged with the execution of the writ any goods of a company on which execution has been levied in all cases acquires a good title to them against the liquidator¹⁰. Similarly, nothing in the statutory provisions concerning the effect of an individual's bankruptcy on an execution against goods¹¹ entitles the trustee of a bankrupt's estate to claim goods from a person who has acquired them in good faith under a sale by an enforcement officer or other officer charged with an execution¹².

Where a claim is made to or in respect of any goods seized in execution under process of a county court, and the claimant does not comply with the statutory requirement to make a deposit or to give security¹³, the bailiff¹⁴ must sell the goods as if no such claim had been made, and pay the proceeds of the sale into court to abide the judge's decision¹⁵, unless the district judge decides that, in all the circumstances, the judge's decision on the claim ought to be awaited, in which case the goods must not be sold¹⁶. It has been held that where the goods are sold under this provision, the purchaser obtains a good title if the claimant is the real owner¹⁷, but the position is less clear if the claimant is not the real owner and the real owner makes no claim until after the sale¹⁸.

(A) IN GENERAL

1346. Third parties' interests in the debtor's property.

Where the judgment debtor is the owner of goods subject to the rights of other persons, the enforcement officer may seize the goods in execution under process of the High Court¹ if the debtor is entitled to the possession of them, and may sell his rights in them but not those of the other persons entitled. Thus, goods subject to an innkeeper's lien², or to a lien for work done upon them³, can be seized⁴, but goods seized under a distress for rent⁵, pledged, or hired out by the judgment debtor⁶, or goods in bond upon which advances have been made and which are held to the order of persons lending money to the judgment debtor⁷, cannot be seized, unless, perhaps, the advances are paid off by the execution creditor⁸.

The same principles will apply to seizure of goods in execution under process of a county court⁹.

1347. Debtor's interests in third parties' property.

Where the judgment debtor has a saleable interest in goods which are the property of some other person, and is entitled to possession of the goods, they may be seized by the enforcement officer in execution under process of the High Court¹, and the interest may be sold. Thus, if the goods are hired to the debtor for a term, his interest in them can be seized², although if, after notice from the owner, the enforcement officer purports to sell the absolute property in the goods, he may be liable for damages to the reversion³. If the hiring is of such a nature that the debtor has no saleable interest⁴, or if his interest has determined before seizure⁵, or is determinable by the fact of seizure⁶, the enforcement officer cannot legally seize; if he does seize and sell, the owner of goods hired to the judgment debtor and sold may recover a proportion of the proceeds of sale paid to the execution creditor⁷. Similarly, where the judgment debtor has a right of sale, as in the case of a pledge to a pawnbroker, his interest can be seized⁸; but where the debtor has a mere lien⁹, or is merely in possession of the goods as borrower, or upon deposit, the goods cannot be seized¹⁰.

The same principles will apply to seizure of goods in execution under process of a county court¹¹.

1 As to goods which may be seized in execution see PARA 1315 et seq.

2 In such cases, the owner could not maintain action (now known as a 'claim': see PARA 18) for conversion of or trespass to the goods because he had no right to possession of the goods: Bradley v Copley (1845) 1 CB 685; cf Jelks v Hayward [1905] 2 KB 460. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/C. THIRD PARTY INTERESTS/(A) In general/1348. Third parties' claims.

1348. Third parties' claims.

Those cases must now be considered in which a third party claims the goods adversely to the debtor. As a general rule it may be said that the enforcement officer may only seize and sell in execution under process of the High Court¹ goods which could be recovered, or retained, by the judgment debtor in a claim between him and such third party. To this rule there are, however, several exceptions.

In the first place, the enforcement officer may seize goods held by the third party under a conveyance or bill of sale by the judgment debtor executed in fraud of his creditors, although such a conveyance or bill would be valid against the judgment debtor². It may be noticed that the fact that the fraudulent conveyance is effected under the guise of a judgment and execution under a previous writ of fieri facias³ does not affect its invalidity against the enforcement officer acting under an execution in good faith⁴. It is the enforcement officer's duty to make all reasonable inquiries to ascertain whether a conveyance or prior writ of fieri facias relied on is fraudulent⁵. Where there are goods seized under a former writ, founded on a judgment fraudulent against a creditor seeking to enforce a subsequent execution, and those goods remain in the enforcement officer's hands or are capable of being seized, the enforcement officer is compellable to seize and sell the goods under that subsequent execution⁶.

In the second place, the enforcement officer seizing under a writ of fieri facias and the judgment creditor are not bound by estoppel affecting the judgment debtor; consequently, where the judgment debtor would be estopped from asserting his valid title to goods against the third person, the enforcement officer may nevertheless seize those goods⁷; similarly, the enforcement officer will not be precluded from raising defences against the third party which could not by reason of an estoppel be raised by the judgment debtor⁸.

In the third place, the enforcement officer can seize goods where the judgment debtor would not be entitled to them as against a claimant, in those cases where the claimant's title is derived from the judgment debtor and where, as previously explained⁹, the property in the goods is bound by the writ and the claimant's title is later in date than the date of such binding.

The same principles will apply to seizure of goods in execution under process of a county court¹⁰.

Where a claim is made to any goods taken or intended to be taken in execution, or to their proceeds, by a person other than the person against whom the process is issued, the enforcement officer or district judge may apply to the court for relief by way of interpleader¹¹.

A sale for good consideration is not fraudulent merely because it was made with intent to defeat an expected execution creditor: Wood v Dixie (1845) 7 QB 892; Holbird v Anderson (1793) 5 Term Rep 235; see also Darvill v Terry (1861) 6 H & N 807. 6 Imray v Magnay (1843) 11 M & W 267.

7 Richards v Johnston (1859) 4 H & N 660.

8 Eg that an assignment by the judgment debtor to the claimant was void as being an act of bankruptcy (Chase v Goble (1841) 2 Man & G 930), or as being subsequent to another bill of sale (Gadsden v Barrow (1854) 9 Exch 514); see also Edwards v English (1857) 7 E & B 564. The enforcement officer will not, however, be allowed to set up his own wrongdoing; eg in a claim by a landlord under the Landlord and Tenant Act 1709 s 1 (see PARA 1353), he will not be allowed to set up the title of a third person and allege that he had no right to seize at all: see Duck v Braddyll (1824) M'Cle 217.

9 See PARA 1295. This 'binding' operates only against the property of the judgment debtor, and therefore, when the claimant's title is hostile to and independent of that of the judgment debtor, it will prevail against the enforcement officer.

(B) PROTECTION OF OFFICERS

1349. Protection of officer selling goods under execution.

Where any goods¹ in the possession of an execution debtor are seized by an enforcement officer or other person under a duty to execute a writ of execution² issued from the High Court are sold by that officer without any claims having been made to them, the purchaser of the goods acquires a good title to them and no person is entitled to recover against the officer or anyone acting under his authority for any sale of the goods or for paying over the proceeds prior to the receipt of a claim to the goods, unless it is proved that the person from whom recovery is sought had notice, or might by making reasonable inquiry have ascertained, that the goods were not the property of the execution debtor³.

Similarly, where any goods in the possession of an execution debtor at the time of seizure by district judge⁴ or other officer charged with the enforcement of a warrant or other process of execution⁵ issued from a county court⁶ are sold by that district judge or other officer without any claims having been made to them, no person is entitled to recover against the district judge or other officer, or anyone lawfully acting under his authority, for any sale of the goods, or for paying over the proceeds prior to the receipt of a claim to the goods⁷, unless it is proved that the person from whom the recovery is sought had notice, or might by making reasonable inquiry have ascertained, that the goods were not the property of the execution debtor⁸.

Nothing in these provisions affects the right of any lawful claimant⁹ to any remedy to which he may be entitled against any person other than the enforcement officer, district judge or other officer charged with the execution of the writ¹⁰.

Interpleader in the High Court and county court.

(C) INTERPLEADER

1350. Interpleader in the High Court and county court.

In interpleader in the High Court, relief is available to a sheriff¹ where a claim is made by any person, other than the person against whom the process is issued, to any money, goods, or chattels taken, or intended to be taken, by a sheriff in execution under any process or to the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels².

Where a person makes a claim to or in respect of any goods seized under a warrant of execution³, or in respect of the proceeds or value of the goods ('interpleader under execution')⁴, the district judge⁵ may, as well before as after any proceedings are brought against him, call before the court⁶ the party at whose instance the process was issued and the party making the claim⁷. Upon the issue of the interpleader notice⁸ any claim brought in any county court, or other court, in respect of the interpleader claim or of any damage arising out of the execution of the warrant must be stayed⁹. The stay is limited to the persons who would be parties to the interpleader notice¹⁰.

On the hearing of interpleader proceedings on the district judge's application, the judge¹¹ must adjudicate upon the interpleader claim and must also adjudicate between the parties or between either of them and the district judge upon any claim to damages arising or capable of arising out of the execution of the warrant by the district judge. The judge makes such order in respect of any such claim and the costs of the proceedings as he thinks fit¹².

Damages ought to be awarded against the district judge where the interpleader claimant can prove substantial loss or injury¹³, although if a claim for damages is not made during the proceedings it cannot be made afterwards¹⁴.

Particular provision is made where interpleader proceedings are ordered to be transferred from the High Court under an execution¹⁵.

Sheriff's interpleader¹⁶ and interpleader proceedings under execution are discussed in detail elsewhere in this title¹⁷.

1 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 refers to a sheriff, and references in that Order to a sheriff are to be construed as including references to an individual authorised to act as an enforcement officer under the Courts Act 2003 and any other officer charged with the execution of process by or under the authority of the High Court: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 1(2). As to the abolition of any rule of law requiring a writ of execution issued from the High Court to be directed to a sheriff see the Courts Act 2003 s 99(2); and PARA 1258 text and note 8. As to persons other than a sheriff being protected see Levasseur v Mason and Barry Ltd[1891] 2 QB 73, CA (receiver of judgment debtor's property appointed by the court). The rule would also allow an application for relief by a sequestrator appointed by the court.

7 County Courts Act 1984 s 101(1) (s 101 amended by virtue of the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 74(1), (3)). Where a claim is made to or in respect of any goods seized in execution under process of a county court, a district judge has an obligation to consider whether the claim is on its face sufficient in detail and credible in substance. Once, however, a claim meets those elementary tests, the district judge has no option but to issue an interpleader summons under the County Courts Act 1984 s 101 (as so amended): Newman (t/a Mantella Publishing) v Modern Bookbinders Ltd [2000] 2 All ER 814, [2000] 1 WLR 2559, CA. As from a day to be appointed, the County Courts Act 1984 s 101 does not apply in the case of goods seized under the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 (see PARA 1386 et seq): County Courts Act 1984 s 101(4) (added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 62(3), Sch 13 paras 68, 75). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

10 Thus in Hills v Renny (1880) 5 Ex D 313, CA, it was held that the provision did not apply to proceedings against purchasers who had bought under a sale by the bailiff which had occurred before the action. It was not argued in this case that there was a discretionary power to order a stay under the inherent jurisdiction of the court. 1351. Priority of claim for tax.

If at any time at which any goods or chattels belonging to any person (the 'person in default') are liable to be taken by virtue of any execution¹ or other process, warrant, or authority whatever, or by virtue of any assignment, on any account or pretence whatever, except at the suit of the landlord for rent, the person in default is in arrears in respect of any such sums as are referred to below², the goods or chattels may not be so taken unless on demand made by the collector of taxes the person at whose suit the execution or seizure is made, or to whom the assignment was made, pays or causes to be paid to the collector, before the sale or removal of the goods or chattels, all such sums as have fallen due at or before the date of seizure³. The sums referred to are:

- 953 (1) sums due from the person in default on account of deductions of income tax from taxable earnings⁴ paid during the period of 12 months next before the date of seizure, being deductions which the person in default was liable to make under PAYE regulations⁵ less the amount of the repayments of income tax which he was liable to make during that period; and
- 954 (2) sums due from the person in default in respect of deductions required to be made by him for that period under the statutory provisions⁶ relating to sub-contractors in the construction industry⁷.

If those sums are not paid within ten days of the date of the demand referred to above, the collector may distrain the goods and chattels notwithstanding the seizure or assignment, and may proceed to the sale of them⁸ for the purpose of obtaining payment of the whole of those sums, and the reasonable costs and charges attending such distress and sale⁹.

Where, however, tax is claimed for more than one year, the person at whose instance the seizure has been made may, on paying to the collector the tax which is due for one whole year, proceed in his seizure in like manner as if no tax had been claimed¹⁰.

As from a day to be appointed these provisions will no longer apply¹¹.

Provision for rent where goods seized in execution under High Court process.

1352. Provision for rent where goods seized in execution under High Court process.

Where a landlord who has a claim for rent due against his tenant has distrained¹ and is in possession of the goods, the enforcement officer will not be entitled to levy upon them in the event of a writ of fieri facias issuing against the tenant². If, however, the landlord has not distrained before the enforcement officer seizes the goods, they are in the custody of the law and, as a general rule, exempt from distress by the landlord³, and this exemption extends both while in the enforcement officer's hands, and also for a time after the sale reasonably sufficient for the removal of the goods by the purchaser⁴.

Although a seizure by the enforcement officer prevents the landlord from distraining, he is entitled under an execution in the High Court to have the rent due, not exceeding:

- 955 (1) four weeks' arrears, if the premises are let on a weekly rent⁵;
- 956 (2) four terms' arrears, if the premises are let for any other term less than a year⁶; or
- 957 (3) one year's rent,

paid to him before the removal of the goods from the premises⁷. This subject is dealt with elsewhere in this work⁸, but it may here be noticed that where a claim is made by the landlord the enforcement officer is liable to the landlord not only for removal of the goods without payment of the rent⁹, but also for a negligent sale of the goods, whereby the landlord loses the amount of the rent due to him¹⁰. After notice of a claim by the landlord¹¹, the enforcement officer may seize sufficient goods to cover such claim, in addition to the debt due under the fieri facias¹².

The landlord is also entitled, as an exception to the general rule that goods in the custody of the law cannot be taken under a distress for rent, and subject to certain restrictions, to take in distress growing crops of a farm tenant for rent accrued due since the date of the seizure by the enforcement officer¹³.

NOTE 5--Supreme Court Act 1981 now cited as Senior Courts Act 1981: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1 (in force 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/C. THIRD PARTY INTERESTS/(D) Provision for Rent and Taxes/1353. Claims for rent where goods seized in execution under county court process.

1353. Claims for rent where goods seized in execution under county court process.

The provisions set out in the previous paragraph¹ do not apply to goods seized in execution under process of a county court², but the following provisions apply in substitution³. The landlord⁴ of any tenement in which any goods are seized may claim the rent of the tenement in arrear at the date of the seizure, at any time within the five days next following that date, or before the removal of the goods, by delivering to the bailiff⁵ or officer⁶ making the levy a claim in writing, signed by himself or his agent, stating the amount of rent claimed to be in arrear and the period in respect of which the rent is due⁷. Where such a claim is made, the bailiff or officer making the levy must in addition distrain for the rent so claimed and the cost of the distress⁸, and must not, within five days next after the distress, sell any part of the goods seized, unless the goods are of a perishable nature or the person whose goods have been seized so requests in writing⁹.

The bailiff must afterwards sell under the execution and distress such of the goods as will satisfy:

- 958 (1) first, the costs of and incidental to the sale¹⁰;
- 959 (2) next, the claim of the landlord not exceeding:
 - 36. (a) in a case where the tenement is let by the week, four weeks' rent;
 - 37. (b) in a case where the tenement is let for any other term less than a year, the rent of two terms of payment¹¹;
 - 38. (c) in any other case, one year's rent¹²; and
 - 960 (3) lastly, the amount for which the warrant of execution issued¹³.

If any replevin¹⁴ is made of the goods seized, the bailiff must nevertheless sell such portion of them as will satisfy the costs of and incidental to the sale under the execution and the amount for which the warrant of execution issued¹⁵. In any event the surplus of the sale, if any, and the residue of the goods must be returned to the execution debtor¹⁶.

The fees of the district judge¹⁷ and broker¹⁸ for keeping possession, appraisalment and sale under any such distress are to be the same as would have been payable if the distress had been an execution of the court, and no other fees must be demanded or taken in that respect¹⁹.

Nothing in the provisions set out above affects the relevant provisions²⁰ of the Insolvency Act 1986²¹.

Liquidator's rights where execution issued against property of an insolvent company.

(E) EFFECT OF JUDGMENT DEBTOR'S INSOLVENCY

1354. Liquidator's rights where execution issued against property of an insolvent company.

Where a creditor has issued execution¹ against the goods² or land of a company or has attached any debt due to it, and the company is subsequently wound up, he is not entitled to retain the benefit of the execution or attachment against the liquidator unless he has completed the execution or attachment³ before the commencement of the winding up⁴. However, the rights so conferred on the liquidator may be set aside by the court in favour of the creditor to such extent and subject to such terms as the court thinks fit⁵. Further, a person who purchases in good faith under a sale by the enforcement officer⁶ or other officer charged with the execution of the writ any goods of a company on which execution has been levied in all cases acquires a good title to them against the liquidator⁷.

Where a company's goods are taken in execution and, before their sale or the completion of the execution⁸, notice is served on the enforcement officer, or other officer, charged with execution of the writ or other process, that a provisional liquidator has been appointed or that a winding-up order has been made, or that a resolution for voluntary winding up has been passed, the enforcement officer or other officer must, on being so required, deliver the goods and any money seized or received in part satisfaction of the execution to the liquidator⁹. The costs of execution are a first charge on the goods or money so delivered, and the liquidator may sell the goods, or a sufficient part of them, for the purpose of satisfying the charge¹⁰.

If under an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding £500¹¹ a company's goods are sold or money is paid in order to avoid sale, the enforcement officer or other officer must deduct the costs of the execution from the proceeds of sale or the money paid and retain the balance for 14 days¹². If within that time notice is served on the enforcement officer or other officer of a petition for the winding up of the company having been presented, or of a meeting having been called at which there is to be proposed a resolution for voluntary winding up, and an order is made or a resolution passed (as the case may be), the enforcement officer or other officer must pay the balance to the liquidator, who is entitled to retain it as against the execution creditor¹³. However, the rights so conferred on the liquidator may be set aside by the court in favour of the creditor to such extent and subject to such terms as the court thinks fit¹⁴.

These provisions are discussed in more detail elsewhere in this work¹⁵.

2 For these purposes, 'goods' includes all chattels personal: Insolvency Act 1986 ss 183(4), 184(6).

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/C. THIRD PARTY INTERESTS/(E) Effect of Judgment Debtor's Insolvency/1355. Rights of official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy where execution issued against bankrupt's property.

1355. Rights of official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy where execution issued against bankrupt's property.

Subject to the statutory restrictions on proceedings and remedies¹ and to the following provisions, where the creditor of any person who is adjudged bankrupt has, before the commencement of the bankruptcy², issued execution³ against the goods or land of that person or attached a debt due to that person from another person, that creditor is not entitled, as against the official receiver or trustee of the bankrupt's estate, to retain the benefit of the execution or attachment, or any sums paid to avoid it, unless the execution or attachment was completed⁴, or the sums were paid, before the commencement of the bankruptcy⁵.

Where any goods of a person have been taken in execution, then, if before the completion of the execution notice is given to the enforcement officer⁶ or other officer charged with the execution that that person has been adjudged bankrupt, the enforcement officer or other officer must on request deliver to the official receiver or trustee of the bankrupt's estate the goods and any money seized or recovered in part satisfaction of the execution⁷. The costs of the execution are a first charge on the goods or money so delivered and the official receiver or trustee may sell the goods or a sufficient part of them for the purpose of satisfying the charge⁸.

Where under an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding such sum as may be prescribed for these purposes⁹ the goods of any person are sold or money is paid in order to avoid a sale and before the end of the period of 14 days beginning with the day of the sale or payment the enforcement officer or other officer charged with the execution is given notice that a bankruptcy petition has been presented in relation to that person, and a bankruptcy order is or has been made on that petition, the balance of the proceeds of sale or money paid, after deducting the costs of execution, is to be comprised in the bankrupt's estate in priority to the claim of the execution creditor¹⁰. Accordingly, in the case of an execution in respect of a judgment for a sum exceeding the prescribed sum, the enforcement officer or other officer charged with the execution must not dispose of the above-mentioned balance at any time within the period of 14 days so mentioned or while there is pending a bankruptcy petition of which he has been given such notice¹¹. He must pay that balance, where it is so comprised in the bankrupt's estate, to the official receiver or (if there is one) to the trustee of that estate¹².

The rights so conferred on the official receiver or the trustee may, however, be set aside by the court, to such extent and on such terms as it thinks fit, in favour of the creditor who has issued the execution or attached the debt¹³. Furthermore, nothing in these provisions entitles the trustee of a bankrupt's estate to claim goods from a person who has acquired them in good faith under a sale by an enforcement officer or other officer charged with an execution¹⁴.

In relation to any execution against property which has been acquired by or has devolved upon the bankrupt since the commencement of the bankruptcy, neither the enforcement officer's or other officer's duties set out above¹⁵ nor the provisions relating to the proceeds of sale¹⁶ apply unless, at the time the execution is issued or before it is completed, the property has been or is claimed for the bankrupt's estate as after-acquired property¹⁷ and a copy of the notice given under the relevant statutory provision¹⁸ has been or is served on the enforcement officer or other officer charged with the execution¹⁹.

These provisions are discussed in more detail elsewhere in this work²⁰.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iii) Levying Execution against Goods/C. THIRD PARTY INTERESTS/(E) Effect of Judgment Debtor's Insolvency/1356. County court procedure on bankruptcy or winding up of debtor.

1356. County court procedure on bankruptcy or winding up of debtor.

Where the district judge¹ responsible for the execution of a warrant² is required by any provision of the Insolvency Act 1986³ or any other enactment relating to insolvency to retain the proceeds of sale of goods sold under the warrant or money paid in order to avoid a sale⁴, the court⁵ must, as soon as practicable after the sale or the receipt of the money, send notice to the execution creditor and, if the warrant issued out of another court⁶, to that court⁷.

Where the district judge responsible for the execution of a warrant:

- 961 (1) receives notice that a bankruptcy order has been made against the debtor or, if the debtor is a company, that a provisional liquidator has been appointed or that an order has been made or a resolution passed for the winding up of the company; and
- 962 (2) withdraws from possession of goods seized or pays over to the official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy or, if the debtor is a company, to the liquidator the proceeds of sale of goods sold under the warrant or money paid in order to avoid a sale or seized or received in part satisfaction of the warrant, the court must send notice to the execution creditor and, if the warrant issued out of another court, to that court⁸.

Where the court officer⁹ of a court to which a warrant issued out of another court has been sent for execution receives any such notice as is referred to in head (1) above after he has sent to the home court any money seized or received in part satisfaction of the warrant, he must forward the notice to that court¹⁰.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iv) Stay or Suspension of Execution/A. IN GENERAL/1357. Stay of execution generally.

(iv) Stay or Suspension of Execution

A. IN GENERAL

1357. Stay of execution generally.

The court's power to stay proceedings should not be confused with its power to stay the execution of a final judgment or order. The court has an inherent jurisdiction to control its own proceedings so as to prevent an abuse of process, and accordingly to stay proceedings which are frivolous, vexatious or harassing, or which are manifestly groundless or in which there is clearly no cause of action in law or equity¹, or where the justice of the case so requires². The court's power to stay proceedings may be exercised under particular statutory provisions³, or under the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')⁴ as well as or as an alternative to a stay under its inherent jurisdiction, since these powers are cumulative, not exclusive, in their operation⁵. The court does not, however, have an inherent jurisdiction over all judgments or orders which it has made under which it can stay execution in all cases⁶. On the contrary, the court's inherent jurisdiction to stay the execution of a judgment or order is limited in its extent⁷, and can only be exercised on grounds that are relevant to a stay of the enforcement proceedings themselves, and not to matters which may operate as a defence in law or relief in equity, for such matters must be specifically raised by way of defence in the claim itself⁸. The special circumstances which entitle the court to stay execution of a money judgment⁹ are circumstances which go to the enforcement of the judgment and not those which go to its validity or correctness¹⁰, unless the defendant is seeking to appeal the judgment¹¹. The court has no inherent jurisdiction or other power to stay or suspend the execution of a judgment or order for possession of land against a trespasser¹².

If neither the judgment creditor nor anyone authorised by him to receive payment is within the jurisdiction, a stay of execution may be obtained, generally on payment of the money into court¹³.

A stay of execution only operates to prevent the judgment creditor from putting into operation the legal processes of execution and does not affect rights acquired independently of the process stayed¹⁴.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iv) Stay or Suspension of Execution/A. IN GENERAL/1358. Stay of execution pending an appeal.

1358. Stay of execution pending an appeal.

Unless the appeal court or the lower court orders otherwise, an appeal does not operate as a stay of any order or decision of the lower court¹.

Where a foreign company not subject to any international conventions to facilitate enforcement of a judgment debt² applies for a stay of execution it must produce cogent, full and frank evidence that there is a real risk of injustice if enforcement is allowed to take place pending appeal³.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(iv) Stay or Suspension of Execution/A. IN GENERAL/1359. Grounds on which stay of execution pending an appeal may be granted.

1359. Grounds on which stay of execution pending an appeal may be granted.

The court has an absolute and unfettered discretion as to whether it will make an order granting a stay of execution pending an appeal, and as to the terms upon which a stay will be granted¹, and will, as a rule, only grant a stay if there are special circumstances, which must be deposed to on affidavit unless the application is made at the hearing². When granting a stay of execution pending an appeal a court should not impose a condition that a sum to be paid to a party is to be irrecoverable in the event of the appeal succeeding unless that sum is less than the party will recover in any event³. As a rule, a stay of execution as to costs pending an appeal is not granted when the respondent's solicitor undertakes to repay the costs paid to him if the applicant is successful on the appeal, but this practice is not invariable⁴.

Examples of special circumstances are that an appeal would be nugatory if stay was refused, by reason of the respondent's poverty (Wilson v Church (No 2) (1879) 12 ChD 454, CA) or if payment of a judgment debt destroys the substratum of the appeal (Metropolitan Real and General Property Trust Ltd v Slaters and Bodega Ltd [1941] 1 All ER 310, CA); absence from England without address of a party to whom money in court was ordered to be paid out (Bradford v Young, Re Falconar's Trusts (1884) 28 ChD 18, CA; and see Re A Debtor (No 1838 of 1911) [1912] 1 KB 53, CA); that an administration order has been made against the estate of a debtor dead since judgment and before execution issued (Ranken v Harwood, Ranken v Boulton (1846) 5 Hare 215); judgment in favour of alien enemy (Robinson & Co v Continental Insurance Co of Mannheim [1915] 1 KB 155). An allegation on an appeal that there has been misdirection at the trial is not sufficient (Monk v Bartram [1891] 1 QB 346, CA); nor is the fact that the respondents to an appeal are a Scottish company (Re Queensland Mercantile Agency Co (1891) 61 LJ Ch 48); nor that the party wishes to consider the advisability of appealing (Webber v London, Brighton and South Coast Rly Co (1881) 51 LJQB 154, CA); nor that the witnesses have been indicted for perjury (Warwick v Bruce (1815) 4 M & S 140); nor that the defendants are a statutory body charged with the duty of draining an area of fen lands and the execution would make it impossible for them to perform that duty (Marine and General Mutual Life Assurance Society v Feltwell Fen Second District Drainage Board [1945] KB 394). 1360. Orders having the effect of a stay.

Certain circumstances have the effect of a stay of execution. Thus after the Court of Protection has appointed a receiver a stay is normally granted against execution on the patient's property¹.

An order for an interpleader issue has the effect of a stay², and a third party debt order against a judgment debtor attaching the judgment debt operates as a stay of execution as against the judgment creditor³, but a third party debt order obtained by the judgment creditor against a debtor of the judgment debtor is not a stay against the judgment debtor so long as the third party has not paid under the order⁴.

Where a creditor who has obtained a judgment in the High Court takes an order for payment by instalments in the county court, he cannot afterwards issue execution in the High Court⁵ but an order for sale in foreclosure proceedings does not operate as a stay on the judgment debt⁶.

B. STAY OF EXECUTION UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS

1361. Power to stay execution by writ of fieri facias.

Where a judgment is given or an order made for the payment by any person of money¹, and the court² is satisfied, on an application made at the time of the judgment or order³, or at any time thereafter, by the judgment debtor⁴ or other party liable to execution⁵, that there are special circumstances which render it inexpedient to enforce the judgment or order or that the applicant is unable from any cause to pay the money, then, notwithstanding anything in the rules allowing the issue of more than one writ⁶, the court may by order stay the execution of the judgment or order by writ of fieri facias⁷ either absolutely or for such period and subject to such conditions as the court thinks fit⁸.

An application under these provisions, if not made at the time the judgment is given or order made, must be made in accordance with Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁹ and may be so made notwithstanding that the party liable to execution did not acknowledge service¹⁰ of the claim form or serve a defence¹¹ or take any previous part in the proceedings¹². The grounds on which such an application is made must be set out in the application notice and be supported by a witness statement or affidavit¹³ made by or on behalf of the applicant substantiating those grounds¹⁴. The application notice and a copy of the supporting witness statement or affidavit must, not less than four clear days before the hearing, be served on the party entitled to enforce the judgment or order¹⁵.

An order staying execution under these provisions may be varied or revoked by a subsequent order¹⁶.

The power to stay execution by writ of fieri facias under these provisions is separate and distinct from the power to stay execution pending an appeal¹⁷.

The tests to be applied in staying execution under CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 47 r 1 are quite different from those applicable to proceedings for summary judgment (see CPR Pt 24; and PARA 524 et seq), and therefore a stay of execution by writ of fieri facias of a judgment, including a foreign judgment duly registered in England, will not ordinarily be granted simply on the ground that the defendants are bringing a cross-claim in another claim against the claimant impugning the foreign judgment, at any rate in the absence of special circumstances rendering it inexpedient to enforce the judgment: Ferdinand Wagner (a firm) v Laubscher Bros & Co (a firm)[1970] 2 QB 313, [1970] 2 All ER 174, CA. Without prejudice to the power to stay execution by writ of fieri facias¹, a party against whom a judgment has been given or an order made may apply to the court² for a stay of execution of the judgment or order or other relief on the ground of matters which have occurred since the date of the judgment or order. The court may by order grant such relief, and on such terms, as it thinks just³. The facts must be such as would or might have prevented the order being made, or would or might have led to a stay of execution if they had already occurred at the date of the order⁴.

STAY OF EXECUTION OR SUSPENSION OF WARRANT UNDER COUNTY COURT PROCESS/1363. Power to stay execution under county court process.

C. STAY OF EXECUTION OR SUSPENSION OF WARRANT UNDER COUNTY COURT PROCESS

1363. Power to stay execution under county court process.

If at any time it appears to the satisfaction of a county court¹ that any party² to any proceedings is unable from any cause to pay any sum recovered against him, whether by way of satisfaction of the claim or counterclaim in the proceedings or by way of costs or otherwise, or any instalment of such a sum, the court may, in its discretion, stay any execution issued in the proceedings for such time and on such terms as the court thinks fit, and so from time to time until it appears that the cause of inability has ceased³. The power of the court to stay execution of any warrant may be exercised by the district judge or, in accordance with the following provisions, by the court officer⁴.

An application by the debtor to stay execution of a warrant of execution must be in the appropriate form⁵ stating the proposed terms, the grounds on which it is made and including a signed statement of the debtor's means⁶. Where the debtor makes such an application, the court must send the judgment creditor⁷ a copy of the debtor's application and statement of means⁸. The court must require the creditor to notify the court in writing, within 14 days of service⁹ of notification upon him, giving his reasons for any objection he may have to the granting of the application¹⁰.

If the judgment creditor does not notify the court of any objection within the time stated, the court officer may make an order suspending the warrant on terms of payment¹¹. Upon receipt of a notice by the judgment creditor¹², the court officer may, if the judgment creditor objects only to the terms offered, determine the date and rate of payment and make an order suspending the warrant on terms of payment¹³. Any party affected by such an order may, within 14 days of service of the order on him and giving his reasons, apply on notice for the order to be reconsidered. The court must fix a day for the hearing of the application before the district judge and give to the judgment creditor and the debtor not less than eight days' notice of the day so fixed¹⁴. On hearing such an application, the district judge may confirm the order or set it aside and make such new order as he thinks fit¹⁵. The order so made must be entered in the records of the court¹⁶.

Where the judgment creditor states in his notice¹⁷ that he wishes the bailiff to proceed to execute the warrant, the court must fix a day for a hearing before the district judge of the debtor's application and give to the judgment creditor and to the debtor not less than two days' notice of the day so fixed¹⁸.

Where an order is made by the district judge suspending a warrant of execution, the debtor may be ordered to pay the costs of the warrant and any fees or expenses incurred before its suspension and the order may authorise the sale of a sufficient portion of any goods seized to cover such costs, fees and expenses and the expenses of sale¹⁹.

Subject to any directions given by the district judge, where a warrant of execution has been suspended, it may be reissued on the judgment creditor's filing²⁰ a request showing that any condition subject to which the warrant was suspended has not been complied with²¹.

1364. Withdrawal and suspension of warrant at creditor's request.

Where an execution creditor requests the district judge¹ responsible for executing a warrant² to withdraw from possession, then subject to the following provisions he is to be treated as having abandoned the execution, and the court must mark the warrant as withdrawn by request of the execution creditor³. Where, however, the request is made in consequence of a claim having been made⁴ to goods seized under the warrant, the execution is to be treated as being abandoned in respect only of the goods claimed⁵.

If the district judge responsible for executing a warrant is requested by the execution creditor to suspend it in pursuance of an arrangement between him and the debtor, the court must mark the warrant as suspended by request of the execution creditor and the execution creditor may subsequently apply to the district judge holding the warrant for it to be reissued. If he does so, the application is deemed⁶ to be an application to issue the warrant⁷.

Nothing in these provisions prejudices any right of the execution creditor to apply for the issue of a fresh warrant or authorises the reissue of a warrant which has been withdrawn or has expired or has been superseded by the issue of a fresh warrant⁸.

Rules of court may make provision for the suspension of any judgment or order, on terms, in connection with any warrant issued with respect to any instalment payable under the judgment or order¹. Where a warrant² issued for part of a sum of money and costs payable under a judgment or order³ is suspended on payment of instalments⁴, the judgment or order must, unless the court⁵ otherwise directs, be treated as suspended on those terms as respects the whole of the sum of money and costs then remaining unpaid⁶.

D. STAY OR SUSPENSION OF EXECUTION OF POSSESSION ORDER

1367. In general.

Under the Administration of Justice Act 1970, the court has power to stay or suspend the execution of a possession order in favour of a mortgagee, or postpone the date of the delivery of possession, where it appears to the court that in the event of its exercising the power the mortgagor is likely to be able within a reasonable period to pay any sums due under the mortgage or to remedy a default consisting of a breach of any other obligation arising under or by virtue of the mortgage¹. These powers are discussed elsewhere in this work².

In relation to certain accelerated possession claims³, where the judge is satisfied, on a hearing directed under Part 55 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁴, that exceptional hardship would be caused by requiring possession to be given up by the date in the order of possession, he may vary the date on which possession must be given up⁵. Similarly, under the Housing Act 1985 the court has an extended discretion to stay or suspend the execution of an order for, or postpone the date of, possession of a dwelling house let on a secure tenancy, for such period or periods as the court thinks fit⁶.

The variation of possession orders in these and other cases is discussed elsewhere in this work⁷.

Right to levy costs and expenses.

(v) Costs and Expenses of Execution

A. COSTS AND EXPENSES OF EXECUTION UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS

1368. Right to levy costs and expenses.

The enforcement officer and persons authorised by him are entitled to certain statutory fees and charges for enforcing writs of execution¹, and in every case of execution the party entitled to execution may levy the poundage fees and expenses of execution. The indorsement on the writ of fieri facias and other writs requiring the enforcement officer to raise money specifically includes a fixed sum² for costs of execution, and also instructs him to raise 'the fees and charges to which he is entitled' over and above the sum recovered under the judgment or order³. On the other hand, where a judgment or order is for less than £600, and does not entitle the claimant to costs against the person against whom the writ of fieri facias to enforce the judgment or order is issued, the writ may not authorise the enforcement officer to whom it is directed to 'levy any fees, poundage or other costs of execution'⁴. The costs of the execution are costs of the writ of execution, and not of the claim in which judgment was recovered or the order was made⁵, and consequently they are not a debt due from the judgment debtor⁶. It is doubtful whether the costs of a previous abortive execution can be included in the direction to levy⁷. The costs of a writ of possession may be ordered to be paid by the defendant, and execution can issue for them⁸.

1 See generally SHERIFFS. Other enforcement agents are not bound by the statutory scale of fees and charges, and may charge such fees as may be customary, and recover them from the person who actually appointed them, whether the judgment creditor or his solicitor: see Foster v Blakelock (1826) 5 B & C 328.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(v) Costs and Expenses of Execution/A. COSTS AND EXPENSES OF EXECUTION UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS/1369. Enforcement officer's remuneration.

1369. Enforcement officer's remuneration.

The enforcement officer is entitled to (1) poundage; and (2) certain fees and expenses allowed him by statute or order of court under statutory authority, but no other remuneration or charge¹. In executions for money, the enforcement officer, in order to become entitled to his poundage, must levy (namely seize) and get the money². If he does not seize, he is not entitled to poundage, even though the money is paid or tendered to him after the writ has been delivered to him for execution³. If by compulsion of the writ after seizure the enforcement officer gets the money even without sale he is entitled to poundage⁴. He is also entitled to it if a compromise is effected by reason of the seizure⁵. If the execution is withdrawn, satisfied or stopped he is also entitled to poundage, as against the person issuing the execution or the person at whose instance the sale is stopped, on the amount which would have been received if the execution had not been so withdrawn, satisfied or stopped⁶. If, however, the execution debtor becomes bankrupt after seizure but before sale, the enforcement officer is not entitled to poundage on goods handed over to the trustee or official receiver, since it is not a cost of execution which under the Insolvency Act 1986⁷ is made a first charge on the goods seized⁸. It may be that where the trustee in bankruptcy gets the benefit of the sale, poundage may be charged as against him⁹. If the judgment and writ of execution are set aside after seizure and sale, poundage is payable by the execution creditor¹⁰, but not if a sale has not taken place¹¹.

The poundage is calculated upon the sum payable to or received by the execution creditor as the result of the levy¹². In addition, if the enforcement officer pays to the landlord out of the proceeds the rent due, he is entitled to poundage on the amount of the rent¹³, but must hand the clear rent to the landlord¹⁴.

In case of a difference between the enforcement officer and the party liable to pay poundage as to the amount, the amount must be assessed by the court¹⁵.

1370. Fees under writ of fieri facias.

Under a writ of fieri facias¹ the enforcement officer is entitled to expenses of making inquiries, a fee or fees² for seizure, mileage, keeping possession, removal and warehousing of goods and animals, advertising sale by auction, and commission to the auctioneer³. These fees are regulated by an order⁴ made under the Sheriffs Act 1887⁵, and are subject to detailed assessment by the court⁶. Seizure is necessary to entitle the enforcement officer to the fees⁷. It will be observed that the execution creditor is liable to the enforcement officer for the expenses, and the seizure and mileage, even if the execution results in nothing⁸. The fees for seizure or mileage are not payable on a second writ where the enforcement officer is in possession under the first, unless seizure is made in a different place⁹.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(v) Costs and Expenses of Execution/A. COSTS AND EXPENSES OF EXECUTION UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS/1371. Possession money.

1371. Possession money.

The right to the fee for possession arises when the enforcement officer takes possession, but is not payable if he is paid before seizure. It is common practice for the bailiff to take 'walking possession' by agreement with the judgment debtor¹, and where walking possession is taken under an agreement in the appropriate form, a fee for keeping possession under the agreement is chargeable for each day including that on which execution is levied². Possession money is not payable for a period after the enforcement officer has removed the goods³. Possession money is allowed for such period only as is reasonably necessary for the purpose of selling⁴. As between execution creditor and debtor, however, where possession has been retained with their consent, possession money is chargeable for the whole period of retention even though the judgment debtor ultimately becomes bankrupt⁵. Possession money is not payable after demand of possession by the official receiver of the execution debtor's estate⁶. Where successive writs are delivered to the enforcement officer, possession taken enures for the benefit of all writs, and only one possession fee is chargeable⁷.

¹ This was done in Watson v Murray & Co [1955] 2 QB 1, [1955] 1 All ER 350. See also National Commercial Bank of Scotland Ltd v Arcam Demolition and Construction Ltd and Hatherley Hall Ltd, Claimants [1966] 2 QB 593, [1966] 3 All ER 113, CA ('walking possession' taken by agreement with person other than the judgment debtor).

² Order dated 8 July 1920, SR & O 1920/1250, Schedule, Fee 4 (substituted by SI 1956/502; and amended by SI 1971/808; and by virtue of the Decimal Currency Act 1969 s 10(1)); see SHERIFFS vol 42 (Reissue) PARA 1141. The fee for walking possession is less than that for physical possession and the latter is not chargeable where a walking possession agreement is signed at the time of the levy. For the form of such an agreement see the Sheriffs' Fees (Amendment) Order 1956, SI 1956/502, Schedule. Formerly there was doubt whether possession money was chargeable where walking possession was taken: see Lumsden v Burnett [1898] 2 QB 177, CA; and Day v Davies [1938] 2 KB 74, [1938] 1 All ER 686, CA, decided on a similar provision in the Distress for Rent Rules 1920, SR & O 1920/1712 (revoked); see now the Distress for Rent Rules 1988, SI 1988/2050; and DISTRESS. The latter specifically deal with the case of 'walking possession' in distress cases and prescribe a lower fee for it than for physical possession. See further PARA 1330.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(v) Costs and Expenses of Execution/A. COSTS AND EXPENSES OF EXECUTION UNDER HIGH COURT PROCESS/1372. Recovery of fees by enforcement officer.

1372. Recovery of fees by enforcement officer.

The enforcement officer can take his poundage and fees out of the property seized¹, but the property seized must be that of the execution debtor². If the property seized is subject to a lien, the enforcement officer can only seize subject to that lien and cannot claim his fees as a first charge on the proceeds³. In general, however, the execution creditor is liable to him and may be sued for the fees when they have been earned⁴. The enforcement officer can recover notwithstanding that the judgment and all subsequent proceedings have been set aside⁵, although not for poundage where the setting aside has been after seizure but before sale⁶. Where the execution creditor becomes disentitled to recover, the enforcement officer cannot sell the property seized in order to obtain his possession money, fees or expenses⁷, or his poundage⁸. The enforcement officer has no right of action against the solicitor who puts him in motion by delivering the writ to him to be executed⁹. A bailiff cannot maintain a claim against the execution creditor for his fees¹⁰, but where there is an express promise by the solicitor¹¹, or where the solicitor requests that a particular bailiff should be employed, that bailiff can sue him¹².

An unintentional overcharge does not render the enforcement officer liable to a penalty for misconduct¹³.

Fees when execution withdrawn etc.

1373. Fees when execution withdrawn etc.

It seems that when an execution is withdrawn, satisfied or stopped, the enforcement officer is entitled, as against the person issuing the execution or the person at whose instance the sale is stopped, to the same fees as if the execution had been completed¹. Where the execution is withdrawn by the execution creditor, the enforcement officer is entitled to the bailiff's fees and possession money².

If the completion of the execution is prevented by the execution debtor becoming bankrupt or, in the case of a company, being wound up, the costs of the execution are a first charge on the goods or money delivered by the enforcement officer to the official receiver, trustee of the bankrupt's estate or liquidator, as the case may be, who may sell the goods or a sufficient part of them to satisfy the charge³.

In Re Thomas, ex p Sheriff of Middlesex [1899] 1 QB 460 at 463, CA, however, Lindley MR said that an official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy who stops a sale must pay the fees, and this was approved in Montague v Davies, Benachi & Co [1911] 2 KB 595, DC. B. COSTS AND EXPENSES OF EXECUTION UNDER COUNTY COURT PROCESS

1374. Costs and expenses of execution; in general.

A warrant of execution¹ authorises the officer executing it to levy, as well as the money payable under the judgment or order, the costs of the execution². The fee for issuing the warrant³ is included in the total amount to be inserted or indorsed on the warrant, but the fees for its execution are not⁴; thus the former is, but the latter are not, part of the debt due from the judgment debtor⁵. It is doubtful whether the costs of a previous abortive execution can be included in the direction to levy⁶. The costs of a warrant of possession may be ordered to be paid by the defendant, and execution can issue for them⁷.

Brokers, appraisers and other persons appointed for keeping possession of, selling or valuing goods seized in execution under process of the court are to be paid prescribed fees⁸. It has been held that where goods taken in execution are claimed by a third party⁹, a person holding the office of high bailiff (now the district judge)¹⁰ of a county court is entitled to possession money only up to the time when the claimant deposits in court the amount representing the value of the goods¹¹.

If the completion of the execution is prevented by the execution debtor becoming bankrupt or, in the case of a company, being wound up, the costs of the execution are a first charge on the goods or money delivered by the district judge or other court officer to the official receiver, trustee of the bankrupt's estate or liquidator, as the case may be, who may sell the goods or a sufficient part of them to satisfy the charge¹².

(vi) Wrongful and Irregular Execution

1375. Wrongful execution.

An execution is wrongful where it is neither authorised nor justified by the writ or warrant of execution or by the judgment under which it is issued¹; or where the writ or warrant is issued maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause²; or where unfair means, such as the procuring of a search warrant, are used to enable the bailiff to enter into the premises of the execution debtor³. Thus, where a claimant maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause indorses on the writ a larger amount than the judgment debt⁴, the execution is wrongful, and on proof of malice the person at whose instance it is levied will be liable in damages⁵. Also on proof of malice an execution will be treated as wrongful when the execution creditor, after he has become bound by a composition or arrangement⁶, or by an individual voluntary arrangement under the Insolvency Act 1986⁷, neglects to withdraw the enforcement officer, or when he levies for a debt provable in bankruptcy on the goods of a bankrupt who has obtained his discharge⁸. Malice, however, is not a necessary ingredient in a claim for an excessive execution⁹.

An execution is also wrongful where the indorsement on a writ directs the enforcement officer to levy at a wrong address or on the goods of a person other than the execution debtor¹⁰, or where the goods are seized under a writ of fieri facias issued after payment of the whole of the judgment debt¹¹, or after a valid tender of the amount due¹²; in such case a claim lies at the instance of the person aggrieved without proof of malice¹³, for when a judgment debt has been paid, the judgment is no longer of any force or effect, and an execution issued under it is void. Where the judgment has been partly satisfied, however, and the debtor complains of an excessive execution for the balance, he must, in order to recover damages, prove either that the execution was obviously excessive¹⁴ or that there was malice and absence of reasonable and probable cause¹⁵. Executions are also wrongful when levied after a stay has been ordered by the court¹⁶, or agreed upon between the parties¹⁷; or where the warrant issued by the enforcement officer to the person issuing the writ or his attorney is wilfully altered and a wrongful use is made of it¹⁸; or where the writ or warrant is executed without leave on a Sunday, Good Friday or Christmas Day¹⁹, or after notice from the execution creditor not to proceed and to withdraw from possession of the goods taken under it²⁰; or when issued against a foreign sovereign or a person subject to diplomatic immunity²¹.

Wrongful executions are, however, not necessarily void from their inception²²; thus, when a enforcement officer does what he has no authority to do, for example breaks into an execution debtor's premises, he will be liable for the trespass, but the execution remains good²³. Similarly an excessive execution may give rise to a claim for damages but does not avoid the execution altogether²⁴.

The time and manner in which writs and warrants should be executed is discussed elsewhere in this title²⁵. A wrongful execution will infringe the property rights protected by article 1 of the First Protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms²⁶ and may also infringe the rights under article 8 of the Convention²⁷ of the person whose property is wrongfully taken.

1 See Moore v Lambeth County Court Registrar (No 2)[1970] 1 QB 560, [1970] 1 All ER 980, CA, where a county court warrant of execution was issued for £87.25 but suspended if the defendant paid £2 a month. The defendant made payments under the warrant so that the amount owing was 'at best' (per Russell LJ at 570 and at 984) £4.25. The bailiff levied execution for £87.25. It was held that the county court registrar (now the district judge) was liable and damages were awarded, for it was sufficient for the plaintiff (now the claimant) to show that the seizure was 'obviously' excessive. In this case Russell LJ considered many of the earlier cases and in particular distinguished De Medina v Grove(1847) 10 QB 172, Ex Ch; Jenings v Florence (1857) 2 CBNS 467; and Clissold v Cratchley[1910] 2 KB 244, CA (see the text and note 11). It is submitted that any unauthorised or irregular execution is wrongful, the defendant's knowledge or malice being an element in assessing damages, but that no damages, or nominal damages, would be awarded where the wrong or irregularity is minimal. 1376. Execution on incorrect judgment.

Where payment of a debt or part of a debt has preceded a judgment for the full debt, an execution for the amount of the judgment is not wrongful so long as the judgment stands¹. Similarly where an enforcement officer, acting under a writ of possession, ejects a sub-tenant of the defendant, neither the enforcement officer nor the claimant is liable in damages even though the sub-tenant has a protected sub-tenancy².

In Huffer v Allen (1866) LR 2 Exch 15, the question was raised, but not determined, whether, if the judgment has been rectified, the plaintiff (now known as the 'claimant'), upon proof that the defendant had signed judgment and issued execution with knowledge of the payment, and had acted maliciously and without reasonable and probable cause, could have maintained an action (now known as a 'claim': see PARA 18). It is submitted that he could, and that as to excess there would have been a sufficient termination of the former action in his favour: see the judgments of Kelly CB and Pigott B in Huffer v Allen (1866) LR 2 Exch 15; and cf Churchill v Siggers (1854) 3 E & B 929 (not cited in Huffer v Allen (1866) LR 2 Exch 15); Hodges v Callaghan (1857) 2 CBNS 306; Gilding v Eyre (1861) 10 CBNS 592; and the cases cited in PARA 1235. In such a case there may also be an infringement of the claimant's Convention rights: see PARA 1235. On the other hand, a judgment for a larger amount than is actually due at the time when the judgment is entered is itself irregular and may be set aside as of right: Bolt and Nut Co (Tipton) Ltd v Rowlands Nicholls & Co Ltd [1964] 2 QB 10, [1964] 1 All ER 137, CA.

1377. Irregular execution.

An execution is irregular where any of the requirements of a rule of court or a practice direction have not been complied with, and in such a case the proceedings may be set aside or amended or otherwise dealt with in such manner and upon such terms as the court thinks fit¹. Such non-compliance does not nullify the proceedings, any step taken in the proceedings or any document, judgment or order therein unless the court orders otherwise².

In the High Court, if the writ of execution is irregular or ought not to have issued³, the master or district judge⁴ will, in general, set it aside, and, if goods or money have been levied under it, order them to be restored, or if the party is in custody under it, order him to be discharged. Similarly, when an execution has been irregularly executed he will, as a rule, order such restoration or discharge⁵.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(vi) Wrongful and Irregular Execution/1378. Examples of irregularity: effect.

1378. Examples of irregularity: effect.

An execution is irregular where it is levied by an unauthorised officer¹, or where the writ or warrant does not follow the judgment precisely in the names of the parties², or the terms of the judgment³, or where a several execution is issued on a joint judgment⁴, or where there is an error in the amount ordered to be recovered or paid⁵. In any of these cases the execution will be set aside unless the irregularity is waived by the execution debtor⁶, or set right by amendment, which will generally be done⁷, unless bankruptcy on the part of the execution debtor intervenes, in which case the execution will be set aside⁸. An application to set aside should be made as early as possible⁹. Even though the writ or warrant is irregular, the party at whose suit it is issued and his solicitor may justify under it, unless it has been set aside for irregularity¹⁰, in which case the execution creditor and his solicitor are liable in trespass for an arrest or seizure made under it¹¹. Where an execution is irregular, whether it is set aside or not, the enforcement officer and all persons acting under the enforcement officer, are, in general, protected by the writ, provided it is not void on the face of it, and did not issue from a court without jurisdiction, and provided he or they do not join in the same plea with the party¹². The setting aside of a writ on the ground of irregularity does not prevent the claimant issuing and executing another writ¹³.

The title of a purchaser in good faith from the enforcement officer will be good even if the execution is irregular, unless it was altogether void¹⁴, or the goods were the goods of a stranger and not of the party against whom the execution issued¹⁵, in which latter case the owner may recover even against a purchaser in good faith for value¹⁶.

1379. Restitution.

Where a wrongful or irregular execution has been set aside, or where a judgment or order has been reversed after execution on it has taken place, restitution will be made to the successful party¹. The order setting aside the execution or reversing the judgment or order should provide for this; and if it does, execution may issue upon it in the ordinary course². If the order does not so provide, another order may be made, or a writ of restitution³ may be issued, commanding the judgment creditor to restore the property or pay over the proceeds of sale⁴.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(vii) Sequestration and Sale by Sequestrators/1380. Property that may be taken.

(vii) Sequestration and Sale by Sequestrators

1380. Property that may be taken.

The rights of entry and seizure under a writ of sequestration¹ are discussed elsewhere in this title². Under such a writ the contemnor's property of every description may be taken, corporeal or incorporeal³, including estates in land, whether freehold⁴ or leasehold⁵, and chattels, whether things in possession⁶ or things in action⁷, including money⁸, stocks⁹ and any personal estate¹⁰, and whether the contemnor's interest therein is legal or equitable.

Property of which the contemnor is merely a trustee cannot be taken¹¹, and things in action can be taken only where they are alienable by the contemnor¹². Thus pensions normally are seizable¹³, unless their alienation is forbidden by statute¹⁴. A fund in court which is liable to a solicitor's lien in another suit cannot be taken¹⁵, but where a trust is being administered in the Chancery Division, the judge may order funds to which a beneficiary is entitled to be paid to sequestrators appointed by the Family Division¹⁶.

Sequestrators are bound by the same general restrictions as the enforcement officer acting under a writ of fieri facias in respect of property exempted from seizure¹⁷. The pay, arms and equipment of soldiers and airmen¹⁸, rolling stock and plant of railways¹⁹, and ecclesiastical property of all kinds are exempt from seizure²⁰.

The onus of proving that the writ would be futile or unreasonable lies on the party against whom relief is sought²¹.

Writs and orders affecting land should be registered²².

The order made is that the contemnor be restrained from receiving the pension, and the sequestrators be directed to receive it (M'Carthy v Goold (1810) 1 Ball & B 387; Willcock v Terrell (1878) 3 Ex D 323, CA; Sansom v Sansom (1879) 4 PD 69). Some pensions, such as children's pensions under the Judicial Pensions Act 1981 or the Judicial Pensions and Retirement Act 1993, are paid subject to a liability to apply them for the benefit of other persons, and would not be seizable: see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 547, 566.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(vii) Sequestration and Sale by Sequestrators/1381. Rights and duties of third parties.

1381. Rights and duties of third parties.

As regards the rights of third parties, it may, generally speaking, be said that the sequestrators may seize all that, and only that, of which the contemnor would at law or in equity be entitled to possession in a claim against such persons, and subject to all rights, legal or equitable, belonging to such persons. The exceptions to this rule are: (1) the sequestrators are entitled to property held by third parties under a conveyance in fraud of the sequestration¹; (2) the sequestrators, like the enforcement officer under a writ of fieri facias, are not bound, it is submitted, by estoppels against the contemnor²; (3) the sequestrators may seize property claimed under a voluntary conveyance, or under a conveyance accepted with knowledge of the issue of the writ, at a date subsequent to such issue³.

In relation to their dealings with a contemnor's property following the issue of a writ of sequestration, banks and other third parties are, where they know of the issue of the writ, under a duty not to take any action which may frustrate the object of the writ, but to make full disclosure to the sequestrators of the contemnor's assets held or disposed of by them, and to transfer any such assets to the sequestrators on being so requested without a specific court order to that effect⁴. This principle applies regardless of whether the third party holds property belonging to the contemnor⁵.

In cases where someone other than the contemnor has an interest in the property, or there is doubt whether the property is liable to sequestration, the sequestrators should be informed in order that a specific court order may be sought: Eckman v Midland Bank Ltd [1973] QB 519 at 528, [1973] 1 All ER 609 at 616. 1382. Effect of death of either party.

The death of the person issuing the writ does not prevent or determine the sequestration: his interest in it devolves with his interest in the judgment or order¹. In the case of death of the contemnor occurring after the issue of the writ², the sequestration continues in force³ against the contemnor's personal representatives⁴ unless it is merely for the purpose of enforcing a personal interim order such as an order to give further information⁵. A jointure or annuity secured upon land for the benefit of the widow, however, is not affected⁶.

1 le whether the sequestration is for disobedience of a final or interim order: Hyde v Forster (1748) 1 Dick 132. The deceased's personal representatives should be joined in the claim: Hyde v Forster (1748) 1 Dick 132. See, however, Wharam v Broughton (1748) 1 Ves Sen 180.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(vii) Sequestration and Sale by Sequestrators/1383. Enforcement of writ of sequestration.

1383. Enforcement of writ of sequestration.

In getting into their hands the contemnor's property the sequestrators may require the assistance of the court, the form of which will vary with the nature of the property. Thus, to obtain chattels or lands denied to them by the contemnor or others, they can apply for committal for contempt, and for an injunction to be followed by a writ of assistance or possession¹. To obtain rents due from the contemnor's tenants or debtors they must first obtain, if the money is not paid on request, an order of the court², which will not usually be granted in the case of tenants until after attornment by them (that is, acknowledgment of the sequestrators as landlords), which will, however, be compelled by order³. When a real dispute as to liability exists, the court may order a claim to be brought in the name of the contemnor⁴. Where the liability is admitted, the order to pay to the sequestrators will be made summarily⁵.

When money belonging to the contemnor is in court, it will be ordered to be paid out⁶, but no sequestration has effect in respect of any money due or accruing or alleged to be due or accruing from the Crown⁷. In such a case the court may, on the judgment creditor's application, make an order restraining the judgment debtor from receiving the money⁸ and directing payment by the Crown to the sequestrator⁹.

3 A separate notice is usually sent to tenants calling upon them to attorn to the sequestrators. Should it be necessary to compel attornment, the sequestrators should apply for the order to attorn: Wood v Adams (1780) 2 Dick 576; Rowley v Ridley (1784) 3 Swan 306n; Goldsmith v Goldsmith (1846) 5 Hare 123. 1383 Enforcement of writ of sequestration

NOTE 7--Supreme Court Act 1981 now cited as Senior Courts Act 1981: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1 (in force 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(vii) Sequestration and Sale by Sequestrators/1384. Management of property and sale by sequestrators.

1384. Management of property and sale by sequestrators.

The sequestrators, having taken possession so far as they are able to do so, are not to levy for the benefit of any person, but merely to detain and hold the property in their hands until the contempt is cleared and the court makes further order to the contrary¹, and therefore an order is required to regulate the rights of the parties². The sequestrators should apply to the court for any orders necessary to complete their seizure of the property³, and for orders of management and the like⁴. Without an order sequestrators have no power to enter into any contract⁵ or to do any act on behalf of the contemnor or his estate, other than merely to detain the latter⁶. A sequestration does not prevent a distress upon the contemnor's goods by the landlord⁷.

No sequestered property can be sold without leave of the court⁸, and no land, except possibly leaseholds⁹, can be ordered to be sold¹⁰. Where the contempt is non-payment into court, an order will be made for sale of personal property, payment of the proceeds into court and payment of the costs of the sequestration; for example such orders have been made as to farm produce¹¹, household furniture¹², and a reversionary interest in stock standing to the contemnor's credit in another cause¹³. Unless such a sale is completed before the making of the bankruptcy order, the rights of the official receiver or trustee in bankruptcy will take priority to the rights of the execution creditor¹⁴.

There is no apparent reason why sequestrators should be immune from suit or exempt from liability for professional negligence in the management of the contemnor's affairs. Moreover, it is wrong in principle to grant a blanket release and discharge to a sequestrator without first investigating any claims made against him; although once appointed sequestrators become officers of the court, they are nevertheless still subject to liability based on the ordinary standard of care¹⁵.

2 For an example see Lord Pelham v Lord Harley (1713) 3 Swan 291n.

3 See PARA 1383.

4 It was formerly the practice to require the return of the writ before proceeding to obtain any such order (Yarroth v Seys (1720) Bunb 62; Lord Pelham v Duchess of Newcastle (1713) 3 Swan 289n); but it is not now the practice to file the return (Goldsmith v Goldsmith (1846) 5 Hare 123). On the return it appeared how much the sequestrators had obtained, and, if insufficient, a new writ issued for sale of the chattels to raise the remainder due: Yarroth v Seys (1720) Bunb 62.

5 In an appropriate case, however, the sequestrators may be directed by the court to carry out the terms of a contract for the sale of land already entered into by the contemnor: see Hipkin v Hipkin [1962] 2 All ER 155, [1962] 1 WLR 491.

6 Thus, management orders are necessary to enable them to let land (Neale v Bealing (1744) 3 Swan 304n; notice should be given to the contemnor of such an application (Neale v Bealing (1744) 3 Swan 304n; see also Dunkley v Scribner (1815) 2 Madd 443)); to fell timber (Lady Dacres v Chute (1683) 1 Vern 160; for the necessity for a licence to fell timber in certain cases see FORESTRY vol 52 (2009) PARA 120 et seq); or to settle a dilapidation claim with an outgoing tenant (Re Burkill, Godfrey v Burkill (1873) 1 Seton's Judgments and Orders (7th Edn) 447). A reference may be ordered to inquire whether an action for recovery of possession of land should be defended (Crone v O'dell (1827) 2 Mol 389); and orders may be made for the redemption by sequestrators of mortgages upon the property (Hamblyn v Ley (1743) 3 Swan 301n).

There is no set form of order for bringing sequestration to an end and the terms of the order must depend on the circumstances of a particular case¹. Such an order obtained by a fraud on the court will be set aside².

If a receiver is appointed in the proceedings to enforce an order in which the writ of sequestration is issued, it will discharge the writ³. A writ irregularly issued will be discharged⁴, although an irregularity may be waived by the contemnor, for example by his giving directions to the sequestrators⁵.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/A. ENFORCEMENT POWER AND ENFORCEMENT AGENTS/1386. Enforcement power.

(viii) Taking Control of Goods

A. ENFORCEMENT POWER AND ENFORCEMENT AGENTS

1386. Enforcement power.

The following provisions are not in force¹. The provisions described below and in the following paragraphs apply where an enactment, writ or warrant confers power to use the procedure in Schedule 12 to the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 (taking control of goods and selling them to recover a sum of money)². The power conferred by a writ or warrant of control to recover a sum of money, and any power conferred by a writ or warrant of possession or delivery to take control of goods and sell them to recover a sum of money, is exercisable only by using that procedure³. A power to use this procedure to recover a particular sum is called an 'enforcement power'⁴.

Only an enforcement agent⁵ may take control of goods and sell them under an enforcement power⁶.

The statutory provisions relating to the procedure in Schedule 12⁷ bind the Crown⁸, but the procedure may not be used (1) to recover debts due from the Crown; (2) to take control of or sell goods of the Crown (including goods owned by the Crown jointly or in common with another person); or (3) to enter premises occupied by the Crown⁹.

1 The Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Pt 3 Ch 1 (ss 62-70) and Sch 12 are to be brought into force as from a day to be appointed. At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed. The Chapter replaces the common law rules about the exercise of the powers which under it become powers to use the procedure in Sch 12: s 65(1). The rules replaced include (1) rules distinguishing between an illegal, an irregular and an excessive exercise of a power; (2) rules that would entitle a person to bring proceedings of a kind for which Sch 12 para 66 provides (remedies available to the debtor: see PARA 1409); (3) rules of replevin (see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 714; DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 1081 et seq); (4) rules about rescuing goods: s 65(2). Where (a) by any provision of Pt 3 a power becomes a power to use the procedure in Sch 12; and (b) before the commencement of that provision, goods have been distrained or executed against, or made subject to a walking possession agreement, under the power, Pt 3 does not affect the continuing exercise of the power in relation to those goods: s 66.

2 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 62(1). Using the procedure in Sch 12 to recover a sum means taking control of goods and selling them to recover that sum in accordance with Sch 12 and regulations under it: Sch 12 para 1(1).

3 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 62(2). As to the procedure see PARA 1389 et seq. 'Control' (except in Sch 12 para 5(4)(a) (see PARA 1389 note 15)) means control under an enforcement power: Sch 12 para 3(1). Schedule 12 is subject to the Insolvency Act 1986 ss 183, 184 and 346 (see PARAS 1354-1355; COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY vol 7(4) (2004 Reissue) PARA 882 et seq; and BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY vol 3(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 678 et seq); Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 69.

4 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 1(2).

5 'Enforcement agent', in the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 means an individual authorised by s 63(2) to act as an enforcement agent: Sch 12 para 2(1); see PARA 1387. An enforcement agent, if he is not the person on whom an enforcement power is conferred, may act under the power only if authorised by that person: Sch 12 para 2(3). In relation to goods taken control of by an enforcement agent under an enforcement power, references to the enforcement agent are references to any person for the time being acting as an enforcement agent under the power: Sch 12 para 2(4).

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/A. ENFORCEMENT POWER AND ENFORCEMENT AGENTS/1387. Enforcement agents.

1387. Enforcement agents.

The following provisions are not in force¹. For the purposes of the procedure for taking control of goods², an individual may act as an enforcement agent³ only if one of the following applies: (1) he acts under a certificate to act as an enforcement agent⁴; (2) he is exempt⁵; (3) he acts in the presence and under the direction of a person to whom head (1) or (2) applies⁶. A person is guilty of an offence if, knowingly or recklessly, he purports to act as an enforcement agent without being authorised to do so⁷.

A certificate to act as an enforcement agent may be issued by a judge assigned to a county court district⁸ or, in prescribed⁹ circumstances, by a district judge¹⁰.

1 See PARA 1386 note 1.

3 As to the meaning of 'enforcement agent' see PARA 1386 note 5.

4 He under the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 64.

5 An individual is exempt if he acts in the course of his duty as one of the following: (1) a constable; (2) an officer of Revenue and Customs; (3) a person appointed under the Courts Act 2003 s 2(1) (court officers and staff); Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 63(3). An individual is also exempt if he acts in the course of his duty as an officer of a government department: s 63(4). For the purposes of an enforcement power conferred by a warrant, an individual is exempt if in relation to the warrant he is a civilian enforcement officer, as defined in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 125A (civilian enforcement officers: see MAGISTRATES): Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 63(5).

8 As to county court districts see PARA 58.

9 'Prescribed' means prescribed by regulations; and 'regulations' means regulations made by the Lord Chancellor: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 90(1).

10 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 64(1). The Lord Chancellor must make regulations about certificates under s 64: s 64(2). The regulations may in particular include provision (1) for fees to be charged for applications; (2) for certificates to be issued subject to conditions, including the giving of security; (3) for certificates to be limited to purposes specified by or under the regulations; (4) about complaints against holders of certificates; (5) about suspension and cancellation of certificates; (6) to modify or supplement Sch 12 for cases where a certificate is suspended or cancelled or expires; (7) requiring courts to make information available relating to certificates: s 64(3). Any power to make regulations under Pt 3 is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 90(2), (3). A statutory instrument containing regulations under Sch 12 para 24(2) (see PARA 1396) or 31(5) (see PARA 1397) may not be made unless a draft of the instrument has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 90(4). In any other case a statutory instrument containing regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 90(5). Regulations may include any of the following that the Lord Chancellor considers necessary or expedient: (a) supplementary, incidental or consequential provision; (b) transitional, transitional or saving provision: s 90(6). Regulations may make different provision for different cases: s 90(7).

A certificate under the Law of Distress Amendment Act 1888 s 7 (see DISTRESS vol 13 (2007 Reissue) PARA 994) which is in force on the coming into force of the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 64 has effect as a certificate under s 64, subject to any provision made by regulations: s 64(4).

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/A. ENFORCEMENT POWER AND ENFORCEMENT AGENTS/1388. Power of High Court to stay execution.

1388. Power of High Court to stay execution.

The following provisions are not in force¹. If, at any time, the High Court is satisfied that a party to proceedings² is unable to pay (1) a sum recovered against him (by way of satisfaction of the claim or counterclaim in the proceedings or by way of costs or otherwise); or (2) any instalment of such a sum, the court may stay the execution of any writ of control³ issued in the proceedings, for whatever period and on whatever terms it thinks fit⁴. The court may act under this power from time to time until it appears that the cause of the inability to pay has ceased⁵.

2 For these purposes a party to proceedings includes every person, whether or not named as a party, who is served with notice of the proceedings or attends them: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 70(3).

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS/1389. Binding property in the debtor's goods.

B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS

1389. Binding property in the debtor's goods.

The following provisions are not in force¹. For the purposes of any enforcement power², the property in all goods³ of the debtor⁴, except goods that are exempt goods⁵ or are protected under any other enactment, becomes bound in accordance with the following provisions⁶. Where the power is conferred by a writ issued from the High Court the writ binds the property in the goods from the time when it is received by the person who is under a duty to indorse it⁷. Where the power is conferred by a warrant⁸, the warrant binds the property in the goods from the time when it is received by the person who is under a duty to indorse it under the relevant statutory provision⁹. Where the above provisions do not apply but notice of enforcement is given to the debtor¹⁰, the notice binds the property in the goods from the time when the notice is given¹¹.

An assignment or transfer of any interest of the debtor's in goods while the property in them is bound for the purposes of an enforcement power is subject to that power and does not affect the operation of the enforcement procedure in relation to the goods, except as specifically¹² provided¹³. This, however, does not prejudice the title to any of the debtor's goods that a person acquires in good faith¹⁴, for valuable consideration and without notice¹⁵.

1 See PARA 1386 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'enforcement power' see PARA 1386.

3 'Goods' means property of any description, other than land: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 62(1), Sch 12 para 3(1).

4 In relation to an enforcement power, 'debtor' means the person liable to pay the debt or, if two or more persons are jointly or severally liable, any one or more of them: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 1(3), (5). 'Debt' means the sum recoverable: Sch 12 para 1(4). In Sch 12, references to goods of the debtor or another person are references to goods in which the debtor or that person has an interest, but references to goods of the debtor do not include references to trust property in which either the debtor or a co-owner has an interest not vested in possession: Sch 12 para 3(2). 'Interest' means a beneficial interest, and 'co-owner' in relation to goods of the debtor means a person other than the debtor who has an interest in the goods, but only if the enforcement agent knows that the person has an interest in the particular goods, or would know, if he made reasonable inquiries: Sch 12 para 3(1).

5 'Exempt goods' means goods that regulations exempt by description or circumstances or both: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 3(1). As to regulations see PARA 1387 note 10.

6 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 4(1).

13 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 5(1).

14 For these purposes, a thing is to be treated as done in good faith if it is in fact done honestly (whether it is done negligently or not): Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 5(3).

15 Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 5(2). For these purposes, 'notice' means (1) where the property in the goods is bound by a writ or warrant, notice that the writ or warrant, or any other writ or warrant by virtue of which the goods of the debtor might be seized or otherwise taken control of, had been received by the person who was under a duty to indorse it and that goods remained bound under it; (2) where the property in the goods is bound by notice under Sch 12 para 7(1), notice that that notice had been given and that goods remained bound under it: Sch 12 para 5(4). In head (1), 'indorse' in relation to a warrant to which the County Courts Act 1984 s 99 or the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 125ZA applies, means endorse under that section: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 5(5).

1390. Goods ceasing to be bound.

The following provisions are not in force¹. For the purposes of any enforcement power² the property in goods³ of the debtor⁴ ceases to be bound⁵ in accordance with the following provisions⁶. The property in any goods ceases to be bound (1) when the goods are sold; (2) in the case of money⁷ used to pay any of the amount outstanding⁸, when it is used⁹. The property in all goods ceases to be bound when any of the following happens: (a) the amount outstanding is paid, out of the proceeds of sale or otherwise; (b) the instrument under which the power is exercisable¹⁰ ceases to have effect; (c) the power ceases to be exercisable for any other reason¹¹.

1391. Notice and period of control.

The following provisions are not in force¹. An enforcement agent² may not take control of goods³ unless the debtor⁴ has been given notice⁵. Regulations⁶ must state (1) the minimum period of notice; (2) the form of the notice; (3) what it must contain; (4) how it must be given; (5) who must give it⁷. The enforcement agent must keep a record of the time when the notice is given⁸. If regulations authorise it, the court⁹ may order in prescribed¹⁰ circumstances that the notice given may be less than the minimum period¹¹. The order may be subject to conditions¹².

An enforcement agent may not take control of goods after the prescribed period¹³. The period may be prescribed by reference to the date of notice of enforcement or of any writ or warrant conferring the enforcement power¹⁴ or any other date¹⁵. Regulations may provide for the period to be extended or further extended by the court in accordance with the regulations¹⁶.

1392. Goods which may be taken.

The following provisions are not in force¹. An enforcement agent² may take control of goods³ only if they are on premises⁴ that he has power to enter⁵ or on a highway⁶. An enforcement agent may take control of goods only if they are goods of the debtor⁷. Subject to the above and to any other enactment under which goods are protected, an enforcement agent may take control of goods anywhere in England and Wales and may take control of any goods that are not exempt⁸. However, regulations⁹ may authorise him to take control of exempt goods in prescribed¹⁰ circumstances, if he provides the debtor with replacements in accordance with the regulations¹¹.

Generally, an enforcement agent may not take control of goods whose aggregate value is more than the amount outstanding¹² and an amount in respect of future costs, calculated in accordance with regulations¹³. However, an enforcement agent may take control of goods of higher value on premises or on a highway, only to the extent necessary, if there are not enough goods of a lower value within a reasonable distance on a highway or on premises that he has power to enter, either without warrant¹⁴ or under an existing warrant¹⁵.

1393. Method of taking control of goods.

The following provisions are not in force¹. To take control of goods² an enforcement agent³ must do one of the following: (1) secure the goods on the premises⁴ on which he finds them; (2) if he finds them on a highway⁵, secure them on a highway, where he finds them or within a reasonable distance; (3) remove them and secure them elsewhere; (4) enter into a controlled goods agreement⁶ with the debtor⁷.

Regulations⁸ may make further provision about taking control in any of the ways listed above, including provision determining the time when control is taken and prohibiting use of any of those ways for goods by description or circumstances or both⁹.

5 As to highways see HIGHWAYS, STREETS AND BRIDGES vol 21 (2004 Reissue) PARA 1 et seq; and as to goods on a highway see PARA 1397. Any liability of an enforcement agent (including criminal liability) arising out of his securing goods on a highway is excluded to the extent that he acted with reasonable care: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 62(1), Sch 12 para 13(2).

6 A controlled goods agreement is an agreement under which the debtor (1) is permitted to retain custody of the goods; (2) acknowledges that the enforcement agent is taking control of them; and (3) agrees not to remove or dispose of them, nor to permit anyone else to, before the debt is paid: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 paras 3(1), 13(4). ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS/1394. Entry to take control of goods.

1394. Entry to take control of goods.

The following provisions are not in force¹. An enforcement agent² may enter relevant premises³ to search for and take control of goods⁴. Where there are different relevant premises entry to each of them is authorised⁵. Repeated entry to the same premises is authorised, subject to any restriction in regulations⁶. In general, premises are relevant if the enforcement agent reasonably believes that they are the place, or one of the places, where the debtor⁷ usually lives or carries on a trade or business⁸.

If an enforcement agent applies to the court⁹ it may issue a warrant authorising him to enter specified premises to search for and take control of goods¹⁰. Before issuing the warrant the court must be satisfied that all the following conditions are met:

- 963 (a) an enforcement power¹¹ has become exercisable;
- 964 (b) there is reason to believe that there are goods on the premises that the enforcement power will be exercisable to take control of if the warrant is issued;
- 965 (c) it is reasonable in all the circumstances to issue the warrant¹².

The warrant authorises repeated entry to the same premises, subject to any restriction in regulations¹³.

Where goods on any premises have been taken control of and have not been removed by the enforcement agent, the enforcement agent may enter the premises to inspect the goods or to remove them for storage or sale¹⁴. This authorises repeated entry to the same premises¹⁵.

If he is acting under the Social Security Administration Act 1992 s 121A (recovery of contributions etc: see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS), premises are relevant if they are the place, or one of the places, where the debtor carries on a trade or business: Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 12 para 14(5) (repealed, as from a day to be appointed, by the Finance Act 2008 s 129(1), (3), Sch 43 Pt 1 para 10(1), (2); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

1395. Use of force.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Where (1) an enforcement agent² has power³ to enter premises⁴ to inspect goods⁵ or to remove them for storage or sale; (2) he reasonably believes that the debtor⁶ carries on a trade or business on the premises; (3) he is acting under an enforcement power under a writ or warrant of control issued for the purpose of recovering a sum payable under a High Court or county court judgment, the enforcement agent may if necessary use reasonable force to enter premises or to do anything for which the entry is authorised⁷.

If an enforcement agent has power to enter premises either without⁸ or under⁹ a warrant, then if the enforcement agent applies to the court¹⁰ it may issue a warrant which authorises him to use, if necessary, reasonable force to enter the premises or to do anything for which entry is authorised¹¹.

If an enforcement agent is applying for power to enter premises under a warrant¹², then if the enforcement agent applies to the court it may include in the warrant provision authorising him to use, if necessary, reasonable force to enter the premises or to do anything for which entry is authorised¹³.

The court may not issue a warrant authorising the use of force¹⁴ or include provision in a warrant to enter premises¹⁵ unless it is satisfied that prescribed¹⁶ conditions are met¹⁷. Such a warrant may require any constable¹⁸ to assist the enforcement agent to execute the warrant¹⁹.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS/1396. Powers of entry.

1396. Powers of entry.

The following provisions are not in force¹. They apply where an enforcement agent² has power³ to enter premises⁴.

The power to enter and any power to use force⁵ are subject to any restriction imposed by or under regulations⁶. A power to use force does not include power to use force against persons, except to the extent that regulations provide that it does⁷.

The enforcement agent may enter and remain on the premises only within prescribed⁸ times of day⁹. Regulations may give the court¹⁰ power in prescribed circumstances to authorise him to enter or remain on the premises at other times¹¹. The authorisation may be by order or in a warrant¹² and may be subject to conditions¹³.

The enforcement agent must on request show the debtor and any person who appears to him to be in charge of the premises evidence of his identity and his authority to enter the premises¹⁴. The request may be made before the enforcement agent enters the premises or while he is there¹⁵.

The enforcement agent may take other people onto the premises¹⁶, who may assist him in exercising any power, including a power to use force¹⁷ but must not remain on the premises without the enforcement agent¹⁸. The enforcement agent may take any equipment onto the premises¹⁹ and may leave equipment on the premises if he leaves controlled goods²⁰ there²¹.

After entering the premises the enforcement agent must provide a notice for the debtor giving information about what the enforcement agent is doing²². Regulations must state the form of the notice and what information it must give²³. Regulations may prescribe circumstances in which a notice need not be provided after re-entry to premises²⁴. If the debtor is on the premises when the enforcement agent is there, the enforcement agent must give him the notice then²⁵. If the debtor is not there, the enforcement agent must leave the notice in a conspicuous place on the premises²⁶. If the enforcement agent knows that there is someone else there or that there are other occupiers, a notice he leaves must be in a sealed envelope addressed to the debtor²⁷.

If the premises are occupied by any person apart from the debtor, the enforcement agent must leave at the premises a list of any goods he takes away²⁸.

The enforcement agent must leave the premises as effectively secured as he finds them²⁹.

1397. Goods on a highway.

The following provisions are not in force¹. If the enforcement agent² applies to the court³ it may issue a warrant which authorises him to use, if necessary, reasonable force to take control of goods⁴ on a highway⁵. The court may not issue a warrant unless it is satisfied that prescribed⁶ conditions are met⁷. The warrant may require any constable⁸ to assist the enforcement agent to execute it⁹. The power to use force is subject to any restriction imposed by or under regulations¹⁰. The power to use force does not include power to use force against persons, except to the extent that regulations provide that it does¹¹.

The enforcement agent may not exercise any power under Schedule 12 to the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 on a highway except within prescribed times of day¹². Regulations may give the court power in prescribed circumstances to authorise him to exercise a power at other times¹³. The authorisation may be subject to conditions¹⁴.

If the enforcement agent takes control of goods on a highway or enters a vehicle on a highway with the intention of taking control of goods, he must provide a notice for the debtor giving information about what he is doing¹⁵. Regulations must state the form of the notice and what information it must give¹⁶. If the debtor is present when the enforcement agent is there, the enforcement agent must give him the notice then¹⁷. Otherwise the enforcement agent must deliver the notice to any relevant premises¹⁸ in a sealed envelope addressed to the debtor¹⁹.

1398. Inventory and care of goods removed.

The following provisions are not in force¹. If an enforcement agent² takes control of goods³ he must provide the debtor⁴ with an inventory of them as soon as reasonably practicable⁵. If there are co-owners⁶ of any of the goods, the enforcement agent must instead provide the debtor as soon as reasonably practicable with separate inventories of goods owned by the debtor and each co-owner and an inventory of the goods without a co-owner⁷. The enforcement agent must as soon as reasonably practicable provide the co-owner of any of the goods with the inventory of those goods and a copy of the notice⁸ giving information about what the enforcement agent is doing⁹. Regulations¹⁰ must state the form of an inventory and what it must contain¹¹.

An enforcement agent must take reasonable care of controlled goods¹² that he removes from the premises¹³ or highway where he finds them¹⁴. He must comply with any provision of regulations about their care while they remain controlled goods¹⁵.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS/1399. Valuation and sale of goods removed.

1399. Valuation and sale of goods removed.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Before the end of the minimum period², the enforcement agent³ must (1) make or obtain a valuation of the controlled goods⁴ in accordance with regulations⁵; (2) give the debtor⁶, and separately any co-owner⁷, an opportunity to obtain an independent valuation of the goods⁸.

An enforcement agent must sell or dispose of controlled goods for the best price that can reasonably be obtained in accordance with the statutory provisions⁹. That does not apply to money¹⁰ that can be used for paying any of the outstanding amount¹¹, unless the best price is more than its value if used in that way¹².

The following provisions¹³ apply to the sale of controlled goods, except where the controlled goods are securities or the sale is by exchange of one currency for another¹⁴. The sale must not be before the end of the minimum period except with the agreement of the debtor and any co-owner¹⁵. Regulations must specify the minimum period¹⁶. Before the sale, the enforcement agent must give notice of the date, time and place of the sale to the debtor and any co-owner¹⁷. Regulations must state (a) the minimum period of notice; (b) the form of the notice; (c) what it must contain (besides the date, time and place of sale); (d) how it must be given¹⁸. The enforcement agent may replace a notice with a new notice, subject to any restriction in regulations¹⁹. Any notice must be given within the permitted period²⁰, which unless extended is 12 months beginning with the day on which the enforcement agent takes control of the goods²¹. Any extension must be by agreement in writing between the creditor²² and debtor before the end of the period²³. They may extend the period more than once²⁴.

The sale must be by public auction unless the court²⁵ orders otherwise²⁶. The court may make an order only on an application by the enforcement agent²⁷. Regulations may make provision about the types of sale the court may order²⁸. In an application for such an order the enforcement agent must state whether he has reason to believe that an enforcement power has become exercisable by another creditor against the debtor or a co-owner²⁹. If the enforcement agent states that he does, the court may not consider the application until notice of it has been given to the other creditor in accordance with regulations (or until the court is satisfied that an enforcement power³⁰ is not exercisable by the other creditor against the debtor or a co-owner)³¹. Regulations may make further provision about the sale of controlled goods, including in particular requirements for advertising and provision about the conduct of a sale³².

Regulations may make provision about the place of sale of controlled goods³³. They may prescribe circumstances in which the sale may be held on premises where goods were found by the enforcement agent³⁴. Except where the regulations provide otherwise, the sale may not be held on those premises without the consent of the occupier³⁵. If the sale may be held on those premises, the following provisions³⁶ apply³⁷. The enforcement agent and any person permitted by him may enter the premises to conduct or attend the sale and may bring equipment onto the premises for the purposes of the sale³⁸. This authorises repeated entry to the premises³⁹. If necessary the enforcement agent may use reasonable force to enable the sale to be conducted and any person to enter under this provision⁴⁰. The enforcement agent must on request show the debtor and any person who appears to him to be in charge of the premises evidence of his identity and his authority to enter and hold the sale on the premises⁴¹. The request may be made before the enforcement agent enters the premises or while he is there⁴². The enforcement agent must leave the premises as effectively secured as he finds them⁴³.

1400. Holding and disposal of securities.

The following provisions are not in force¹. They apply to securities² as controlled goods³. Regulations⁴ may make provision about how securities are to be held and disposed of⁵. Regulations may in particular make provision for purposes corresponding to those for which provision is made in relation to the disposal of other controlled goods⁶.

The creditor⁷ may sue in the name of the debtor⁸, or in the name of any person in whose name the debtor might have sued, for the recovery of any sum secured or made payable by securities, when the time of payment arrives⁹. Before any such proceedings are commenced or the securities are otherwise disposed of, the enforcement agent¹⁰ must give notice of the disposal to the debtor and any co-owner¹¹. Regulations must state (1) the minimum period of notice; (2) the form of the notice; (3) what it must contain; (4) how it must be given¹². The enforcement agent may replace a notice with a new notice, subject to any restriction in regulations¹³. Any notice must be given within the permitted period¹⁴, which unless extended is 12 months beginning with the time of payment¹⁵. Any extension must be by agreement in writing between the creditor and debtor before the end of the period¹⁶. They may extend the period more than once¹⁷.

1401. Application of proceeds.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Proceeds from the exercise of an enforcement power² must be used to pay the amount outstanding³. Proceeds are any of the following: (1) proceeds of sale or disposal of controlled goods⁴; (2) money⁵ taken in exercise of the power⁶ that can be used for paying any of the outstanding amount⁷.

The amount outstanding is the sum of (a) the amount of the debt⁸ which remains unpaid (or an amount that the creditor⁹ agrees to accept in full satisfaction of the debt); (b) any amounts recoverable out of proceeds in accordance with regulations¹⁰ relating to costs¹¹.

If the proceeds are less than the amount outstanding, which amounts in heads (a) and (b) must be paid, and how much of any amount, is to be determined in accordance with regulations¹². If the proceeds are more than the amount outstanding, the surplus must be paid to the debtor¹³.

If there is a co-owner¹⁴ of any of the goods, the enforcement agent¹⁵ must first pay the co-owner a share of the proceeds of those goods proportionate to his interest¹⁶ and then deal with the rest of the proceeds under the above provisions¹⁷. Regulations may make provision for resolving disputes about what share is due to the co-owner¹⁸.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS/1403. Abandonment of goods.

1403. Abandonment of goods.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Controlled goods² other than securities³ and money⁴ that can be used for paying any of the outstanding amount⁵ are abandoned (1) if the enforcement agent⁶ does not give the debtor⁷ or any co-owner⁸ notice of sale⁹ within the permitted period¹⁰; (2) if they are unsold after a sale of which due notice¹¹ has been given¹². Regulations¹³ may prescribe other circumstances in which controlled goods are abandoned¹⁴. If such controlled goods are abandoned then, in relation to the enforcement power¹⁵ concerned, (a) the enforcement power ceases to be exercisable and; (b) as soon as reasonably practicable the enforcement agent must make the goods available for collection by the debtor, if he removed them from where he found them¹⁶. Where the enforcement power was under a writ or warrant, these provisions do not affect any power to issue another writ or warrant¹⁷. Regulations may make further provision about arrangements as to making the goods available for collection, including in particular provision about the disposal of goods uncollected after a prescribed¹⁸ period¹⁹.

Securities as controlled goods are abandoned (i) if the enforcement agent does not give the debtor or any co-owner notice of disposal²⁰ within the permitted period²¹; (ii) if they are not disposed of in accordance with such notice of disposal²². Regulations may prescribe other circumstances in which securities are abandoned²³. If securities are abandoned then, in relation to the enforcement power concerned, (A) the enforcement power ceases to be exercisable; and (B) as soon as reasonably practicable the enforcement agent must make the securities available for collection by the debtor, if he removed them from where he found them²⁴. Where the enforcement power was under a writ or warrant, these provisions do not affect any power to issue another writ or warrant²⁵.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(2) EXECUTION AND RELATED ENFORCEMENT PROCEDURES/(viii) Taking Control of Goods/B. PROCEDURE FOR TAKING CONTROL OF GOODS/1404. Payment of amount outstanding.

1404. Payment of amount outstanding.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Where the debtor² pays the amount outstanding³ in full after the enforcement agent⁴ has taken control of goods⁵ and before they are sold⁶ or abandoned⁷, then if the enforcement agent has removed the goods, he must as soon as reasonably practicable make them available for collection by the debtor⁸. No further step may be taken under the enforcement power⁹ concerned¹⁰. For these purposes the amount outstanding is reduced by the value of any controlled goods¹¹ consisting of money¹² required to be used to pay that amount, and the requirement to make the goods available for collection does not apply to that money¹³.

If a further step is taken despite the prohibition above¹⁴, the enforcement agent is not liable unless he had notice¹⁵, when the step was taken, that the amount outstanding had been paid in full¹⁶, and this applies to a related party¹⁷ as to the enforcement agent¹⁸. If the step taken is sale of any of the goods the purchaser acquires good title unless, at the time of sale, he or the enforcement agent had notice that the amount outstanding had been paid in full¹⁹. These provisions do not affect any right of the debtor or a co-owner²⁰ to a remedy against any person other than the enforcement agent or a related party²¹.

1405. Third party claiming goods.

The following provisions are not in force¹. They apply where a person makes an application to the court² claiming that goods³ taken control of⁴ are his and not the debtor's⁵. After receiving notice of the application the enforcement agent⁶ must not sell the goods, or dispose of them (in the case of securities⁷), unless directed by the court⁸. The court may direct the enforcement agent to sell or dispose of the goods if the applicant fails to make, or to continue to make, the required payments into court⁹. The required payments are (1) payment on making the application¹⁰ of an amount equal to the value of the goods, or to a proportion of it directed by the court¹¹; (2) payment, at prescribed times (on making the application or later), of any amounts prescribed in respect of the enforcement agent's costs of retaining the goods¹². If the court does not direct a sale as above, the court may still direct the enforcement agent to sell or dispose of the goods before the court determines the applicant's claim, if it considers it appropriate¹³.

If the court makes a direction for sale, the statutory provisions as to sale¹⁴ apply subject to any modification directed by the court, and the enforcement agent must pay the proceeds of sale or disposal into court¹⁵.

1406. Application of power to assignee or transferee.

The following provisions are not in force¹. The statutory power to take control of goods² applies with modifications where an interest³ of the debtor's⁴ in goods is assigned or transferred while the property in the goods is bound for the purposes of an enforcement power⁵, and the enforcement agent⁶ knows that the assignee or transferee has an interest in the particular goods or would know, if he made reasonable inquiries⁷.

The provisions as to inventory⁸, valuation⁹, sale¹⁰ and remedies after payment of the amount outstanding¹¹ apply as if the assignee or transferee were a co-owner¹² of the goods with the debtor¹³. If the interest of the assignee or transferee was acquired in good faith¹⁴, for valuable consideration and without notice¹⁵, the requirement to pay to the co-owner a share of the proceeds of sale¹⁶ applies as if 'co-owner' included the assignee or transferee¹⁷. If the interest of the assignee or transferee was not acquired in good faith, for valuable consideration and without notice, the enforcement agent must pay any surplus¹⁸ to the assignee or transferee and to the debtor (if he retains an interest)¹⁹. If the surplus is payable to two or more persons it must be paid in shares proportionate to their interests²⁰.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Any liability of an enforcement agent² or related party³ to a lawful claimant⁴ for the sale of controlled goods⁵ is excluded except in two cases⁶. The first exception is where at the time of the sale the enforcement agent had notice⁷ that the goods were not the debtor's⁸, or not his alone⁹. The second exception is where before sale the lawful claimant had made an application to the court¹⁰ claiming an interest in the goods¹¹.

Any liability of an enforcement agent or related party to a lawful claimant¹² for paying over proceeds is excluded except in two cases¹³. The first exception is where at the time of the payment he had notice that the goods were not the debtor's, or not his alone¹⁴. The second exception is where before that time the lawful claimant had made an application to the court claiming an interest in the goods¹⁵.

These provisions do not affect the liability of a person other than the enforcement agent or a related party and do not apply to the creditor¹⁶ if he is the enforcement agent¹⁷.

The following provisions are not in force¹. Where an enforcement agent² (1) breaches a provision of the statutory power to take control of goods³; or (2) acts under an enforcement power⁴ under a writ, warrant, liability order or other instrument that is defective, the breach or defect does not make the enforcement agent, or a person he is acting for, a trespasser, but the debtor⁵ may bring proceedings in respect of the breach or defect⁶.

Subject to rules of court, the proceedings may be brought in the High Court, in relation to an enforcement power under a writ of the High Court, in a county court, in relation to an enforcement power under a warrant issued by a county court and in any other case, in the High Court or a county court⁷. In the proceedings the court may, without prejudice to any other powers of the court⁸, (a) order goods to be returned to the debtor; (b) order the enforcement agent or a related party⁹ to pay damages in respect of loss suffered by the debtor as a result of the breach or of anything done under the defective instrument¹⁰. The power to order damages does not apply where the enforcement agent acted in the reasonable belief that he was not breaching a statutory provision, or (as the case may be) that the instrument was not defective¹¹.

If a debtor wrongfully interferes with controlled goods¹² and the creditor suffers loss as a result, the creditor may bring a claim against the debtor in respect of the loss¹³.

(i) Third Party Debt Orders

A. INTRODUCTION

1411. Meaning of 'third party debt order'.

Part 72 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹ contains rules which provide for a judgment creditor² to obtain an order for the payment to him of money which a third party who is within the jurisdiction³ owes to a judgment debtor⁴.

Third party debt orders, formerly known as 'garnishee orders'⁵, are one of the methods of enforcing a money judgment⁶. Upon the application of the judgment creditor⁷, the court⁸ may make an order (a 'final third party debt order') requiring a third party to pay to the judgment creditor (1) the amount of any debt due or accruing due to the judgment debtor from the third party⁹; or (2) as much of it as may be sufficient to satisfy the judgment debt and the judgment creditor's costs of the application¹⁰.

The court will not make a final third party debt order without first making an interim third party debt order¹¹.

¹ ie CPR Pt 72: see the text and notes 2-10; and PARA 1417 et seq. As to the application of the CPR see PARA 32.

² As to the meaning of 'judgment creditor' see PARA 1236.

³ As to the meaning of 'jurisdiction' see PARA 117 note 6. It has been held that voluntary submission to the jurisdiction subsequent to the making of the order renders the third party a person within the jurisdiction: see SCF Finance Co Ltd v Masri (No 3) [1987] QB 1028, [1987] 1 All ER 194, CA. As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARA 33 text and note 2.

A third party debt order can only be made where it discharges the third party's debt to the judgment debtor pro tanto under the law governing that debt: Société Eram Shipping Co Ltd v Compagnie Internationale de Navigation [2003] UKHL 30, [2003] 3 All ER 465, [2003] 2 All ER (Comm) 65. The relation of creditor and debtor must exist between the judgment debtor and the third party (see eg Webb v Stenton (1883) 11 QBD 518, CA; Wells v Wells [1914] P 157, CA (barrister's fees)). A third party debt order cannot therefore be made (1) in respect of dividends payable to the judgment debtor by a trustee in bankruptcy (Prout v Gregory (1889) 24 QBD 281; Re Greensill (1872) LR 8 CP 24; Boyse v Simpson (1859) 8 ICLR 523; Gilmour v Simpson (1859) 8 ICLR, App xxxviii), or by the liquidator of a company (Mack v Ward [1884] WN 16; cf Spence v Coleman [1901] 2 KB 199, CA; but see Klauber v Weill (1901) 17 TLR 344 (where, however, the liquidator did not object to the order)); nor (2) in respect of money which has been attached at the suit of the judgment debtor (Cooper v Lawson (1889) 6 TLR 34), or money which has been ordered to be paid into court (Re Greer, Napper v Fanshawe [1895] 2 Ch 217; Howell v Metropolitan District Rly Co (1881) 19 ChD 508; Stevens v Phelps (1875) 10 Ch App 417; Adams v Gillen (1875) IR 9 CL 148; Grant v Harding (1767) 4 Term Rep 313n; Coppell v Smith (1791) 4 Term Rep 312; cf Dolphin v Layton (1879) 4 CPD 130 (payment into county court)), or which is in the hands of an officer of the court (Re Greensill (1872) LR 8 CP 24 (surplus assets of bankrupt in hands of official receiver); cf Spence v Coleman [1901] 2 KB 199, CA (unclaimed share of company's assets paid into companies liquidation account)), and contrast Re Warwick and Worcester Rly Co, Prichard's Claim, ex p Turner, ex p Smith (1860) 2 De GF & J 354; Re Jervis (1885) 1 TLR 306 (money in hands of police found on prisoner)). Such an order may, however, be made where the officer in whose hands the money is is an enforcement officer (Re Greer, Napper v Fanshawe[1895] 2 Ch 217; Murray v Simpson (1858) 8 ICLR App xlv; O'Neill v Cunningham(1872) IR 6 CL 503) or receiver (Re Cowans' Estate, Rapier v Wright(1880) 14 ChD 638; and see Webb v Stenton(1883) 11 QBD 518, CA, and De Winton v Brecon Corpn (No 2) (1860) 28 Beav 200). The debt must be one which the judgment debtor could himself enforce within the jurisdiction for his own benefit (see eg Webster v Webster (1862) 31 Beav 393; Swiss Bank Corpn v Boehmische Industrial Bank[1923] 1 KB 673, CA; Richardson v Richardson[1927] P 228; Martin v Nadel[1906] 2 KB 26, CA; Bouch v Sevenoaks Rly Co (1879) 4 Ex D 133; Cohen v Cohen(1982) 4 FLR 451; cf Chapman v Callis (1862) 6 LT 282; Westoby v Day (1853) 2 E & B 605), for the creditor acquires no greater rights than those of the debtor. As to payment out of money paid into court see PARA 1568 et seq; and as to the effect of the judgment debtor's insolvency see PARAS 1354-1356. As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARA 33 text and note 2.

5 See PARA 1225. Before 1854 there was no method, either at common law or in equity, to enable debts owing to the judgment debtor to be taken in execution: see Horsley v Cox(1869) 4 Ch App 92. The Common Law Procedure Act 1854 ss 60-67 (repealed), created the machinery for attaching the debts due or accruing due to the judgment debtor 'to answer the judgment', and this machinery was further developed by the Common Law Procedure Act 1860 ss 29, 30 (repealed). This process, however, was only available in respect of money judgments obtained in the superior common law courts: see Financial Corpn Ltd v Price(1869) LR 4 CP 155. These statutory provisions were replaced by the rules of court scheduled to the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1875 (repealed): see the former RSC Ord 45 (revoked), which regulated the practice of the attachment of debts and made it applicable to all the divisions of the High Court. This order, which was entitled 'Attachment of Debts', was replaced by RSC Ord 49 (revoked subject to transitional provisions), with the title 'Garnishee Proceedings', which regulated the practice of the attachment of debts in all divisions of the High Court (including the Family Division: see W v W (Barclays Bank Ltd, Garnishee)[1961] P 113, [1961] 2 All ER 56, CA). The procedure for obtaining third party debt orders in both the High Court and county courts is now governed by CPR Pt 72 and its accompanying practice direction: see the text and notes 1-4, 7-11; and PARA 1417 et seq.

B. DEBTS WHICH MAY BE MADE SUBJECT TO THIRD PARTY DEBT ORDER

1412. Considerations applying to bank accounts etc.

In determining whether, for the purposes of the jurisdiction of the High Court or a county court to attach debts¹ for the purpose of satisfying judgments or orders for the payment of money, a sum standing to the credit of a person in any deposit account and any withdrawable share account with a deposit-taker² is a sum due or accruing to that person and, as such, attachable in accordance with rules of court³, any condition mentioned below which applies to the account must be disregarded⁴. Those conditions are:

- 966 (1) any condition that notice is required before any money or share is withdrawn;
- 967 (2) any condition that a personal application must be made before any money or share is withdrawn;
- 968 (3) any condition that a deposit book or share-account book must be produced before any money or share is withdrawn; or
- 969 (4) any other prescribed condition⁵.

In deciding whether money standing to the credit of the judgment debtor in an account to which the above provisions relate may be made the subject of a third party debt order, any condition applying to the account that a receipt for money deposited in the account must be produced before any money is withdrawn will be disregarded⁶.

Foreign currency in an English deposit account may be made the subject of a third party debt order⁷.

1 le the jurisdiction to make third party debt orders: see PARAS 1411, 1417 et seq.

2 For these purposes, 'deposit-taker' means a person who may, in the course of his business, lawfully accept deposits in the United Kingdom; and this must be read with the Financial Services and Markets Act 2000 s 22, with Sch 2, and with any relevant order under s 22 (see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 791); Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(6), (7); County Courts Act 1984 s 147(1), (1A) (definitions respectively substituted, and the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(7) and the County Courts Act 1984 s 147(1A) respectively added, by SI 2001/3649). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

The provisions set out in the text apply to the accounts described in the text subject to any order for the time being in force under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(4) or the County Courts Act 1984 s 108(4): Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(1); County Courts Act 1984 s 108(1) (amended by SI 2001/3649). The Lord Chancellor may by order make such provision as he thinks fit, by way of amendment of those provisions or otherwise, for all or any of the following purposes, namely: (1) including in, or excluding from, the accounts to which those provisions apply accounts of any description specified in the order; (2) excluding from the accounts to which those provisions apply all accounts with any particular deposit-taker so specified or with any deposit-taker of a description so specified: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(4) (amended by SI 2001/3649); County Courts Act 1984 s 108(4) (amended by SI 2001/3649). Any such order must be made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(5); County Courts Act 1984 s 108(5). At the date at which this title states the law, no such order had been made.

3 le in accordance with the Civil Procedure Rules: see CPR Pt 72; and PARAS 1411, 1417 et seq.

4 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(1), (2) (s 40(1) amended by SI 2001/3649); County Courts Act 1984 s 108(1), (2) (s 108(1) amended by SI 2001/3649; the County Courts Act 1984 s 108(2) amended by the Civil Procedure Act 1997 s 10, Sch 2 para 2(1), (2)).

5 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(3); County Courts Act 1984 s 108(3). 'Prescribed' means prescribed by rules of court: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 151(1)(a); County Courts Act 1984 s 147(1) (amended by the Civil Procedure Act 1997 Sch 2 para 2(1), (2)). For the prescribed condition see the text and note 6.

6 CPR 72.2(3) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by virtue of the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2) to refer to the Senior Courts Act 1981 instead of the Supreme Court Act 1981; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

1413. Salaries and periodic payments.

Although a salary or other periodic payment of a similar nature¹ may, as a general rule, be made subject to a third party debt order² when it becomes a debt but not before³, certain payments of this class are protected. These payments are (1) wages of seamen⁴; (2) pay of officers in the public service⁵, including possibly members of Parliament⁶; (3) certain pensions payable out of public funds⁷; and (4) periodical payments under a court order in matrimonial proceedings⁸.

A separate procedure exists for the attachment of current earnings as a means of enforcing the discharge of monetary obligations⁹.

1 A garnishee order (now known as a third party debt order: see PARA 1411) attaching accrued income in the hands of trustees was held not to operate as a forfeiture where by the terms of the trust the income was given until the recipient attempted to charge or anticipate it: Re Greenwood, Sutcliffe v Gledhill [1901] 1 Ch 887, following Sutton, Carden & Co v Goodrich (1899) 80 LT 765; and dissenting from Bates v Bates [1884] WN 129; see also Re Stulz's Trusts, ex p Kingsford and Stulz (1853) 4 De GM & G 404, CA; Re Sampson, Sampson v Sampson [1896] 1 Ch 630. Where, therefore, the amount of the pension due has been paid into a bank to the pensioner's account, it may be attached (Jones & Co v Coventry [1909] 2 KB 1029, DC), although a mere crediting of the pensioner's account with the amount by the bank is not sufficient (Jones & Co v Coventry [1909] 2 KB 1029, DC); and when the pension is commuted, the commutation money is apparently attachable (Crowe v Price (1889) 22 QBD 429, CA).

C. PROCEDURE FOR MAKING THIRD PARTY DEBT ORDER

1417. Application for third party debt order.

An application for a third party debt order¹ may be made without notice². It must be issued in the court³ which made the judgment or order⁴ which it is sought to enforce, except that if the proceedings have since been transferred to a different court⁵, it must be issued in that court⁶. The application notice must be in the form⁷ and contain the information required by the relevant practice direction⁸.

The application notice must contain the following information:

- 970 (1) the name and address of the judgment debtor⁹;
- 971 (2) details of the judgment or order sought to be enforced;
- 972 (3) the amount of money remaining due under the judgment or order;
- 973 (4) if the judgment debt is payable by instalments, the amount of any instalments which have fallen due and remain unpaid;
- 974 (5) the name and address of the third party;
- 975 (6) if the third party is a bank or building society¹⁰, its name and the address of the branch at which the judgment debtor's account is believed to be held and the account number, or, if the judgment creditor¹¹ does not know all or part of this information, that fact;
- 976 (7) confirmation that to the best of the judgment creditor's knowledge or belief the third party is within the jurisdiction¹² and owes money to or holds money to the credit of the judgment debtor;
- 977 (8) if the judgment creditor knows or believes that any person other than the judgment debtor has any claim to the money owed by the third party, his name and (if known) his address and such information as is known to the judgment creditor about his claim;
- 978 (9) details of any other applications for third party debt orders issued by the judgment creditor in respect of the same judgment debt; and
- 979 (10) the sources or grounds of the judgment creditor's knowledge or belief of the matters referred to in heads (7), (8) and (9) above¹³.

The application notice must be verified by a statement of truth¹⁴.

The court will not grant speculative applications for third party debt orders, and will only make an interim third party debt order¹⁵ against a bank or building society if the judgment creditor's application notice contains evidence to substantiate his belief that the judgment debtor has an account with the bank or building society in question¹⁶.

1418. Interim third party debt order.

An application for a third party debt order¹ will initially be dealt with by a judge² without a hearing³. The judge may make an interim third party debt order fixing a hearing to consider whether to make a final third party debt order⁴ and directing that until that hearing the third party must not make any payment which reduces the amount he owes the judgment debtor⁵ to less than the amount specified in the order⁶.

An interim third party debt order will specify the amount of money which the third party must retain, which will be the total of (1) the amount of money remaining due to the judgment creditor⁷ under the judgment or order⁸; and (2) an amount for the judgment creditor's fixed costs⁹ of the application, as specified in the relevant practice direction¹⁰.

An interim third party debt order becomes binding on a third party when it is served¹¹ on him¹².

The date of the hearing to consider the application must be not less than 28 days after the interim third party debt order is made¹³.

Copies of an interim third party debt order¹, the application notice² and any documents filed³ in support of it must be served⁴:

- 980 (1) on the third party, not less than 21 days before the date fixed for the hearing⁵; and
- 981 (2) on the judgment debtor⁶ not less than seven days after a copy has been served on the third party and seven days before the date fixed for the hearing⁷.

If the judgment creditor⁸ serves the order, he must either file a certificate of service⁹ not less than two days before the hearing or produce a certificate of service at the hearing¹⁰.

An interim third party debt order relating to debts due or accruing due to a judgment creditor from a partnership must be served on a member of the partnership within the jurisdiction¹¹, a person authorised by a partner or some other person having the control or management of the partnership business¹².

Obligations of third parties served with interim order.

1421. Obligations of third parties served with interim order.

A bank or building society¹ served² with an interim third party debt order³ must carry out a search to identify all accounts held with it by the judgment debtor⁴. The bank or building society must disclose to the court⁵ and the judgment creditor⁶ within seven days of being served with the order, in respect of each account held by the judgment debtor:

- 982 (1) the number of the account⁷;
- 983 (2) whether the account is in credit⁸; and
- 984 (3) if the account is in credit:

- 39. (a) whether the balance of the account is sufficient to cover the amount specified in the order;
- 40. (b) the amount of the balance at the date it was served with the order, if it is less than the amount specified in the order; and;
- 41. (c) whether the bank or building society asserts any right to the money in the account, whether pursuant to a right of set-off or otherwise, and if so giving details of the grounds for that assertion⁹.

If the judgment debtor does not hold an account with the bank or building society, or the bank or building society is unable to comply with the order for any other reason¹⁰, the bank or building society must inform the court and the judgment creditor of that fact within seven days of being served with the order¹¹.

Unless the order states otherwise, a bank or building society served with an interim third party debt order is only required by these provisions to retain money in accounts held solely by the judgment debtor (or, if there are joint judgment debtors, accounts held jointly by them or solely by either or any of them) and to search for and disclose information about such accounts¹². It is not, for example, required to retain money in, or disclose information about, accounts in the joint names of the judgment debtor and another person or, if the interim order has been made against a firm, accounts in the names of individual members of that firm¹³.

Any third party other than a bank or building society served with an interim third party debt order must notify the court and the judgment creditor in writing within seven days of being served with the order, if he claims not to owe any money to the judgment debtor or to owe less than the amount specified in the order¹⁴.

Administrative and clerical expenses of third parties.

1422. Administrative and clerical expenses of third parties.

Where an interim third party debt order¹ made in the exercise of the jurisdiction to make third party debt orders² is served on a deposit-taker³, the deposit-taker may, subject to the following provisions, deduct from the relevant debt or debts⁴ an amount not exceeding the prescribed sum⁵ towards its administrative and clerical expenses in complying with the order⁶. The right of a deposit-taker to make such a deduction is exercisable as from the time the interim third party debt order is served⁷ on it⁸.

A deduction may be so made in a case where the amount of the debt or debts of which the whole or a part is expressed to be attached by the order⁹ is insufficient to cover both the amount of the deduction and the amount of the judgment debt and costs in respect of which the order was made, notwithstanding that the benefit of the attachment to the creditor is reduced as a result of the deduction¹⁰. An amount may not, however, be deducted or, as the case may be, retained in pursuance of these provisions in a case where, by virtue of the specified provisions of the Insolvency Act 1986¹¹ or otherwise, the creditor is not entitled to retain the benefit of the attachment¹².

1 As to interim third party debt orders see PARA 1418.

2 I.e. the jurisdiction mentioned in the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40(2) and the County Courts Act 1984 s 108(2): see PARA 1412. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

3 As to the meaning of 'deposit-taker' see PARA 1412 note 2 (definition applied, in the case of the High Court jurisdiction, by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A(3) (s 40A added by the Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 55, Sch 4 Pt I; the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A(3) (as so added) amended by SI 2001/3649)).

4 For these purposes, 'relevant debt or debts', in relation to a third party debt order served on a deposit-taker, means the amount, as at the time the order is served on it, of the debt or debts of which the whole or a part is expressed to be attached by the order: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A(1A); County Courts Act 1984 s 109(1A) (both added by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 ss 52, 69(5), Sch 9 para 11(2) and amended by SI 2001/3649 and SI 2002/439).

5 For these purposes, 'prescribed' means prescribed by an order made by the Lord Chancellor: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A(3) (as added: see note 3); County Courts Act 1984 s 109(3). Such an order (1) may make different provision for different cases; (2) without prejudice to the generality of head (1), may prescribe sums differing according to the amount due under the judgment or order to be satisfied; (3) may provide for the provisions set out in the text not to apply to deposit-takers of any prescribed description: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A(4) (as added: see note 3); County Courts Act 1984 s 109(4) (both amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1985 ss 52, 67(2), 69(5), Sch 8 Pt II, Sch 9 para 11(2); and by SI 2001/3649). Any such order must be made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A(5) (as so added); County Courts Act 1984 s 109(5). In exercise of the power so conferred, the Lord Chancellor made the Attachment of Debts (Expenses) Order 1996, SI 1996/3098, which came into force on 1 January 1997: art 1(1). The sum which any deposit-taker may deduct in accordance with the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 40A or the County Courts Act 1984 s 109 is £55: see the Attachment of Debts (Expenses) Order 1996, SI 1996/3098, art 2 (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2) to substitute a reference to the Senior Courts Act 1981 for the reference to the Supreme Court Act 1981; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(i) Third Party Debt Orders/C. PROCEDURE FOR MAKING THIRD PARTY DEBT ORDER/1423. Arrangements for debtors in hardship.

1423. Arrangements for debtors in hardship.

If (1) a judgment debtor¹ is an individual; (2) he is prevented from withdrawing money from his account with a bank or building society² as a result of an interim third party debt order³; and (3) he or his family is suffering hardship in meeting ordinary living expenses as a result, the court⁴ may, on an application by the judgment debtor, make an order permitting the bank or building society to make a payment or payments out of the account (a 'hardship payment order')⁵.

An application for a hardship payment order may be made in High Court proceedings, at the Royal Courts of Justice or to any district registry⁶ and, in county court proceedings, to any county court⁷. It will be dealt with by the court to which it is made⁸. A judgment debtor may only apply to one court for a hardship payment order⁹. If the application is made to a different court from that dealing with the application for a third party debt order¹⁰, the application for a third party debt order will not be transferred¹¹ but the court dealing with that application will send copies of the application notice¹² and the interim third party debt order to the court hearing the application for a hardship payment order¹³.

An application notice seeking a hardship payment order must include detailed evidence¹⁴ explaining why the judgment debtor needs a payment of the amount requested and must be verified by a statement of truth¹⁵. Unless the court orders otherwise, the application notice must be served¹⁶ on the judgment creditor¹⁷ at least two days before the hearing but does not need to be served on the third party¹⁸. In cases of exceptional urgency the judgment debtor may apply for a hardship payment order without notice to the judgment creditor and a judge¹⁹ will decide whether to deal with the application without it being served on the judgment creditor or direct it to be served²⁰. If the judge decides to deal with the application without it being served on the judgment creditor, where possible he will normally direct that the judgment creditor be informed of the application and give him the opportunity to make representations, by telephone, fax or other appropriate method of communication²¹.

A hardship payment order may permit the third party to make one or more payments out of the account and specify to whom the payments may be made²².

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(i) Third Party Debt Orders/C. PROCEDURE FOR MAKING THIRD PARTY DEBT ORDER/1424. Further consideration of the application.

1424. Further consideration of the application.

If the judgment debtor¹ or the third party objects to the court² making a final third party debt order³, he must file⁴ and serve⁵ written evidence stating the grounds for his objections⁶.

If the judgment debtor or the third party knows or believes that a person other than the judgment debtor has any claim to the money specified in the interim order⁷, he must file and serve written evidence stating his knowledge of that matter⁸.

If the third party has given notice⁹ that he does not owe any money to the judgment debtor, or that the amount which he owes is less than the amount specified in the interim order, and the judgment creditor¹⁰ wishes to dispute this, the judgment creditor must file and serve written evidence setting out the grounds on which he disputes the third party's case¹¹.

Written evidence under any of the above provisions must be filed and served on each other party as soon as possible, and in any event not less than three days before the hearing¹². If the court is notified that some person other than the judgment debtor may have a claim to the money specified in the interim order, it will serve on that person notice of the application and the hearing¹³.

At the hearing the court may:

- 985 (1) make a final third party debt order;

1425. Effect of final third party debt order.

A final third party debt order¹ is enforceable² as an order to pay money³.

If the third party pays money to the judgment creditor⁴ in compliance with a third party debt order, or the order is enforced against him, the third party is discharged from his debt to the judgment debtor⁵ to the extent of the amount paid by him or realised by enforcement against him⁶; and this applies even if the third party debt order, or the original judgment or order⁷ against the judgment debtor, is later set aside⁸.

A final third party debt order will not require a payment which would reduce to less than £1 the amount in a judgment debtor's account with a building society or credit union⁹.

2 As to methods of enforcement see generally PARA 1244 et seq.

3 CPR 72.9(1). The order is a final order (Randall v Lithgow (1884) 12 QBD 525), and cannot normally be discharged except with the consent of the parties. On the other hand, such an order made under a mistake, whether mutual or not, may be set aside, and any money paid under it by the third party will then be ordered to be repaid (Marshall v James [1905] 1 Ch 432, following Moore v Peachey (1892) 8 TLR 406, CA; and see Burrell & Sons v Read (1894) 11 TLR 36, CA; O'Brien v Killeen [1914] 2 IR 63); and such an order may be set aside following the determination of an issue between the parties which shows that it ought not to have been made (Burrell & Sons v Read (1894) 11 TLR 36, CA). No such order must, however, be made in respect of (1) any wages or salary payable to any officer of the Crown as such⁹; (2) any money which is subject to the provisions of any enactment prohibiting or restricting assignment or charging or taking in execution¹⁰.

The Lord Chancellor may by order direct that the provisions set out above are not to apply in relation to any money payable by the Crown to any person on account of any deposit in the National Savings Bank or a deposit in that Bank of any description specified in the order¹¹. 1429. High Court procedure for obtaining order restraining person from receiving money payable to him by the Crown.

In the High Court, an application for an order¹ restraining a person from receiving money payable to him by the Crown and directing payment of the money to the applicant or another person, may be made by an application under Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules². The application must be supported by written evidence setting out the facts on which it is based, and in particular identifying the debt from the Crown³. Where the debt from the Crown is money in a National Savings Bank account, the evidence must if possible identify the number of the account and the name and address of the branch where it is held⁴. Notice of the application, with a copy of the written evidence, must be served⁵ on the Crown and on the person to be restrained at least seven days before the hearing⁶.

The rules contained in Part 72 of the Civil Procedure Rules in relation to further consideration of the application⁷ apply in relation to such an application for an order restraining a person from receiving money payable to him by the Crown as they apply to an application⁸ for a third party debt order⁹, except that the court¹⁰ does not have power to order enforcement to issue against the Crown¹¹.

A. JURISDICTION TO ATTACH EARNINGS

1431. Courts with power to attach earnings.

The High Court may make an attachment of earnings¹ order to secure payments under a High Court maintenance order².

A county court may make an attachment of earnings order to secure:

- 989 (1) payments under a High Court or a county court maintenance order³;
- 990 (2) the payment of a judgment debt⁴, other than a debt of less than £50 or such other sum as may be prescribed by rules of court⁵; or
- 991 (3) payments under an administration order⁶.

A magistrates' court may make an attachment of earnings order to secure:

- 992 (a) payments under a magistrates' court maintenance order⁷; or
- 993 (b) the payment of any sum required to be paid by an order⁸ requiring a defendant in criminal proceedings to pay some or all of the cost of any representation funded for him as part of the Criminal Defence Service⁹.

The power of a county court to make an attachment of earnings order to secure a judgment debt is discussed in the following paragraphs¹⁰. The other powers mentioned above are discussed elsewhere in this work¹¹.

Under the Council Tax (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1992¹², a billing authority has power to make an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of any outstanding sum which is or forms part of an amount in respect of which a liability order relating to council tax has been made by a magistrates' court¹³. B. APPLICATION FOR ATTACHMENT ORDER TO SECURE PAYMENT OF JUDGMENT DEBT

1433. Person who may apply for order and conditions of court's power to make it.

The person to whom payment under the relevant adjudication¹ is required to be made, whether directly or through an officer of any court, may apply for an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of a judgment debt². It must appear to the court that the debtor has failed to make one or more payments required by the relevant adjudication³.

Where proceedings are brought in a county court for an order of committal⁴ in respect of a judgment debt for any of the specified taxes, contributions, premiums or liabilities⁵, the court⁶ may, in any circumstances in which it has power to make such an order, make instead an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of the judgment debt⁷.

A county court must not make an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of a judgment debt if there is in force an order or warrant for the debtor's committal⁸ in respect of that debt; but in any such case the court may discharge the order or warrant with a view to making an attachment of earnings order instead⁹.

1 As to the meaning of 'relevant adjudication' see PARA 1432 note 3.

2 See the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 3(1)(a). The judgment debt must be for £50 or more: see PARA 1431 note 5. As to the meaning of 'judgment debt' see PARA 1431 note 4. Section 3 does not apply to an attachment of earnings order to be made under the Courts Act 2003 s 97, Sch 5: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 3(A1) (added by SI 2006/1737).

The specified taxes, contributions etc are (1) income tax or any other tax or liability recoverable under the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 65, 66 or 68 (see INCOME TAXATION); (2) contributions equivalent premiums under the Pension Schemes Act 1993 Pt III (ss 7-68) (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 922); (3) Class 1, 2 and 4 contributions under the Social Security Contributions and Benefits Act 1992 Pt I (ss 1-19) (see SOCIAL SECURITY AND PENSIONS vol 44(2) (Reissue) PARA 34 et seq); Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 Sch 2 (amended by the Social Security Act 1973 s 100, Sch 28 Pt I; the Social Security Pensions Act 1975 s 65(1), Sch 4 para 16; the Social Security (Consequential Provisions) Act 1975 s 1(3), Sch 2 para 42; the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1989; the Social Security (Consequential Provisions) Act 1992 s 4, Sch 3 para 6; the Pension Schemes Act 1993 s 190, Sch 8 para 4; and the Pensions Act 1995 s 151, Sch 5 para 3).

6 'Court', in relation to an attachment of earnings order, means the court which made the order, subject to rules of court as to the venue for, and the transfer of, proceedings in county courts and magistrates' courts: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 25(1). 1434. Court to which application must be made.

An application for an attachment of earnings order may be made to the court¹ for the district² in which the debtor³ resides⁴. If, however, the debtor does not reside within England or Wales, or the creditor does not know where he resides, the application may be made to the court in which, or for the district in which, the judgment or order⁵ sought to be enforced was obtained⁶.

Where the creditor applies for attachment of earnings orders in respect of two or more debtors jointly liable under a judgment or order, the application may be made to the court for the district in which any of the debtors resides, so however that if the judgment or order was given or made by any such court, the application must be made to that court⁷.

1435. Mode of applying.

A judgment creditor¹ who desires to apply for an attachment of earnings order must file² his application certifying the amount of money remaining due under the judgment or order³ and that the whole or part of any instalment due remains unpaid⁴. Where it is sought to enforce an order of a magistrates' court, he must also file a certified copy of the order and a witness statement or affidavit⁵ verifying the amount due under the order or, if payments under the order are required to be made to the designated officer for the magistrates' court, a certificate by that designated officer to the same effect⁶.

1436. Service and reply.

Notice of the application together with a form of reply in the appropriate form must be served¹ on the debtor² in the prescribed manner³.

Within eight days after service on him of the documents mentioned above, the debtor must file⁴ a reply in the form provided⁵. The instruction to that effect in the notice to the debtor constitutes a statutory requirement⁶ but no proceedings may be taken for an offence alleged to have been committed⁷ in relation to the requirement unless the documents have been served on the debtor personally⁸ or the court⁹ is satisfied that they came to his knowledge in sufficient time for him to comply with the requirement¹⁰. Nothing in these provisions requires a defendant to file a reply if, within the eight-day period, he pays to the judgment creditor¹¹ the money remaining due under the judgment or order¹². Where such payment is made, the judgment creditor must so inform the court officer¹³.

On receipt of a reply the court officer must send a copy to the applicant¹⁴.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(ii) Attachment of Earnings/B. APPLICATION FOR ATTACHMENT ORDER TO SECURE PAYMENT OF JUDGMENT DEBT/1437. Court's power to obtain statement of earnings etc.

1437. Court's power to obtain statement of earnings etc.

Where in any proceedings a court has power to make an attachment of earnings order, it may:

- 1004 (1) order the debtor¹ to give to the court², within a specified period, a statement signed by him of:
- 25
42. (a) the name and address of any person by whom earnings³ are paid to him;
43. (b) specified particulars as to his earnings and anticipated earnings, and as to his resources and needs⁴; and
44. (c) specified particulars for the purpose of enabling the debtor to be identified by any employer of his⁵;
- 26
- 1005 (2) order any person appearing to the court to have the debtor in his employment to give to the court, within a specified period, a statement signed by him or on his behalf of specified particulars of the debtor's earnings and anticipated earnings⁶.

The order must be indorsed with or incorporate a notice warning the person to whom it is directed of the consequences of disobedience to the order and must be served on him personally⁷.

Without prejudice to these provisions, rules of court may provide that where notice of an application for an attachment of earnings order is served on the debtor, it must include a requirement that he must give to the court, within such period and in such manner as may be prescribed, a statement in writing of the matters specified in head (1) above and of any other prescribed matters which are, or may be, relevant⁸ to the determination of the normal deduction rate and the protected earnings rate to be specified in any order made on the application⁹. The provision so made is discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁰. If the debtor has failed to comply with this requirement, or to make payment to the judgment creditor¹¹, the court officer¹² may issue an order under heads (1) and (2) above which must be indorsed with or incorporate a notice warning the debtor of the consequences of disobedience to the order, be served on the debtor personally and direct that any payments made thereafter must be paid into the court and not direct to the judgment creditor¹³. If the person served with such an order fails to obey it or to file¹⁴ a statement of his means¹⁵ or to make payment, the court officer must issue a notice calling on that person to show good reason why he should not be imprisoned. Any such notice must be served on the debtor personally not less than five days before the hearing¹⁶.

In any proceedings in which a court has power to make an attachment of earnings order, and in any proceedings for the making, variation or discharge of such an order, a document purporting to be a statement given to the court in compliance with an order under head (1) or head (2) above, or with any such requirement of a notice of application for an attachment of earnings order as is mentioned above, is to be deemed, in the absence of proof to the contrary, to be a statement so given and to be evidence of the facts stated therein¹⁷.

The court officer may¹⁸, at any stage of the proceedings, send to any person appearing to have the debtor in his employment a notice requesting him to give to the court, within such period as may be specified in the notice, a statement of the debtor's earnings and anticipated earnings with such particulars as may be so specified¹⁹.

5 Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 14(1)(a). Section 14 also applies where the court or a fines officer has power to make an attachment of earnings order under the Courts Act 2003 s 97, Sch 5: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 14(1) (amended by SI 2006/1737). As from a day to be appointed, the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 14(1) is further amended by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 91, Sch 15 Pt 1 para 1, Pt 2 para 9, to substitute for the reference to an attachment of earnings order a reference to a Schedule 3 deductions order. 'Schedule 3 deductions order' means an attachment of earnings order under which periodical deductions are to be made in accordance with the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 Sch 3 Pt 1: s 25(1) (definition added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 15 Pt 1 paras 1, 6). 6 Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 14(1)(b).

As from a day to be appointed, where in any proceedings a county court has power to make a fixed deductions order, the court may order the debtor to give to the court, within a specified period, a statement signed by him of (1) the name and address of any person by whom earnings are paid to him; and (2) specified particulars for enabling the debtor to be identified by any employer of his: s 14(1A) (added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 15 Pt 1 para 1, Pt 2 para 10). 'Fixed deductions order' means an attachment of earnings order under which periodical deductions are to be made in accordance with the fixed deductions scheme; and 'fixed deductions scheme' has the meaning given by the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 6A(1): s 25(1) (definitions added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 15 Pt 1 paras 1, 6). As from a day to be appointed, s 14(4) is amended by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 15 Pt 1 para 1, Pt 2 para 13, to provide that rules of court may provide that where notice of an application for an attachment of earnings order is served on the debtor, it must include a requirement that he must, within such period and in such manner as may be prescribed, give the court a statement in accordance with the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 14(4A) or (4B). In a case where the attachment of earnings order would, if made, be a Schedule 3 deductions order, the debtor must give a statement in writing of the matters specified in s 14(1)(a) (see note 6), and of any other prescribed matters which are, or may be, relevant under s 6 to the determination of the normal deduction rate and the protected earnings rate to be specified in any attachment of earnings order made on the application: s 14(4A) (s 14(4A), (4B) added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 15 Pt 1 para 1, Pt 2 para 14). In a case where the attachment of earnings order would, if made, be a fixed deductions order, the debtor must give a statement in writing of the matters specified in the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 14(1A) (see note 6): s 14(4B) (as so added). 1438. Making attachment of earnings order.

An attachment of earnings order may be made to secure the payment of a judgment debt¹ if the debt is of not less than £50, or for the amount remaining payable under a judgment for a sum of not less than £50². On receipt of the debtor's³ reply⁴, the court officer⁵ may, if he has sufficient information to do so, make an attachment of earnings order⁶. A copy of the order must be sent to the parties and to the debtor's employer⁷.

Where an order is so made, the judgment creditor⁸ or the debtor may, within 14 days of service⁹ of the order on him and giving his reasons, apply on notice for the order to be reconsidered. The court officer must fix a day for the hearing of the application and give to the judgment creditor and the debtor not less than two days' notice of the day so fixed¹⁰. On hearing such an application, the district judge¹¹ may confirm the order or set it aside¹² and make such new order as he thinks fit¹³. The order so made must be entered in the records of the court¹⁴.

Where an order is not made by the court officer¹⁵, he must refer the application to the district judge who must, if he considers that he has sufficient information to do so without the attendance of the parties, determine the application¹⁶. Where he does not determine the application, he must direct that a day be fixed for the hearing of the application, whereupon the court officer must fix such a day and give to the judgment creditor and the debtor not less than eight days' notice of the day so fixed¹⁷. If the creditor does not appear at the hearing of the application but the court has received a witness statement or affidavit of evidence¹⁸ from him, or the creditor requests the court in writing to proceed in his absence, the court may proceed to hear the application and to make an order thereon¹⁹.

Where an order is made by the district judge without the attendance of the parties²⁰, the judgment creditor or the debtor may, within 14 days of service of the order on him and giving his reasons, apply on notice for the order to be reconsidered. The court officer must fix a day for the hearing of the application and give to the judgment creditor and the debtor not less than two days' notice of the day so fixed²¹. On hearing such an application, the district judge may confirm the order or set it aside and make such new order as he thinks fit. The order so made must be entered in the records of the court²².

C. CONSEQUENCES OF ATTACHMENT ORDER

1441. Effect and contents of order.

An attachment of earnings order¹ is an order directed to a person who appears to the court² to have the debtor³ in his employment⁴ and operates as an instruction to that person (1) to make periodical deductions from the debtor's earnings⁵; and (2) at such times as the order may require, or as the court may allow, to pay the amounts deducted to the collecting officer of the court⁶, as specified in the order⁷.

An attachment of earnings order must contain prescribed particulars enabling the debtor to be identified by the employer⁸. Those particulars are such of the following particulars relating to the debtor as are known to the court, namely his full name and address, his place of work and the nature of his work and his works number, if any⁹. The order must specify¹⁰:

- 1009 (a) the whole amount payable under the relevant adjudication¹¹, or so much of that amount as remains unpaid, including any relevant costs¹²;
- 1010 (b) the normal deduction rate, that is to say, the rate (expressed as a sum of money per week, month or other period) at which the court thinks it reasonable for the debtor's earnings to be applied to meeting his liability under the relevant adjudication¹³; and
- 1011 (c) the protected earnings rate, that is to say the rate (so expressed) below which, having regard to the debtor's resources and needs¹⁴, the court thinks it reasonable that the earnings actually paid to him should not be reduced¹⁵.

It has been held that an attachment of earnings order does not effect an assignment to the judgment creditor of the moneys to which the order refers¹⁶.

1 As to the jurisdiction to make an attachment of earnings order to secure payment of a judgment debt see PARA 1431; and as to the procedure on an application for such an order see PARA 1433 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' for these purposes see PARA 1433 note 6.

3 As to the meaning of 'debtor' see PARA 1432 note 3.

4 For these purposes, the relationship of employer and employee is to be treated as subsisting between two persons if one of them, as a principal and not as a servant or agent, pays to the other any sums defined as earnings by the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 24 (see PARA 1432): s 6(2).

5 In accordance with the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 6(1), Sch 3 Pt I (paras 1-6): see PARA 1443. As from a day to be appointed, the instruction is to make periodical deductions from the debtor's earnings, as specified in the order: s 6(1)(a) (substituted by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 91, Sch 15 Pt 1 paras 1, 2(1)). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

6 For the purposes of an attachment of earnings order, the collecting officer of the court is to be (subject to later variation of the order under the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 9 (see PARA 1446)), in the case of an order made by a county court, the appropriate officer of that court: s 6(7)(b) (s 6(7) amended, and s 6(8) added, by the Administration of Justice Act 1977 s 19(5)). 'Appropriate officer' means an officer designated by the Lord Chancellor: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 6(8) (as so added). The Lord Chancellor may by order make such provision as he considers expedient (including transitional provision) with a view to providing for the payment of amounts deducted under attachment of earnings orders to be made to such officers as may be designated by the order rather than to collecting officers of the court: s 6(9) (s 6(9)-(12) added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(2), Sch 17 para 5). Any such order may make such amendments in the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971, in relation to functions exercised by or in relation to collecting officers of the court as he considers expedient in consequence of the provision made by virtue of s 6(9): s 6(10) (as so added). The power to make such an order is exercisable by statutory instrument, subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 6(11), (12) (as so added). At the date at which this title states the law, no such order had been made.

7 Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 6(1). Section 6 also applies where the court or a fines officer has power to make an attachment of earnings order under the Courts Act 2003 s 97, Sch 5: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 6(1) (amended by SI 2006/1737).

As from a day to be appointed, if a county court makes an attachment of earnings order to secure payment of a judgment debt, the order must specify that periodical deductions are to be made in accordance with the fixed deductions scheme: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 6(1A) (s 6(1A), (1B) added by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 15 Pt 1 paras 1, 2(2)). As to the meaning of 'fixed deductions order' see PARA 1437 note 6. As to the fixed deductions scheme see PARA 1442. If a court (whether a county court or another court) makes any other attachment of earnings order, the order must specify that periodical deductions are to be made in accordance with the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 Sch 3 Pt 1: s 6(1B) (as so added). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for bringing these provisions into force.

The reference to relevant costs is to any costs of the proceedings in which the attachment of earnings order in question was made, being costs which the debtor is liable to pay: s 25(2).

1442. Fixed deductions scheme.

The following provisions are not yet in force¹. A 'fixed deductions scheme' means any scheme that the Lord Chancellor makes which specifies the rates and frequencies at which deductions are to be made under attachment of earnings orders so as to secure the repayment of judgment debts². The Lord Chancellor is to make the fixed deductions scheme by regulations³, the power to make which is exercisable by statutory instrument⁴. The Lord Chancellor may not make a statutory instrument containing the first such regulations unless a draft of the instrument has been laid before, and approved by resolution of, each House of Parliament⁵. A statutory instrument containing any subsequent regulations is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament⁶.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(ii) Attachment of Earnings/C. CONSEQUENCES OF ATTACHMENT ORDER/1443. Compliance with order by employer.

1443. Compliance with order by employer.

Where an attachment of earnings order has been made¹, the employer² must, if he has been served³ with the order, comply with it; but he is under no liability for non-compliance before seven days have elapsed since the service⁴.

Where a person is served with an attachment of earnings order directed to him and he has not the debtor⁵ in his employment, or the debtor subsequently ceases to be in his employment, he must in either case, within ten days from the date of service or, as the case may be, the cesser, give notice of that fact to the court⁶.

On any occasion when the employer makes, in compliance with the order, a deduction from the debtor's earnings⁷ he is entitled to deduct, in addition, £1, or such other sum as may be prescribed by order made by the Lord Chancellor⁸, towards his clerical and administrative costs⁹. He must also give to the debtor a statement in writing of the total amount of the deduction¹⁰.

In the case of an attachment of earnings order made to secure the payment of a judgment debt¹¹, the employer must on any pay-day¹²:

1012 (1) if the attachable earnings¹³ exceed the protected earnings¹⁴, deduct from the attachable earnings the amount of the excess or the normal deduction¹⁵, whichever is the less¹⁶;

1013 (2) make no deduction if the attachable earnings are equal to, or less than, the protected earnings¹⁷.

Where the employer is required to comply with two or more attachment of earnings orders in respect of the same debtor, all or none of which orders are made to secure either the payment of judgment debts or payments under an administration order¹⁸, then on any pay-day the employer must, for the purpose of complying with the obligations set out in heads (1) and (2) above, deal with the orders according to the respective dates on which they were made, disregarding any later order until an earlier one has been dealt with, and deal with any later order as if the earnings to which it relates were the residue of the debtor's earnings after the making of any deduction to comply with any earlier order¹⁹. Where, however, the employer is required to comply with two or more attachment of earnings orders, and one or more (but not all) of those orders are made to secure either the payment of judgment debts or payments under an administration order, then on any pay-day the employer must, for the purpose of complying with the obligations set out in heads (1) and (2) above:

1014 (a) deal first with any order which is not made to secure the payment of a judgment debt or payments under an administration order, complying with the provision set out above²⁰ if there are two or more such orders²¹;

1015 (b) deal thereafter with any order which is made to secure the payment of a judgment debt or payments under an administration order as if the earnings to which it relates were the residue of the debtor's earnings after the making of any deduction to comply with an order having priority by virtue of head (a) above²²; and

1016 (c) if there are two or more orders to which head (b) above applies, comply with the provision set out above²³ in respect of those orders²⁴.

1444. Interrelation with alternative remedies open to creditors.

Where a county court has made an attachment of earnings order¹ to secure the payment of a judgment debt², no order or warrant of commitment³ must be issued in consequence of any proceedings for the enforcement of the debt begun before the making of the attachment of earnings order⁴. So long as the order is in force, no execution⁵ for the recovery of the debt may issue against any property of the debtor without the leave of the county court⁶.

An attachment of earnings order made to secure the payment of a judgment debt ceases to have effect on the making of an order of commitment or the issue of a warrant of commitment for the enforcement of the debt⁷. Where an attachment of earnings order ceases to have effect under this provision, the court officer⁸ of the court⁹ in which the matter is proceeding must give notice of the cesser to the person to whom the order was directed¹⁰.

1445. Operation of order where person employed by the Crown.

The fact that an attachment of earnings order is made¹ at the suit of the Crown² does not prevent its operation at any time when the debtor³ is in the employment of the Crown⁴. Where a debtor is in the employment of the Crown and an attachment of earnings order is made in respect of him, then for the purposes of the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971, the chief officer for the time being of the department, office or other body in which the debtor is employed is treated as having the debtor in his employment⁵ and any earnings⁶ paid by the Crown or a minister of the Crown, or out of the public revenue of the United Kingdom, are treated as paid by that chief officer⁷. If any question arises, in proceedings for or arising out of an attachment of earnings order, as to what department, office or other body is concerned for these purposes, or as to who for those purposes is the chief officer thereof, the question must be referred to and determined by the Minister for the Civil Service⁸; but that minister is not under any obligation to consider such a reference unless it is made by the court⁹.

D. SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS

1446. Variation and discharge of orders.

The court¹ may make an order discharging or varying an attachment of earnings order². Where an order is varied, the employer³ must, if he has been served⁴ with notice of the variation, comply with the order as varied⁵; but he is under no liability for non-compliance before seven days have elapsed since the service⁶.

Rules of court may make provision as to the circumstances in which an attachment of earnings order may be varied or discharged by the court of its own initiative⁷. This power may be exercised in the following circumstances⁸:

- 1017 (1) where it appears to the court that a person served with an attachment of earnings order directed to him has not the debtor⁹ in his employment, the court may discharge the order¹⁰;
- 1018 (2) where an attachment of earnings order which has lapsed¹¹ is again directed to a person who appears to the court to have the debtor in his employment, the court may make such consequential variations in the order as it thinks fit¹²;
- 1019 (3) where, after making an attachment of earnings order, the court makes or is notified of the making of another such order in respect of the same debtor which is not to secure the payment of a judgment debt¹³ or payments under an administration order¹⁴, the court may discharge or vary the first-mentioned order having regard to the priority accorded¹⁵ to the other order¹⁶;
- 1020 (4) where, after making an attachment of earnings order, the court makes an order that the debtor furnish a list of all his creditors and liabilities to the court¹⁷ or makes an administration order, the court may discharge the attachment of earnings order or may¹⁸ vary the order in such manner as it thinks fit¹⁹;
- 1021 (5) on making a consolidated attachment of earnings order²⁰ the court may discharge any earlier attachment of earnings order made to secure the payment of a judgment debt by the same debtor²¹;
- 1022 (6) where it appears to the court that a bankruptcy order has been made against a person in respect of whom an attachment of earnings order is in force to secure the payment of a judgment debt, the court may discharge the attachment of earnings order²²;
- 1023 (7) where an attachment of earnings order has been made to secure the payment of a judgment debt and the court grants permission to issue execution²³ for the recovery of the debt, the court may discharge the order²⁴.

Before varying or discharging an attachment of earnings order of its own initiative²⁵ under any of heads (1) to (7) above, the court must, unless it thinks it unnecessary in the circumstances to do so, give the debtor and the person on whose application the order was made an opportunity of being heard on the question whether the order should be varied or discharged²⁶. For that purpose the court officer²⁷ may give them notice of a date, time and place at which the question will be considered²⁸.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(ii) Attachment of Earnings/D. SUBSEQUENT PROCEEDINGS/1447. Suspension of fixed deductions orders.

1447. Suspension of fixed deductions orders.

The following provisions are not yet in force¹. A county court must make an order suspending a fixed deductions order² if the court is satisfied of either or both of the following: (1) that the fixed deductions order requires periodical deductions to be made at a rate which is not appropriate; (2) that the fixed deductions order requires periodical deductions to be made at times which are not appropriate³.

The county court is to make the suspension order on the following terms:

- 1024 (a) if the condition in head (1) is met: on terms specifying the rate at which the debtor⁴ must make repayments⁵ (whether higher or lower than the rate at which the order requires the deductions to be made);
- 1025 (b) if the condition in head (2) is met: on terms specifying the times at which the debtor must make repayments;
- 1026 (c) if either or both conditions are met: on any additional terms that the court thinks appropriate⁶.

If the employer⁷ is given notice of the suspension order, the employer must cease to make the deductions required by the fixed deductions order; but the employer is under no liability for non-compliance before seven days have elapsed since service of the notice⁸.

A county court (i) must revoke the suspension order if any of the terms of the suspension order are broken; (ii) may revoke the suspension order in any other circumstances if the court thinks that it is appropriate to do so⁹.

Rules of court may make provision as to the circumstances in which a county court may of its own motion make a suspension order or revoke a suspension order¹⁰.

The suspension of a fixed deductions order does not prevent the order from being treated as remaining in force subject to the provisions discussed in this paragraph¹¹.

1448. Variation of Schedule 3 judgment debt orders.

The following provisions are not yet in force¹. A county court may vary a Schedule 3 judgment debt order² by changing the basis of deductions³. The county court may make the variation either in consequence of an application made to the court or of its own motion⁴. The variation takes effect on the date that it is made⁵.

A county court must vary a Schedule 3 judgment debt order by changing the basis of deductions if the order lapses⁶ and the county court directs the order again to a person who appears to have the debtor in his employment⁷. The variation must be made at the same time as the county court directs the order to such person⁸. The variation takes effect on the date that it is made⁹.

On the changeover date¹⁰, all Schedule 3 judgment debt orders are to be treated as if a county court had varied them by changing the basis of deductions¹¹, and the variation takes effect on the changeover date¹².

Where an order is varied, the employer¹³ must, if he has been served with notice of the variation, comply with the order as varied; but he is under no liability for non-compliance before seven days have elapsed since the service¹⁴.

2 A Schedule 3 judgment debt order is a Schedule 3 deductions order made by a county court to secure payment of a judgment debt: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 Sch 3A Pt 1 para 2 (as added: see note 1). As to the meaning of 'Schedule 3 deductions order' see PARA 1437 note 5.

1449. Variation of fixed deductions orders.

The following provisions are not yet in force¹. A court may not vary a fixed deductions order² by changing the basis of deductions³ unless the variation is in accordance with the following provisions⁴. A county court must vary a fixed deductions order by changing the basis of deductions if the county court directs⁵ the order to take effect as an order to secure payments required by an administration order⁶. The variation must be made at the same time as the county court gives that direction⁷. The variation takes effect on the date that it is made⁸.

Where an order is varied, the employer⁹ must, if he has been served with notice of the variation, comply with the order as varied; but he is under no liability for non-compliance before seven days have elapsed since the service¹⁰.

Where an attachment of earnings order has been made¹ and the person to whom it is directed ceases to have the debtor² in his employment, the order lapses, except as respects deduction from earnings³ paid after the cesser and payment to the collecting officer⁴ of amounts deducted at any time, and is of no effect unless and until the court⁵ again directs it to a person (whether the same as before or another) who appears to the court to have the debtor in his employment⁶.

E. ADMINISTRATIVE PROVISIONS

1452. Application of sums received by collecting officer.

The collecting officer¹ to whom a person makes payments in compliance with an attachment of earnings order² must, after deducting such court fees³, if any, in respect of proceedings for or arising out of the order as are deductible from those payments, deal with the sums paid in the same way as he would if they had been paid by the debtor⁴ to satisfy the relevant adjudication⁵. Where, however, a county court makes an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of a judgment debt⁶ and also orders⁷ the debtor to furnish to the court⁸ a list of all his creditors, sums paid to the collecting officer in compliance with the attachment of earnings order must not be dealt with by him as described above, but must be retained by him pending the decision of the court whether or not to make an administration order⁹ and must then be dealt with by him as the court may direct¹⁰.

Debtor's and employer's obligation to notify changes of employment and earnings.

1454. Debtor's and employer's obligation to notify changes of employment and earnings.

While an attachment of earnings order is in force¹, the debtor² must from time to time notify the court³ in writing of every occasion on which he leaves any employment, or becomes employed or re-employed, not later in each case than seven days from the date on which he did so⁴. He must, on any occasion when he becomes employed or re-employed, include in his notification under this provision particulars of his earnings⁵ and anticipated earnings from the relevant employment⁶.

While an attachment of earnings order is in force, any person who becomes the debtor's employer⁷ and knows that the order is in force and by what court it was made must, within seven days of his becoming the debtor's employer or of acquiring that knowledge, whichever is the later, notify that court in writing that he is the debtor's employer, and include in his notification a statement of the debtor's earnings and anticipated earnings⁸.

1455. Finding debtor's current employer.

The following provisions are not yet in force¹. If an attachment of earnings order lapses², the proper authority³ may request the Commissioners⁴ to disclose whether it appears to the Commissioners that the debtor⁵ has a current employer⁶ and, if it appears to the Commissioners that the debtor has a current employer, to disclose the name and address of that employer⁷.

The proper authority may make such a request only for the purpose of enabling the lapsed order to be directed to the debtor's current employer⁸, and the proper authority may not make such a request unless regulations⁹ are in force¹⁰. The proper authority may disclose such information¹¹ (including information identifying the debtor) as it considers necessary to assist the Commissioners to comply with a request¹² and the Commissioners may disclose to the proper authority any information (whether held by the Commissioners or on their behalf) that the Commissioners consider is necessary to comply with a request¹³. Nothing in these provisions is to be taken to prejudice any power to request or disclose information that exists apart from these provisions¹⁴.

If the Commissioners make a disclosure of information ('debtor information') under the above provisions¹⁵, a person to whom the debtor information is disclosed commits an offence if he uses or discloses the debtor information and the use or disclosure is not authorised¹⁶ by the relevant provisions¹⁷. The use or disclosure of the debtor information is authorised (1) if it is for a purpose connected with the enforcement of the lapsed order (including the direction of the order to the debtor's current employer) and with the consent of the Commissioners¹⁸; (2) if it is in accordance with an enactment or an order of court or for the purposes of any proceedings before a court, and it is in accordance with regulations¹⁹; (3) if the information has previously been lawfully disclosed to the public²⁰; (4) if it is in accordance with rules of court that comply with regulations²¹.

It is a defence for a person charged with an offence of unauthorised disclosure to prove that he reasonably believed that the disclosure was lawful²².

1456. Power to determine whether particular payments are earnings.

Where an attachment of earnings order is in force¹, the court² must, on the application of a person specified below, determine whether payments to the debtor³ of a particular class or description specified by the application are earnings⁴ for the purposes of the order⁵. The specified persons are the employer⁶, the debtor and the person to whom payment under the relevant adjudication⁷ is required to be made, whether directly or through an officer of any court⁸. An application to the court under this provision may be made to the district judge⁹ in writing¹⁰. The court officer¹¹ must thereupon fix a date and time for the hearing of the application by the court and give notice thereof to the specified¹² persons¹³.

Where such an application is made by the employer, he is not to incur any liability for non-compliance with the order as respects any payments of the class or description specified by the application which are made by him to the debtor while the application, or any appeal in consequence thereof, is pending¹⁴; but unless the court otherwise orders, this does not apply as respects such payments if the employer subsequently withdraws the application or, as the case may be, abandons the appeal¹⁵.

The employer is entitled to give effect to any determination for the time being in force under these provisions¹⁶.

F. CONSOLIDATED ATTACHMENT ORDERS

1459. Power to make consolidated attachment order.

The powers of a county court to make an attachment of earnings order¹ include power to make an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of any number of judgment debts². An attachment of earnings order made by virtue of this provision is known as a consolidated attachment order³.

The power to make a consolidated attachment order must be exercised subject to and in accordance with rules of court⁴. Rules made for these purposes may provide:

- 1030 (1) for the transfer from one court to another of an attachment of earnings order, or any proceedings for or arising out of such an order, and of functions relating to the enforcement of any liability capable of being secured by attachment of earnings⁵;
- 1031 (2) for enabling a court to which any order, proceedings or functions have been transferred under the rules to vary or discharge an attachment of earnings order made by another court and to replace it (if the court thinks fit) with a consolidated attachment order⁶;
- 1032 (3) for the cases in which any power exercisable under these provisions or the rules may be exercised by a court of its own initiative⁷ or on the application of a prescribed person⁸;
- 1033 (4) for requiring the officer of a court who receives payments made to him in compliance with an attachment of earnings order to deal with them as directed by the court⁹ or the rules instead of complying with the normal statutory provisions¹⁰ for their application¹¹; and
- 1034 (5) for modifying or excluding provisions of the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971, but only so far as may be necessary or expedient for securing conformity with the operation of rules made by virtue of heads (1) to (4) above¹².

Subject to the provisions of the relevant rules¹³, the court¹⁴ may make a consolidated attachment order where:

- 1035 (a) two or more attachment of earnings orders are in force to secure the payment of judgment debts by the same debtor¹⁵; or
- 1036 (b) on an application for an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of a judgment debt, or for a consolidated attachment order to secure the payment of two or more judgment debts, it appears to the court that an attachment of earnings order is already in force to secure the payment of a judgment debt by the same debtor¹⁶.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(ii) Attachment of Earnings/F. CONSOLIDATED ATTACHMENT ORDERS/1460. Application for consolidated order.

1460. Application for consolidated order.

An application for a consolidated attachment order¹ may be made by the debtor² in respect of whom the order is sought or by any person who has obtained or is entitled to apply for an attachment of earnings order to secure the payment of a judgment debt³ by that debtor⁴. In the latter case, the application must certify the amount of money remaining due under the judgment or order⁵ and that the whole or part of any instalment due remains unpaid⁶. Where the judgment which it is sought to enforce was not given by the court which made the attachment of earnings order, the judgment must be automatically transferred to the court which made that order⁷.

Where an application for a consolidated attachment of earnings order is made, the court officer⁸ must notify any party who may be affected by the application⁹ of its terms¹⁰ and require him to notify the court in writing, within 14 days of service¹¹ of notification upon him, giving his reasons for any objection he may have to the granting of the application¹². If notice of any objection is not given within the time stated, the court officer must make a consolidated attachment of earnings order¹³. If any party objects to the making of a consolidated attachment of earnings order, the court officer must refer the application to the district judge¹⁴ who may grant the application after considering the objection made and the reasons given¹⁵.

A person to whom two or more attachment of earnings orders are directed¹⁶ to secure the payment of judgment debts by the same debtor may request the court in writing to make a consolidated attachment order to secure the payment of those debts¹⁷. On receipt of such a request the above procedure¹⁸ applies with the necessary modifications as if the request were an application by the judgment creditor¹⁹.

Where the court¹ by which the question of making a consolidated attachment order falls to be considered² is not the court by which any attachment of earnings order has been made³ to secure the payment of a judgment debt⁴ by the debtor⁵, the district judge⁶ of the last-mentioned court must, at the request of the district judge of the first-mentioned court, transfer to that court the matter in which the attachment of earnings order was made⁷. If the debtor fails to attend at that time on that day or attends, but refuses to be sworn or give evidence, he may be ordered by the judge⁸ to be imprisoned for not more than 14 days⁹. The judge¹⁰ may at any time revoke the order and, if the debtor is already in custody, order his discharge¹¹.

If the debtor fails to attend at an adjourned hearing of an application for an attachment of earnings order and a committal order is made, the judge or district judge may direct that the committal order is to be suspended so long as the debtor attends at the time and place specified in the committal order¹². Where a committal order is so suspended and the debtor fails to attend at the time and place specified under this provision, a certificate to that effect given by the court officer¹³ is sufficient authority for the issue of a warrant of committal¹⁴.

In any case where the judge¹⁵ has power to make an order of imprisonment under the above provisions for failure to attend, he may, in lieu of or in addition to making that order, order the debtor to be arrested and brought before the court either forthwith or at such time as the judge may direct¹⁶.

7 Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 23(1) (amended by the Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 53(2)). As from a day to be appointed, for 'notice of an application to a county court for an attachment of earnings order for the variation of such an order' there is substituted 'relevant notice', and for 'the time specified for any hearing of the application' there is substituted 'the time specified in the notice for any hearing': see the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 23(1) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 91, Sch 15 Pt 1 para 1, Pt 2 paras 19, 20). For these purposes, 'relevant notice' means any of the following: (1) notice of an application to a county court to make, vary or suspend an attachment of earnings order; (2) notice that a county court is, of its own motion, to consider making, varying or suspending an attachment of earnings order: Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 23(1ZA) (added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 91, Sch 15 Pt 1 para 1, Pt 2 paras 19, 21). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for bringing these provisions into force.

8 A district judge or deputy district judge has the same powers under the Attachment of Earnings Act 1971 s 23 as a judge of a county court: s 23(11) (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(2), Sch 17 para 6). 1466. Offences.

Subject to the following provisions, a person commits an offence if:

- 1037 (1) being required¹ to comply with an attachment of earnings order, he fails to do so²; or
- 1038 (2) being required³ to give a notice that he has not the debtor in his employment or that the debtor has subsequently ceased to be in his employment, he fails to give it, or fails to give it within the time required⁴; or
- 1039 (3) he fails to comply with an order to give a statement of earnings and related matters⁵ or with any requirement of a notice of application for an attachment of earnings order that he must give the court such a statement⁶, or fails in either case to comply within the time required by the order or notice⁷; or
- 1040 (4) he fails to comply with the statutory obligation⁸ to notify the court of changes of employment and earnings⁹; or
- 1041 (5) he gives a notice for the purposes mentioned in head (2) above¹⁰, or a notification for the purposes mentioned in head (4) above¹¹, which he knows to be false in a material particular, or recklessly gives such a notice or notification which is false in a material particular¹²; or
- 1042 (6) in purported compliance with the statutory requirements mentioned in head (2) or head (4) above, or with an order such as is mentioned in head (3) above¹³, or with any such requirement of a notice of application for an attachment of earnings order as is mentioned in that head¹⁴, he makes any statement which he knows to be false in a material particular, or recklessly makes any statement which is false in a material particular¹⁵.

Where a person commits such an offence in relation to proceedings in¹⁶, or to an attachment of earnings order made by, a county court, he is liable on summary conviction to a fine of not more than level 2 on the standard scale¹⁷. Alternatively, he may be ordered by the county court judge¹⁸ to pay a fine of not more than £250 or, in the case of an offence specified below, to be imprisoned for not more than 14 days¹⁹. The specified offences for which a judge²⁰ may impose imprisonment are an offence under head (3) or head (4) above, if committed by the debtor²¹ and an offence under head (5) or head (6) above whether committed by the debtor or by any other person²². Where under these provisions a person is ordered by a county court judge²³ to be imprisoned, the judge may at any time revoke the order and, if the person is already in custody, order his discharge²⁴.

Where it is alleged that a person has committed any offence mentioned in head (1), (2), (4), (5) or (6) above in relation to proceedings in, or to an attachment of earnings order made by, a county court, then unless it is decided to proceed against the alleged offender summarily the district judge must issue a summons calling upon him to show cause why he should not be punished for the alleged offence²⁵. The summons must be served²⁶ on the alleged offender personally²⁷ not less than 14 days before the return day²⁸.

It is a defence:

- 1043 (a) for a person charged with an offence under head (1) above to prove that he took all reasonable steps to comply with the attachment of earnings order in question²⁹;
- 1044 (b) for a person charged with an offence under head (2) above to prove that he did not know, and could not reasonably be expected to know, that the debtor was not in his employment, or, as the case may be, had ceased to be so, and that he gave the required notice as soon as reasonably practicable after the fact came to his knowledge³⁰.

Where a person is convicted or dealt with for an offence under head (1) above, the court³¹ may order him to pay, to whoever is the collecting officer of the court for the purposes of the attachment of earnings order in question³², any sums deducted by that person from the debtor's earnings and not already paid to the collecting officer³³.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(iii) Charging Orders/A. JURISDICTION/1467. Power to impose charging order on debtor's property.

(iii) Charging Orders

A. JURISDICTION

1467. Power to impose charging order on debtor's property.

Where, under a judgment or order of the High Court or a county court¹, a person (the 'debtor') is required to pay a sum of money to another person (the 'creditor') then, for the purpose of enforcing that judgment or order, the appropriate court² may make an order in accordance with the provisions of the Charging Orders Act 1979 imposing on any such property³ of the debtor as may be specified in the order a charge for securing the payment of any money due or to become due under the judgment or order⁴. Such an order is referred to as a 'charging order'⁵.

A charging order may be made either absolutely or subject to conditions as to notifying the debtor or as to the time when the charge is to become enforceable, or as to other matters⁶.

A charging order may also be made under the Council Tax (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1992⁷ by application to a county court where a magistrates' court has made a liability order or more than one liability order in relation to council tax⁸, the amount in respect of which the liability order was made, or the aggregate if more than one order has been made, is an amount the debtor is liable to pay⁹ and at the time that the application is made at least £1,000 of the amount or aggregate of the amounts in respect of which the liability order was made remains outstanding¹⁰. Charging orders in respect of council tax are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work¹¹.

Under the Solicitors Act 1974, a solicitor may apply for a charging order on a client's property in order to enforce the payment of his costs. Such charging orders are discussed elsewhere in this work¹².

1 For these purposes, references to a judgment or order of the High Court or a county court are to be taken to include references to a judgment, order, decree or award (however called) of any court or arbitrator (including any foreign court or arbitrator) which is or has become enforceable (whether wholly or to a limited extent) as if it were a judgment or order of the High Court or a county court: Charging Orders Act 1979 s 6(2) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 93(1), (4); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). As from a day to be appointed, the Lord Chancellor may by regulations provide that a charge may not be imposed by a charging order for securing the payment of money of an amount below that determined in accordance with the regulations: Charging Orders Act 1979 s 3A(1) (s 3A prospectively added by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 94). The Lord Chancellor may by regulations provide that a charge imposed by a charging order may not be enforced by way of order for sale to recover money of an amount below that determined in accordance with the regulations: Charging Orders Act 1979 s 3A(2) (as so prospectively added). Such regulations may make different provision for different cases and include such transitional provision as the Lord Chancellor thinks fit: s 3A(3) (as so prospectively added). The power to make regulations under s 3A is exercisable by statutory instrument: s 3A(4) (as so prospectively added). The Lord Chancellor may not make the first regulations under s 3A(1) or (2) unless (in each case) a draft of the statutory instrument containing the regulations has been laid before, and approved by a resolution of, each House of Parliament: s 3A(5) (as so prospectively added). A statutory instrument containing any subsequent regulations under those subsections is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 3A(6) (as so prospectively added).

1468. Property which may be charged.

A charge may be imposed¹ by a charging order² only on:

- 1045 (1) any interest held by the debtor³ beneficially in any asset of a kind mentioned below⁴ or under any trust⁵; or
- 1046 (2) any interest held by a person as trustee of a trust (the 'trust'), if the interest is in such an asset or is an interest under another trust and:
- 27
- 45. (a) the judgment or order⁶ in respect of which a charge is to be imposed was made against that person as trustee of the trust⁷; or
- 46. (b) the whole beneficial interest under the trust is held by the debtor unencumbered and for his own benefit⁸; or
- 47. (c) in a case where there are two or more debtors all of whom are liable to the creditor⁹ for the same debt, they together hold the whole beneficial interest under the trust unencumbered and for their own benefit¹⁰.
- 28

The assets referred to in head (1) above are land¹¹ and securities¹² of any of the following kinds:

- 1050 (iv) units of any unit trust¹⁸ in respect of which a register of the unit holders is kept at any place within England and Wales¹⁹, or funds in court²⁰.

In any case where a charge is imposed by a charging order on any interest in such an asset²¹ other than an asset consisting of land, the court making the order may provide for the charge to extend to any interest or dividend²² payable in respect of the asset²³.

A debtor's interest in a partnership²⁴ and the main or only dwelling of an individual who has funding under the Access to Justice Act 1999 and against whom an order for costs has been made²⁵ may also be charged.

1469. The appropriate court.

For the purposes of the jurisdiction to make a charging order under the Charging Orders Act 1979¹, the appropriate court is:

- 1051 (1) in a case where the property to be charged² is a fund in court, the court in which that fund is lodged³;
- 1052 (2) in a case where head (1) above does not apply and the order to be enforced is a maintenance order of the High Court⁴, the High Court or a county court⁵;
- 1053 (3) in a case where neither head (1) nor head (2) above applies and the judgment or order⁶ to be enforced is a judgment or order of the High Court for a sum exceeding the county court limit⁷, the High Court or a county court⁸; and
- 1054 (4) in any other case, a county court⁹.

Where a person applies to the High Court for a charging order to enforce more than one judgment or order, that court is the appropriate court in relation to the application if it would otherwise be the appropriate court on an application relating to one or more of the judgments or orders concerned¹⁰.

1 le under the Charging Orders Act 1979 s 1: see PARA 1467.

6 See PARA 1467 note 1.

7 For these purposes, 'county court limit' means the county court limit for the time being specified in an Order in Council under the County Courts Act 1984 s 145 as the county court limit for the Charging Orders Act 1979 s 1: s 1(2) (amended for these purposes by the Administration of Justice Act 1982 ss 34, 37, Sch 3 Pt II paras 2, 3, 6; and by the County Courts Act 1984 s 148(1), Sch 2 para 71). At the date at which this title states the law, no such Order had been made but, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1981, SI 1981/1123, has effect for certain purposes (see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 710) and it is apprehended that the relevant limit is £5,000, as specified by art 2, Table.

1470. Principles to be applied.

In deciding whether to make a charging order¹ the court must consider all the circumstances of the case and, in particular, any evidence before it as to the personal circumstances of the debtor² and whether any other creditor³ of the debtor would be likely to be unduly prejudiced by the making of the order⁴. The same principles apply with regard to a charging order made to secure the payment of a council tax liability⁵.

In the case of residential property, the court must consider whether the making of a charging order would, if unjustified, infringe the right to respect for private and family life under article 8(1) of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms⁶ and, if so, whether the making of the order is justified under article 8(2)⁷ and in particular whether it is necessary for the protection of the rights of the judgment creditor. Special considerations apply where an application for a charging order is made against a matrimonial home which is or may be the subject of proceedings for ancillary relief⁸. The protection afforded to a person's home when the court is considering whether to make a charging order to recover costs against a party in receipt of funding from the Legal Services Commission is discussed elsewhere in this title⁹.

As from a day to be appointed, where, under a judgment or order of the High Court or a county court, a debtor is required to pay a sum of money by instalments, the fact that there has been no default in payment of the instalments does not prevent a charging order from being made in respect of that sum: Charging Orders Act 1979 s 1(6), (7) (s 1(6)-(8) added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 93(1), (2)). However, if there has been no default, the court must take that into account when considering the circumstances of the case under the Charging Orders Act 1979 s 1(5): s 1(8) (as so added). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

B. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION FOR CHARGING ORDER

1471. Scope and application of Part 73 of the Civil Procedure Rules.

Part 73 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹ contains rules which provide for a judgment creditor² to enforce a judgment by obtaining a charging order³, a stop order⁴ or a stop notice⁵ over or against a judgment debtor's⁶ interest in an asset⁷. The first section of that Part⁸ applies to an application by a judgment creditor for a charging order under the Charging Orders Act 1979⁹ or under the Council Tax (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1992¹⁰. Charging orders in respect of council tax are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work¹¹.

Separate provision is made with respect to the procedure on an application for a charging order against a partner's interest in partnership property¹².

1472. Making the application.

An application for a charging order¹ may be made without notice². The application must be issued in the court³ which made the judgment or order⁴ which it is sought to enforce, unless:

- 1055 (1) the proceedings have since been transferred to a different court⁵, in which case the application must be issued in that court⁶;
- 1056 (2) the application is made under the Council Tax (Administration and Enforcement) Regulations 1992⁷, in which case it must be issued in the county court for the district⁸ in which the relevant dwelling⁹ is situated¹⁰;
- 1057 (3) the application is for a charging order over an interest in a fund in court¹¹, in which case it must be issued in the court in which the claim relating to that fund is or was proceeding¹²; or
- 1058 (4) the application is to enforce a judgment or order of the High Court and it is required¹³ to be made to a county court¹⁴.

Subject to these provisions, a judgment creditor may apply for a single charging order in respect of more than one judgment or order against the same debtor¹⁵.

If a judgment debtor¹ disposes of his interest in any securities², while they are subject to an interim charging order³ which has been served⁴ on him, then so long as that order remains in force that disposition is not valid as against the judgment creditor⁵.

A person served with an interim charging order relating to securities which are not held in court⁶ must not, unless the court⁷ gives permission, permit any transfer of any of the securities or pay any dividend, interest or redemption payment relating to them⁸. If a person acts in breach of this prohibition, he will be liable to pay to the judgment creditor either the value of the securities transferred or the amount of the payment made (as the case may be) or, if less, the amount necessary to satisfy the debt in relation to which the interim charging order was made⁹.

1478. Objection to the making of a final charging order.

If any person objects to the court¹ making a final charging order², he must file³ and serve⁴ on the applicant written evidence stating the grounds of his objections, not less than seven days before the hearing⁵.

On an application by a judgment debtor⁶ who wishes to oppose an application for a charging order, the court may transfer it to the court for the district⁷ where the judgment debtor resides or carries on business, or to another court⁸.

1479. Procedure at the hearing.

At the hearing the court¹ may:

- 1072 (1) make a final charging order confirming that the charge imposed by the interim charging order² is to continue, with or without modification;
- 1073 (2) discharge the interim charging order and dismiss the application;
- 1074 (3) decide any issues in dispute between the parties, or between any of the parties and any other person who objects to the court making a final charging order³; or
- 1075 (4) direct a trial of any such issues, and if necessary give directions⁴.

If the court makes a final charging order which charges securities⁵ other than securities held in court, the order will include a stop notice⁶ unless the court otherwise orders⁷.

Any order made at the hearing must be served⁸ on all the persons on whom the interim charging order was required to be served⁹.

The principles to be applied when the court is considering whether to make a charging order are discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁰.

In determining whether the judgment debtor has a beneficial interest in property subject to an interim charging order, the initial burden of proof is on the judgment creditor; thereafter the burden rests with whichever side would lose on the basis of the weight of the evidence before the court: see Nightingale Mayfair Ltd v Mehta [1999] All ER (D) 1501 (second and third defendants claiming that they had acquired property for valuable consideration and that debtor had no beneficial interest in the property).

D. ENFORCEMENT OF CHARGING ORDER

1480. Effect of charging order; in general.

Subject to the provisions of the Charging Orders Act 1979¹, a charge imposed by a charging order² has the like effect and is enforceable in the same courts and in the same manner as an equitable charge created by the debtor³ by writing under his hand⁴. The same principles apply with regard to a charging order made to secure the payment of council tax⁵.

The enforcement of a charging order by sale of the property is considered subsequently⁶.

Execution against land by a charging order is not complete until the interim order has become final⁷.

1482. Enforcement by sale.

Subject to the provisions of any enactment, the court¹ may, upon a claim by a person who has obtained a charging order² over an interest in property³, order the sale of the property to enforce the charging order⁴. A claim for an order for sale under these provisions must be made to the court which made the charging order, unless that court does not have jurisdiction⁵ to make an order for sale⁶. A claim in the High Court for an order for sale of land to enforce a charging order must be started in Chancery Chambers at the Royal Courts of Justice or at a Chancery district registry⁷.

The claimant must use the procedure under Part 8 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁸. A copy of the charging order must be filed⁹ with the claim form¹⁰ and the claimant's written evidence must include the information required by the relevant practice direction¹¹. That written evidence must:

- 1076 (1) identify the charging order and the property sought to be sold;
- 1077 (2) state the amount in respect of which the charge was imposed and the amount due at the date of issue of the claim;
- 1078 (3) verify, so far as known, the debtor's title to the property charged;
- 1079 (4) state, so far as the claimant is able to identify¹², the names and addresses of any other creditors who have a prior charge or other security over the property and the amount owed to each such creditor;
- 1080 (5) give an estimate of the price which would be obtained on sale of the property;
- 1081 (6) if the claim relates to land, give details of every person who to the best of the claimant's knowledge is in possession of the property; and
- 1082 (7) if the claim relates to residential property, state whether a land charge of Class F¹³ or a notice of home rights¹⁴, has been registered and, if so, state on whose behalf the land charge or notice has been registered and that the claimant will serve notice of the claim on that person¹⁵.

A claim to enforce a charging order is not a claim to enforce a judgment but a claim to recover a sum due to the claimant as a secured creditor and, as such, the claimant is not restricted to recovering only six years' interest out of the proceeds of enforcing his security¹⁶. The costs of proceedings to enforce a charging order are payable out of the proceeds of sale of the property charged¹⁷. A prescribed sum may be allowed by way of fixed costs on the making of a final charging order and the court may also allow reasonable disbursements in respect of search fees and registration of the order¹⁸.

In the case of residential property occupied as a home, the court must consider whether the sale is justified under article 8(2) of the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Fundamental Freedoms¹⁹ and in particular whether it is necessary for the protection of the rights of the judgment creditor. Special considerations apply with regard to a matrimonial home which is or may be the subject of proceedings for ancillary relief²⁰. The protection afforded to a person's home when a charging order is made to recover costs against a party in receipt of funding from the Legal Services Commission is discussed elsewhere in this title²¹.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(iii) Charging Orders/D. ENFORCEMENT OF CHARGING ORDER/1483. Enforcement of instalments order.

1483. Enforcement of instalments order.

The following provisions are not yet in force¹. Where (1) a debtor² is required to pay a sum of money in instalments under a judgment or order of the High Court or a county court (an 'instalments order'); and (2) a charge has been imposed by a charging order³ in respect of that sum, the charge may not be enforced⁴ unless there has been default in payment of an instalment under the instalments order⁵.

Rules of court may provide that, if there has been default in payment of an instalment, the charge may be enforced only in prescribed cases, and may limit the amounts for which, and the times at which, the charge may be enforced⁶. Except so far as otherwise provided by such rules of court, (a) the charge may be enforced, if there has been default in payment of an instalment, for the whole of the sum of money secured by the charge and the costs then remaining unpaid, or for such part as the court may order; but (b) the charge may not be enforced unless, at the time of enforcement, the whole or part of an instalment which has become due under the instalments order remains unpaid⁷.

1 The Charging Orders Act 1979 s 3(4A)-(4E) is added, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 93(1), (3). At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

Where a charging order has been protected by an entry registered under the Land Charges Act 1972 or the Land Registration Act 1925 (prospectively repealed and replaced by the Land Registration Act 2002)⁵, an order discharging the charging order may direct that the entry be cancelled⁶.

The High Court may, on the request of any person claiming to be beneficially entitled to an interest in securities¹, issue a stop notice². A stop notice may also be included in a final charging order³, by either the High Court or a county court⁴.

A request for a stop notice must be made by filing⁵ a draft stop notice⁶ and written evidence which identifies the securities in question, describes the applicant's interest in the securities and gives an address for service⁷ for the applicant⁸. If a court officer⁹ considers that the request complies with these requirements, he will issue a stop notice¹⁰.

The applicant must serve copies of the stop notice and his written evidence on the person to whom the stop notice is addressed¹¹.

1 For these purposes, 'securities' does not include securities held in court (CPR 73.16(b)) but otherwise includes securities of any of the kinds specified in the Charging Orders Act 1979 s 2(2)(b) (see PARA 1468) (CPR 73.1(2)(d)).

A stop notice¹ takes effect when it is duly served² and remains in force unless it is withdrawn³ or discharged⁴.

While a stop notice is in force, the person on whom it is served must not register a transfer of the securities⁵ described in the notice or take any other step restrained by the notice, without first giving 14 days' notice to the person who obtained the stop notice⁶. He must not, however, by reason only of the notice, refuse to register a transfer or to take any other step after he has given the 14 days' notice and that period has expired⁷.

The nature of equitable execution.

(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution

A. JURISDICTION TO GRANT REMEDY

1497. The nature of equitable execution.

Equitable execution originated in the old practice of the Court of Chancery to assist in enforcing a judgment for the recovery of money of a court of ordinary jurisdiction by entertaining an application for the appointment of a receiver of such of the interests in the judgment debtor's property as could not, owing to their nature, be taken under a common law writ of execution¹.

Jurisdiction was given by the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873² to all Divisions of the High Court³ to appoint a receiver in all cases in which it appeared just or convenient to do so; but this jurisdiction was in practice limited by the former practice of the Court of Chancery, and before the Administration of Justice Act 1956⁴, as a general rule, a receiver was only appointed by way of equitable execution in such circumstances as would have enabled the Court of Chancery before the Judicature Acts to have interfered by way of injunction or receiver at the suit of a judgment creditor⁵. Equitable execution is not, strictly speaking, execution at all, but is a mode of equitable relief⁶. It is, however, a method of enforcing a judgment or order and so leave is necessary before applying for equitable execution if the case comes within the provisions of the Reserve and Auxiliary Forces (Protection of Civil Interests) Act 1951⁷.

1 See the observations of Jessel MR in Anglo-Italian Bank v Davies (1878) 9 ChD 275 at 283 et seq, CA, and in Salt v Cooper (1880) 16 ChD 544 at 552, CA; and of Davey LJ in Harris v Beauchamp Bros [1894] 1 QB 801 at 807 et seq, CA. Whenever equitable interests in property could not be reached by writs of execution issuable by the courts of common law by reason of prior or outstanding legal estates or interests, such as satisfied terms (Kirby v Dillon (1824) 2 LJOS Ch 140), courts of equity gave relief by regarding those prior or outstanding estates or interests as incumbrances which a judgment creditor had the right to institute a suit to remove (Neate v Duke of Marlborough (1838) 3 My & Cr 407; Anglo-Italian Bank v Davies (1878) 9 ChD 275, CA). This suit was one for redemption, and in it the court could appoint a receiver and grant injunctions by way of ancillary relief. It may be advisable still in cases where the prior or outstanding legal incumbrancers are numerous or their accounts intricate, or it is desired to challenge them, to have recourse to such an action (now known as a 'claim'): Beckett v Buckley (1874) LR 17 Eq 435; Wells v Kilpin (1874) LR 18 Eq 298; and see Proskauer v Siebe [1885] WN 159.

1498. Equitable execution against land and interests in land.

The power of the High Court to appoint a receiver by way of equitable execution¹ operates in relation to all legal estates and interests in land². That power may be exercised in relation to an estate or interest in land whether or not a charge has been imposed on that land under the Charging Orders Act 1979³ for the purpose of enforcing the judgment, order or award in question⁴ and is in addition to, and not in derogation of, any power of any court to appoint a receiver in proceedings for enforcing such a charge⁵.

Similarly, the power of a county court to appoint a receiver by way of equitable execution⁶ operates in relation to all legal estates and interests in land⁷. That power may be exercised in relation to an estate or interest in land whether or not a charge has been imposed on that land under the Charging Orders Act 1979⁸ for the purpose of enforcing the judgment, decree, order or award in question, and is in addition to and not in derogation of any power of any court to appoint a receiver in proceedings for enforcing such a charge⁹.

An order appointing a receiver by way of equitable execution may be registered as a land charge¹⁰. Where, however, a charging order in respect of the land has been registered¹¹, an order appointing a receiver by way of equitable execution which has not been registered will not be avoided against the purchaser so far as the order requires payment of the money secured by the charge¹².

Equitable execution against other property.

1499. Equitable execution against other property.

The former practice was that equitable execution would only issue where there was no remedy by execution at law or such remedy was likely to be ineffective. There therefore had to be some impediment to the issue of execution in the ordinary course of law, whether by writ of fieri facias or warrant of execution, or by means of a third party debt order or charging order¹; but, subject to this, the remedy was available in the case of a judgment or order for the payment of a sum of money², or, in lieu of sequestration, to enforce an order for payment of money into court³, and was not necessarily confined to the equitable interests of the judgment debtor⁴. In a proper case the court might appoint a receiver even though the legal remedy against the judgment debtor's legal property had not been exhausted⁵, but as a general rule a receiver would not be appointed if a method of legal execution was available⁶.

A receiver may now be appointed in all cases in which it appears to the court to be just and convenient to do so⁷.

A receiver may be appointed of the salary of a public servant which is actually due¹, but not of salary which is not due, when the salary cannot be assigned². Where a receiver may be appointed.

1501. Where a receiver may be appointed.

The High Court or a county court¹ may by order² appoint a receiver in all cases in which it appears to the court to be just and convenient to do so³. Any such order may be made either unconditionally or on such terms and conditions as the court thinks just⁴.

The court has jurisdiction to appoint a receiver for the purposes of enforcing a judgment in cases other than those in which it was the practice of the Court of Chancery before the Judicature Acts to appoint a receiver by way of equitable execution, and may appoint a receiver in respect of future debts not yet accrued⁵. However, it has been stated that the jurisdiction to grant the remedy should be exercised with additional caution following the coming into force of the Human Rights Act 1998⁶.

A receiver must be an individual⁷. A receiver will not be appointed over another receiver: the proper order in such a case would seem to be for the extension of the power of the receiver already appointed⁸. The court may at any time terminate the appointment of a receiver and appoint another receiver in his place⁹.

1 As to the remedies available in county courts see the County Courts Act 1984 s 38, which provides that subject to certain exceptions and to provision made by regulations, a county court may make any order which could be made by the High Court if the proceedings in question were in the High Court; and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 711.

2 The order may be interim or final: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 37(1). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. The statutory wording is 'interlocutory' but the Civil Procedure Rules refer to 'interim' rather than 'interlocutory' orders. As to the application of the CPR see PARAS 32, 1225.

3 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 37(1). CPR Pt 69 contains provisions about the court's power to appoint a receiver (CPR 69.1(1)); and 'receiver' includes a manager (CPR 69.1(2)). The court may appoint a receiver (1) before proceedings have started; (2) in existing proceedings; or (3) on or after judgment: CPR 69.2(1). As to application for the appointment of a receiver before proceedings are started see Practice Direction--Court's Power to Appoint a Receiver PD 69 paras 2.1, 2.2; and see generally RECEIVERS. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution/B. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION/1502. Application for appointment of receiver by way of equitable execution.

B. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION

1502. Application for appointment of receiver by way of equitable execution.

An application for the appointment of a receiver may be made without notice and must be supported by written evidence¹. If a person applies at the same time for the appointment of a receiver and a related injunction², he must use the same claim form or application notice for both applications³.

The written evidence in support of an application for the appointment of a receiver must explain the reasons why the appointment is required⁴ and give details of the property which it is proposed that the receiver should get in or manage, including estimates of the value of the property and the amount of income it is likely to produce⁵. Additionally, the evidence in support of an application for the appointment of a receiver by way of equitable execution must give details of:

- 1093 (1) the judgment which the applicant is seeking to enforce;
- 1094 (2) the extent to which the debtor has failed to comply with the judgment;
- 1095 (3) the result of any steps already taken to enforce the judgment; and
- 1096 (4) why the judgment cannot be enforced by any other method⁶.

If the applicant is asking the court⁷ to allow the receiver to act without giving security⁸ or before he has given security or satisfied the court that he has security in place, the written evidence in support of the application must explain the reasons why that is necessary⁹.

In addition, the written evidence should normally identify an individual whom the court is to be asked to appoint as receiver (the 'nominee'), and should:

- 1097 (a) state the name, address and position of the nominee;
- 1098 (b) include written evidence by a person who knows the nominee, stating that he believes the nominee is a suitable person to be appointed as receiver, and the basis of that belief; and
- 1099 (c) be accompanied by written consent, signed by the nominee, to act as receiver if appointed¹⁰.

If the applicant does not nominate a person to be appointed as receiver, or if the court decides not to appoint the nominee, the court may order that a suitable person be appointed as receiver and direct any party to nominate a suitable individual to be appointed¹¹.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution/B. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION/1503. Considerations governing appointment.

1503. Considerations governing appointment.

Where a judgment creditor applies for the appointment of a receiver as a method of enforcing a judgment¹, in considering whether to make the appointment the court² will have regard to (1) the amount claimed by the judgment creditor; (2) the amount likely to be obtained by the receiver; and (3) the probable costs of his appointment³.

The court may give directions to the receiver when it appoints him or at any time afterwards⁴. When it appoints a receiver, the court will normally give directions in relation to security⁵. Other matters about which the court may give directions include:

- 1100 (a) whether, and on what basis, the receiver is to be remunerated for carrying out his functions⁶;
- 1101 (b) the preparation and service of accounts⁷;
- 1102 (c) the payment of money into court; and
- 1103 (d) authorising the receiver to carry on an activity or incur an expense⁸.

A foreign judgment cannot be enforced by the appointment of a receiver unless an English judgment against the defendant has been obtained on the basis of it or it has been registered under the provisions referred to, and in accordance with the procedure set out, in Part 74 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁹.

The court¹ may direct that before a receiver begins to act or within a specified time he must either give such security as the court may determine² or file³ and serve⁴ on all parties to the proceedings evidence that he already has in force sufficient security⁵ to cover his liability for his acts and omissions as a receiver⁶. An order appointing a receiver will normally specify the date by which the receiver must give security or file and serve evidence to satisfy the court that he already has security in force⁷.

Unless the court directs otherwise, security will be given (1) if the receiver is an authorised insolvency practitioner, by the bond provided by him⁸ extended to cover appointment as a court appointed receiver; or (2) in any other case, by a guarantee⁹. Where the court has given directions about giving security, then either written evidence of the bond, the sufficiency of its cover and that it includes appointment as a court appointed receiver must be filed at court¹⁰ or a guarantee must be prepared in a form approved by the court and entered into with a clearing bank or insurance company so approved¹¹.

The court may terminate the appointment of the receiver if he fails to give the security or satisfy the court as to the security he has in force by the date specified¹².

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution/B. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION/1506. Remuneration of receiver.

1506. Remuneration of receiver.

A receiver may only charge for his services if the court¹ so directs and specifies the basis on which the receiver is to be remunerated². The court may specify who is to be responsible for paying the receiver and the fund or property from which the receiver is to recover his remuneration³. If the court directs that the amount of a receiver's remuneration is to be determined by the court, the receiver may not recover any remuneration for his services without such a determination⁴ and the receiver or any party may apply at any time for such a determination to take place⁵. An application by a receiver for the amount of his remuneration to be determined must be supported by:

- 1104 (1) written evidence showing on what basis the remuneration is claimed and that it is justified and in accordance with Part 69 of the Civil Procedure Rules; and
- 1105 (2) a certificate signed by the receiver that he considers that the remuneration he claims is reasonable and proportionate⁶.

Unless the court orders otherwise, in determining the remuneration of a receiver the court must award such sum as is reasonable and proportionate in all the circumstances and which takes into account:

- 1106 (a) the time properly given by him and his staff to the receivership;
- 1107 (b) the complexity of the receivership;
- 1108 (c) any responsibility of an exceptional kind or degree which falls on the receiver in consequence of the receivership;
- 1109 (d) the effectiveness with which the receiver appears to be carrying out, or to have carried out, his duties; and
- 1110 (e) the value and nature of the subject matter of the receivership⁷.

Before determining the amount of a receiver's remuneration, the court may require him to provide further evidence in support of his claim and may appoint an assessor⁸ to assist the court⁹. The court may also refer the determination of a receiver's remuneration to a costs judge¹⁰.

The provisions set out above¹¹ do not apply to expenses incurred by a receiver in carrying out his functions. These are accounted for as part of his account for the assets he has recovered, and not dealt with as part of the determination of his remuneration¹².

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution/C. EFFECT OF RECEIVER'S APPOINTMENT/1507. Effect of a receivership order.

C. EFFECT OF RECEIVER'S APPOINTMENT

1507. Effect of a receivership order.

The appointment of a receiver of personal estate does not interfere with the possession of the trustees or other persons in whom the property is vested: it simply puts the receiver in the place of the judgment debtor to receive the money¹. It does not create a charge on the property², nor does notice of the appointment confer any priority³; but the order has the effect of an injunction and prevents the judgment debtor from receiving the property or from dealing with it to the prejudice of the judgment creditor⁴. Having appointed a receiver, the court will grant whatever injunction is necessary to prevent the debtor's property being received by a subsequent assignee to the prejudice of the judgment creditor⁵. An order appointing a receiver may effect a forfeiture of an interest under a will if the terms of the will so provide⁶.

The appointment of a receiver does not operate as a stay of execution, and if the judgment debtor is not thereby prevented from paying the judgment debt, the judgment creditor may issue a bankruptcy notice in respect of his debt⁷. The receiver's title to receive money issuing out of personal estate is not complete until he has given the security, if any, ordered by the court⁸. The judgment creditor's title to money or goods in the receiver's hands accrues from the date of the order appointing the receiver⁹. The appointment of a receiver of personal estate by way of equitable execution gives no power to sell the personal property in order to satisfy the judgment debt¹⁰.

A judgment creditor who wishes to obtain a charge on land as well as the appointment of a receiver should apply for an order for both¹¹. Under the Land Registration Act 2002, no notice may be entered on the register in respect of an order appointing a receiver or sequestrator¹².

NOTE 7--As to the effect of a foreign judgment on an English receivership order see Masri v Consolidated Contractors (Oil and Gas) Co SAL[2009] EWCA Civ 36, [2009] All ER (D) 56 (Feb).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/23. ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution/C. EFFECT OF RECEIVER'S APPOINTMENT/1508. Receiver's priority.

1508. Receiver's priority.

A receivership order only affects the debtor's interest at the date of the order, so a previous assignment by the debtor, whether legal or equitable, will take priority¹. The appointment of a receiver, whether of real or personal property, is always expressed in the order to be without prejudice to the rights of prior incumbrancers to remain in possession or to take possession of the property affected². The appointment of a receiver does not have the effect of putting the property received in the custody of the law³, so that, apart from this provision in the order, a prior incumbrancer would have no right to what the receiver obtains⁴.

A person obtaining a charging order on a fund in court has priority over a receiver if the party on whose behalf the receiver was appointed has not otherwise protected his interest⁵.

1 Re Bristow [1906] 2 IR 215.

2 If the prior incumbrancers are not in possession, however, they must obtain the leave of the court to interfere with the receiver by taking possession: Ames v Birkenhead Docks Trustees (1885) 20 Beav 332; Searle v Choat (1884) 25 ChD 723, CA. The question of the validity of the incumbrance can be gone into on the application, and if it is upheld the receiver may be ordered to pay what he has received to the incumbrancer and be discharged: Walmsley v Mundy (1884) 13 QBD 807, CA.

3 Re Hoare, Hoare v Owen [1892] 3 Ch 94. A receiver is, however, a trustee of money received by him in that capacity for those entitled: Seagram v Tuck (1881) 18 ChD 296.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(v) Appointment of Receiver by way of Equitable Execution/C. EFFECT OF RECEIVER'S APPOINTMENT/1509. Receiver's accounts.

1509. Receiver's accounts.

The court¹ may order a receiver to prepare and serve accounts². Where it gives directions for him to do so, it may direct him to prepare and serve accounts either by a specified date or at specified intervals and specify the persons on whom he must serve the accounts³.

A party served with such accounts may apply for an order permitting him to inspect any document in the possession of the receiver relevant to those accounts⁴. A party should not, however, apply for such an order without first asking the receiver to permit such inspection⁵. Where the court makes such an order, it will normally direct that the receiver must permit inspection within seven days after being served with the order and must provide a copy of any documents the subject of the order within seven days after receiving a request for a copy from the party permitted to inspect them, provided that party has undertaken to pay the reasonable cost of making and providing the copy⁶.

Any party may, within 14 days of being served with the accounts, serve notice on the receiver:

- 1111 (1) specifying any item in the accounts to which he objects;
- 1112 (2) giving the reason for such objection; and
- 1113 (3) requiring the receiver, within 14 days of receipt of the notice, either to notify all the parties who were served with the accounts that he accepts the objection or, if he does not accept the objection, to apply for an examination of the accounts in relation to the contested item⁷.

When the receiver applies for the examination of the accounts he must at the same time file⁸ the accounts and a copy of the notice served on him as described above⁹. If the receiver fails to comply with head (3) above, any party may apply to the court for an examination of the accounts in relation to the contested item¹⁰. At the conclusion of its examination of the accounts the court will certify the result¹¹.

1510. Non-compliance by receiver.

If a receiver fails to comply with any rule, practice direction or direction of the court¹ the court may order him to attend a hearing to explain his non-compliance². At the hearing the court may make any order it considers appropriate, including:

- 1114 (1) terminating the appointment of the receiver³;
- 1115 (2) reducing the receiver's remuneration⁴ or disallowing it altogether; and
- 1116 (3) ordering the receiver to pay the costs of any party⁵.

Where the court has ordered a receiver to pay a sum of money into court and the receiver has failed to do so, the court may order him to pay interest on that sum for the time he is in default at such rate as it considers appropriate⁶.

A receiver or any party may apply for the receiver to be discharged on completion of his duties¹. The court² may terminate the appointment of a receiver at any time³.

An order discharging or terminating the appointment of a receiver may:

- 1117 (1) require him to pay into court any money held by him; or
- 1118 (2) specify the person to whom he must pay any money or transfer any assets still in his possession; and
- 1119 (3) make provision for the discharge or cancellation of any guarantee given by the receiver as security⁴.

A. ENFORCEMENT OF FINES ETC

1512. Enforcement of fines and forfeited recognisances; High Court and Court of Appeal.

Payment of a fine¹ imposed, or sum due under a recognisance forfeited, by the High Court or the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal may be enforced upon the order of the court in like manner as a judgment of the High Court for the payment of money² or in like manner as a fine imposed by the Crown Court³.

Where payment of a fine or other sum falls to be enforced in like manner as a judgment of the High Court for the payment of money⁴ upon an order of the High Court or the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal, the court must, if the fine or other sum is not paid in full forthwith or within such time as the court may allow, certify to Her Majesty's Remembrancer⁵ the sum payable⁶. Her Majesty's Remembrancer must thereupon proceed to enforce payment of that sum as if it were due to him as a judgment debt⁷. Any payment received by him in respect of that fine or other sum must be dealt with by him in such manner as the Lord Chancellor may direct⁸.

1 For these purposes, and in the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 ss 139, 140 as extended by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 140, 'fine' includes a penalty imposed in civil proceedings: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 140(5) (s 140(3), (5) amended by the Powers of Criminal Courts (Sentencing) Act 2000 s 165(1), Sch 9 para 88). ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(vi) Penal Provisions/A. ENFORCEMENT OF FINES ETC/1513. Enforcement of fines imposed by county courts.

1513. Enforcement of fines imposed by county courts.

Payment of any fine imposed by any county court¹ may be enforced upon the order of the judge² in like manner as payment of a debt adjudged by the court to be paid may be enforced³ under the County Courts Act 1984⁴ or as payment of a sum adjudged to be paid by a conviction of a magistrates' court may be enforced⁵ under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980⁶.

If a fine is not paid in accordance with the order imposing it, the court officer⁷ must forthwith report the matter to the judge⁸. Where by an order imposing a fine, the amount of the fine is directed to be paid by instalments and default is made in the payment of any instalment, the same proceedings may be taken as if default had been made in payment of the whole of the fine⁹. If the judge makes an order for payment of a fine to be enforced by warrant of execution¹⁰, the order is to be treated as an application made to the district judge for the issue of the warrant at the time when the order was received by him¹¹.

If, after a fine has been paid, the person on whom it was imposed shows cause sufficient to satisfy the judge that, if it had been shown at an earlier date, he would not have imposed a fine or would have imposed a smaller fine or would not have ordered payment to be enforced, the judge may order the fine or any part thereof to be repaid¹².

All fees, forfeitures and fines payable under the County Courts Act 1984 and any penalty to an officer of a county court under any other Act must be paid to officers designated by the Lord Chancellor¹³ and dealt with by them in such manner as the Lord Chancellor, after consultation with the Treasury, may direct¹⁴. The Lord Chancellor, with the concurrence of the Treasury, must from time to time make such rules as he thinks fit for securing the balances and other sums of money in the hands of any officers of a county court, and for the due accounting for and application of those balances and sums¹⁵. The Court Funds Rules 1987¹⁶ have been made by the Lord Chancellor with Treasury concurrence to provide for the payment of interest on funds in court and their administration and management¹⁷. These rules, which apply to any county court, including a judge or district judge not exercising his powers in open court¹⁸, are discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁹.

B. COMMITTAL

(A) JURISDICTION

1514. Committal as a method of enforcement; in general.

Both the High Court and county courts have power to commit a person to prison for contempt of court where he is in breach of a court order or of an undertaking given to the court¹. This power and the caution with which it should be exercised are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work². In all cases the Convention rights³ of those involved should particularly be borne in mind and it should be noted that the standard of proof, having regard to the possibility that a person may be sent to prison, is that the allegation be proved beyond reasonable doubt⁴. It is impossible to state as a general proposition whether or not a statement by a defendant in open court that he will not comply with a court order amounts to contempt of court⁵.

Specific statutory powers are given:

- 1120 (1) to the High Court and county courts to commit a person to prison under the Debtors Act 1869 if he fails to attend court on a judgment summons⁶;
- 1121 (2) to county courts to commit a person to prison for rescuing or attempting to rescue any goods seized in execution⁷;
- 1122 (3) to county courts to commit a person to prison if he fails to attend court after being served with notice of an application for an attachment of earnings order or, having attended, refuses to be sworn or to give evidence on the hearing of such an application⁸.

The like standard of proof beyond reasonable doubt applies to any allegation to be made out under heads (1) to (3) above as applies to any allegation to be made out on an application for committal under the general power to imprison for contempt discussed above⁹.

1 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 52 r 1(1); CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29 r 1(1). The High Court has power to commit for civil contempt in the exercise of its inherent jurisdiction; while a county court's power to commit for contempt is regulated by the County Courts Act 1984 s 118: see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 454. As to the procedure on committal applications see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 52; CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 29; Practice Direction--Committal Applications PD RSC O 52; and CONTEMPT OF COURT. Care must be taken to ensure that any committal proceedings comply with the relevant requirements; but it is wrong simply to conclude that because there are defects in the application it is not safe to commit the defendant to prison; the proper approach is to consider each of the defects relied on, and to decide whether they cause any prejudice or unfairness to the defendant, taken separately or together: Bell v Tuohy[2002] EWCA Civ 423, [2002] 3 All ER 975, [2002] All ER (D) 449 (Mar).

Committal for non-payment of judgment debts; in general.

(B) COMMITTAL FOR NON-PAYMENT OF JUDGMENT DEBTS

1515. Committal for non-payment of judgment debts; in general.

The High Court may commit to prison for a fixed term not exceeding six weeks, or until payment of the sum due, any person who makes default in the payment of a debt or instalment of a debt due from him under a High Court maintenance order¹. A county court may similarly commit a person who makes default in the payment of a debt or instalment of a debt due from him under a High Court or county court maintenance order² or under a judgment or order, enforceable by a court in England and Wales, for the payment of any of certain taxes, contributions or liabilities³.

The imprisonment is a punishment for contempt and the suffering of imprisonment in no way discharges the debt⁴.

The procedure on an application for committal in respect of default in the payment of debts due under maintenance orders is discussed elsewhere in this work⁵. The procedure on other applications in a county court is discussed below⁶.

The jurisdiction to commit a person to prison as described above may only be exercised where it is proved to the satisfaction of the court that the person making default either has or has had since the date of the order or judgment the means to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default, and has refused or neglected, or refuses or neglects, to pay that sum⁷. Proof of the means of the person making default may be given in such manner as the court thinks just⁸.

For the purpose of considering whether to commit the debtor to prison, he may be summoned in accordance with the prescribed rules⁹.

County court application for judgment summons.

1516. County court application for judgment summons.

An application for the issue of a judgment summons¹ may be made to the court² for the district³ in which the debtor resides or carries on business or, if the summons is to issue against two or more persons jointly liable under the judgment or order sought to be enforced, in the court for the district in which any of the debtors resides or carries on business⁴. The judgment creditor must make his application by filing⁵ a request in that behalf certifying the amount of money remaining due under the judgment or order, the amount in respect of which the judgment summons is to issue and that the whole or part of any instalment due remains unpaid⁶. He must file with the request all written evidence on which he intends to rely⁷.

A judgment summons must be served personally⁸ on every debtor against whom it is issued⁹ except that where the judgment creditor or the judgment creditor's solicitor gives a certificate for postal service in respect of a debtor residing or carrying on business within the district of the court, the judgment summons will, unless the district judge¹⁰ otherwise directs, be served on that debtor by sending it to the debtor by first-class post at the address stated in the request for the judgment summons¹¹. The written evidence on which the judgment creditor intends to rely must be served with the judgment summons¹². Where a judgment summons has been served on a debtor by first-class post as described above, no order of commitment may be made against him unless he appears at the hearing or it is made by the judge¹³ under the relevant statutory powers¹⁴.

1 'Judgment summons' means a summons issued on the application of a person entitled to enforce a judgment or order under the Debtors Act 1869 s 5 (see PARA 1515) requiring a person, or, where two or more persons are liable under the judgment or order, requiring any one or more of them, to attend court: County Courts Act 1984 s 147(1) (amended by SI 2002/439). 1517. Enforcement of debtor's attendance.

If a debtor summoned to attend a county court by a judgment summons¹ fails to attend on the day and at the time fixed for any hearing of the summons, the judge² may adjourn or further adjourn the summons to a specified time on a specified day and order the debtor to attend at that time on that day³. An order so made must be served personally⁴ on the judgment debtor⁵ and copies of the judgment summons and the written evidence⁶ must be served with the order⁷.

At the time of service of the order there must be paid or tendered to the debtor a sum reasonably sufficient to cover his expenses in travelling to and from the court, unless such a sum was paid to him at the time of service of the judgment summons⁸.

If the debtor fails to attend at the adjourned hearing and a committal order is made, the judge or district judge⁹ may direct that the committal order be suspended so long as the debtor attends at the time and place specified in the committal order¹⁰.

1518. Making of committal order.

If a debtor, having been ordered to attend an adjourned hearing of a judgment summons¹ at a specified time on a specified day, fails to do so, the judge² may make an order committing him to prison for a period not exceeding 14 days in respect of the failure or refusal³. A debtor must not, however, be committed to prison under this provision for having failed to attend as required by an order of the court⁴ unless there was paid to him at the time of the service⁵ of the judgment summons, or paid or tendered to him at the time of the service of the order, such sum in respect of his expenses as may be prescribed for these purposes⁶.

In any case where the judge has power to make an order of committal under these provisions for failure to attend, he may in lieu of or in addition to making that order, order the debtor to be arrested and brought before the court either forthwith or at such time as the judge may direct⁷.

No person may be committed on an application for a judgment summons unless the order is made under the provisions set out above, or the judgment creditor⁸ proves that the debtor has or has had since the date of the judgment or order⁹ the means to pay the sum in respect of which he has made default and has refused or neglected or refuses or neglects to pay that sum¹⁰.

The debtor may not be compelled to give evidence¹¹.

Notice of the result of the hearing of a judgment summons on a judgment or order of the High Court¹² must be sent by the county court to the High Court¹³.

If on the hearing of a judgment summons¹ a committal order is made, the judge² may direct execution of the order to be suspended to enable the debtor to pay the amount due³. A note of any direction so given must be entered in the records of the court⁴ and notice of the suspended committal order must be sent to the debtor⁵.

Where a judgment summons is issued in respect of one or more but not all of the instalments payable under a judgment or order⁶ for payment by instalments and a committal order is made and suspended under the above provisions, the judgment or order is, unless the judge otherwise orders, to be suspended for so long as the execution of the committal order is suspended⁷.

Where execution of a committal order is suspended under the above provisions and the debtor subsequently desires to apply for a further suspension, the debtor must attend at or write to the court office and apply for the suspension he desires, stating the reasons for his inability to comply with the terms of the original suspension. The court must fix a day for the hearing of the application by the judge and give at least three days' notice of it to the judgment creditor⁸ and the debtor⁹. 1521. Costs on judgment summons.

No costs are to be allowed to the judgment creditor¹ on the hearing of a judgment summons² unless either a committal order is made³ or the sum in respect of which the judgment summons was issued is paid before the hearing⁴.

Where costs are allowed to the judgment creditor, there may be allowed:

- 1123 (1) a charge of the judgment creditor's solicitor for attending the hearing and, if the judge so directs, for serving the judgment summons;
- 1124 (2) a fee to counsel if the court certifies that the case is fit for counsel;
- 1125 (3) any travelling expenses paid to the debtor; and
- 1126 (4) the court fee⁵ on the issue of the judgment summons⁶.

The costs may be fixed⁷ and allowed without detailed assessment⁸.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(vi) Penal Provisions/B. COMMITTAL/(B) Committal for Non-payment of Judgment Debts/1522. Execution of committal order.

1522. Execution of committal order.

A judgment creditor¹ desiring a warrant to be issued pursuant to a committal order² must file³ a request in that behalf⁴. Where two or more debtors are to be committed in respect of the same judgment or order⁵, a separate warrant of committal must be issued for each of them⁶. Whenever any order or warrant for the committal of any person to prison is made or issued by a county court⁷ the order or warrant must be directed to the district judge⁸ of the court, who is thereby empowered to take the body of the person against whom the order is made or warrant issued⁹. It is the duty of every constable¹⁰ within his jurisdiction to assist in the execution of every such order or warrant¹¹. The governor of the prison mentioned in any such order or warrant is bound to receive and keep the person mentioned in it until he is lawfully discharged¹². Any person committed to prison by the judge of any county court¹³ must be committed to such prison as may from time to time be directed in the case of that court by order of the Secretary of State¹⁴.

A warrant of committal must not, without further order of the court, be enforced more than two years after the date on which the warrant is issued¹⁵. A warrant for the arrest of a person against whom an order of committal has been made must not, without further order of the court, be enforced more than two years after the date on which the warrant is issued¹⁶.

Where any order or warrant for the committal of any person to prison has been made or issued¹⁷ by a county court (a 'home court') and that person is out of the jurisdiction of that court¹⁸, the district judge may send the order or warrant to the district judge of any other county court within the jurisdiction of which that person is or is believed to be (a 'foreign court'), with a warrant indorsed on it or annexed to it requiring execution of the original order or warrant¹⁹. On receipt of the warrant, the district judge of the other county court must act in all respects as if the original order or warrant had been issued by the court of which he is district judge and must within the prescribed time report to the district judge of the home court what he has done in the execution of the order or warrant and pay over all moneys received in pursuance of the order or warrant²⁰. Where a person is apprehended under the order or warrant, he must be forthwith conveyed, in custody of the officer apprehending him, to the prison of the court within the jurisdiction of which he was apprehended and kept there, unless sooner discharged by law²¹, until the expiration of the period mentioned in the order or warrant²². It is the duty of every constable within his jurisdiction to assist in the execution of every such order or warrant²³. Where, after a warrant of committal made on an application for a judgment summons has been sent to a foreign court for execution but before the debtor is lodged in prison, the home court is notified that an amount which is less than the sum on payment of which the debtor is to be discharged has been paid, the home court must send notice of the payment to the foreign court²⁴.

ENFORCEMENT OF JUDGMENTS AND ORDERS/(3) OTHER METHODS OF ENFORCEMENT/(vi) Penal Provisions/B. COMMITTAL/(B) Committal for Non-payment of Judgment Debts/1523. Revocation of committal order or discharge of debtor.

1523. Revocation of committal order or discharge of debtor.

The judge¹ may at any time revoke an order committing a person to prison made on an application for a judgment summons² and, if he is already in custody, order his discharge³.

Where, after the debtor has been lodged in prison under a warrant of committal⁴, payment is made of the sum on payment of which the debtor is to be discharged, then if the payment is made to the court responsible for the execution of the warrant⁵, the court officer⁶ must make and sign a certificate of payment and send it by post or otherwise to the gaoler⁷. If the payment is made to the court which issued the warrant of committal after the warrant has been sent to a foreign court for execution⁸, the home court must send notice of the payment to the foreign court, and the court officer at the foreign court must make and sign a certificate of payment and send it by post or otherwise to the gaoler⁹. Finally, if the payment is made to the gaoler, he must sign a certificate of payment and send the amount to the court which made the committal order¹⁰. These provisions apply with modifications where payment is made of an amount less than the sum on payment of which the debtor is to be discharged¹¹. Where, after the making of such a lesser payment, the balance of the sum on payment of which the debtor is to be discharged is paid, the above provisions apply without those modifications¹².

If at any time it appears to the satisfaction of a judge of a county court that any debtor arrested or confined in prison by order of the court is unable from any cause to pay any sum recovered against him¹³ or any instalment thereof and ought to be discharged, the judge may order his discharge upon such terms, including liability to re-arrest if the terms are not complied with, as the judge thinks fit¹⁴.

Where the judgment creditor¹⁵ lodges with the district judge¹⁶ a request that a debtor lodged in prison under a warrant of committal may be discharged from custody, the district judge must make an order for the discharge of the debtor in respect of the warrant of committal and the court¹⁷ must send the gaoler a certificate of discharge¹⁸.

Where a debtor who has been lodged in prison under a warrant of committal desires to apply for his discharge¹⁹, the application must be made to the judge in writing and without notice showing the reasons why the debtor alleges that he is unable to pay the sum in respect of which he has been committed and ought to be discharged and stating any offer which he desires to make as to the terms on which his discharge is to be ordered²⁰. If in such a case the debtor is ordered to be discharged from custody on terms which include liability to re-arrest if the terms are not complied with, the judge may, on the application of the judgment creditor if the terms are not complied with, order the debtor to be re-arrested and imprisoned for such part of the term of imprisonment as remained unserved at the time of discharge²¹. Where such an order is made, a duplicate warrant of committal must be issued, indorsed with a certificate signed by the court officer as to the order of the judge²².

Where an order of committal under the Debtors Act 1869²³, or an order of committal made on the hearing of a judgment summons²⁴, is sent by the district judge of a home court to the district judge of another court for execution²⁵, the judge of that other court has all the same powers to order the debtor's discharge as the judge of the home court would have under the provisions set out above²⁶.

24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS

(1) ACCOUNTS AND INQUIRIES

1524. Summary order for accounts and inquiries.

If a remedy sought by a claimant¹ in his claim form includes, or necessarily involves, taking an account or making an inquiry², an application³ may be made to the court⁴ by any party to the proceedings for an order directing any accounts or inquiries to be taken or made⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'claimant' see PARA 18.

2 Whilst accounts are commonly required in proceedings relating to the administration of estates (see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARAS 726, 729), partnerships (see PARTNERSHIP vol 79 (2008) PARAS 97, 150 et seq) and trusts (see TRUSTS), this section of this title is concerned with the situation where the substantive relief sought in the proceedings is the taking of an account and the payment of the amount found due on the taking of an account, or where the taking of accounts or the making of inquiries is a necessary ingredient in the progress of the proceedings. As to the remedy of account generally see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 449 et seq.

3 The application is made under CPR Pt 24: see PARA 524 et seq.

4 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22. Proceedings for accounts are normally assigned to the Chancery Division: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 61(1), Sch 1 para 1(f); and PARA 44. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. A claim relating to Chancery business may, subject to any enactment, rule or practice direction, be dealt with in the High Court or in a county court: see Practice Direction--How to Start Proceedings: The Claim Form PD 7A para 2.5; and PARA 116 note 7. However, simple accounts may be claimed and ordered to be taken in the Queen's Bench Division, although the proceedings may be transferred to the Chancery Division: see Leslie v Clifford (1884) 50 LT 590, DC. As to the transfer of proceedings see CPR Pt 30; and PARA 66 et seq.

5 See Practice Direction--the Summary Disposal of Claims PD 24 para 6; and PARA 524 text and note 13. This provision replaces RSC Ord 43 r 1 (revoked), but applies to county court proceedings as well as High Court proceedings. Unless the court orders otherwise, an account or inquiry will be taken or made by a master or district judge (if the proceedings are in the High Court) or by a district judge (if the proceedings are in the county court): see Practice Direction--Accounts, Inquiries etc PD 40 para 9. Practice Direction--Accounts, Inquiries etc PD 40 contains further provisions as to orders for accounts and inquiries: see PARA 1525 et seq.

1525. Order for accounts.

In addition to its power to make a summary order for an account¹, the court may grant an order directing a party to prepare and file accounts relating to the dispute². The application³ for such an order may be made at any time⁴.

1 See Practice Direction--the Summary Disposal of Claims PD 24 para 6; and PARA 1524.

2 See CPR 25.1(1)(n); and PARA 315 head (14) in the text. This provision replaces RSC Ord 43 r 2 (revoked), and applies to county court proceedings as well as High Court proceedings, but does not apply to inquiries, unlike the power to grant a summary process governed by Practice Direction--the Summary Disposal of Claims PD 24 para 6. Unless the court orders otherwise, an account or inquiry will be taken or made by a master or district judge (if the proceedings are in the High Court) or by a district judge (if the proceedings are in the county court): see Practice Direction--Accounts, Inquiries etc PD 40 para 9. This procedure is often employed where it is desirable that particular accounts be taken before the actual trial of the cause or matter. Practice Direction--Accounts, Inquiries etc PD 40 contains further provisions as to orders for accounts: see PARA 1526 et seq.

3 An application for an order directing a party to file accounts is made under CPR Pt 25 (see PARA 315 et seq), which modifies and amplifies the provisions of CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq): see PARA 315 note 28.

4 See CPR 25.2; and PARA 320.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(1) ACCOUNTS AND INQUIRIES/1526. Practice on taking accounts.

1526. Practice on taking accounts.

Where the court orders any account¹ to be taken or any inquiry to be made, it may, by the same or a subsequent order, give directions as to the manner in which the account is to be taken and verified or the inquiry is to be conducted². In particular, the court may direct that in taking an account, the relevant books of account are to be evidence of their contents but that any party may take such objections to the contents as he may think fit³.

Any party may apply⁴ to the court for directions as to the taking of an account or the conduct of an inquiry or for the variation of directions already made⁵. Every direction for the taking of an account or the making of an inquiry must be numbered in the order so that, as far as possible, each distinct account and inquiry is given its own separate number⁶.

Subject to any order to the contrary the accounting party must make out his account and verify it by an affidavit or witness statement to which the account is exhibited⁷. The accounting party must file the account with the court and at the same time notify the other parties that he has done so and of the filing of any affidavit or witness statement verifying or supporting the account⁸.

Any party who wishes to contend:

- 1127 (1) that an accounting party has received more than the amount shown by the account to have been received; or
- 1128 (2) that the accounting party should be treated as having received more than he has actually received; or
- 1129 (3) that any item in the account is erroneous in respect of amount; or
- 1130 (4) that in any other respect the account is inaccurate, must, unless the court directs otherwise, give written notice to the accounting party of his objections⁹. The written notice containing the objecting party's objections must, so far as the objecting party is able to do so:

- 1131 (a) state the amount by which it is contended that the account understates the amount received by the accounting party;
- 1132 (b) state the amount which it is contended that the accounting party should be treated as having received in addition to the amount he actually received;
- 1133 (c) specify the respects in which it is contended that the account is inaccurate; and
- 1134 (d) in each case, give the grounds on which the contention is made¹⁰.

The contents of the written notice must, unless the notice contains a statement of truth¹¹, be verified by either an affidavit or a witness statement to which the notice is an exhibit¹².

In taking any account all just allowances must be made without any express direction to that effect¹³.

The court may at any stage in the taking of an account or in the course of an inquiry direct a hearing in order to resolve an issue that has arisen and for that purpose may order that points of claim and points of defence be served and give any necessary directions¹⁴.

If it appears to the court that there is undue delay in the taking of any account or the progress of any inquiry the court may require the accounting party or the party with the conduct of the inquiry, as the case may be, to explain the delay and may then make such order for the management of the proceedings (including a stay¹⁵) and for costs as the circumstances may require¹⁶. In making an order for the management of the proceedings and for costs where it appears to the court that there is undue delay, the directions which the court may give include a direction that the Official Solicitor take over the conduct of the proceedings and directions providing for the payment of the Official Solicitor's costs¹⁷.

The court may make an order for an interim payment where it has ordered an account to be taken¹⁸.

1 As to orders for an account see PARAS 1524-1525.

2 See Practice Direction--Accounts, Inquiries etc PD 40 para 1.1. Where all the parties affected are sui juris and before the court, verification is dealt with out of court so far as possible, with those items as to which the parties do not agree being verified in chambers. Where a party is not sui juris the account must be verified to the court's satisfaction.

(2) JUDICIAL REVIEW

1530. Judicial review; in general.

Judicial review is the process by which the High Court exercises its supervisory jurisdiction to review the lawfulness of an enactment or a decision, action or failure to act in relation to the exercise of a public function.

Claims for judicial review come within the jurisdiction of the Administrative Court¹. Where the claim involves a devolution issue arising out of the Government of Wales Act 2006 or an issue concerning the National Assembly of Wales, the Welsh Ministers, or any Welsh public body (including a Welsh local authority) whether or not it involves a devolution issue, the claim may be issued in either the Administrative Court in the Royal Courts of Justice or in the Administrative Court in Wales².

The Civil Procedure Rules govern claims for judicial review³.

The judicial review procedure must be used in a claim for judicial review where the claimant is seeking a mandatory, quashing or prohibiting order or an injunction restraining a person from acting in any office in which he is not entitled to act⁴. In addition, the court has power, in specified circumstances, to grant a declaration or an injunction⁵ or to award damages, restitution or the recovery of a sum due, but it cannot entertain a claim for damages alone⁶.

A claim for judicial review must be commenced promptly and not later than three months after the basis of the claim first arose⁷.

The judicial review procedure is discussed in detail elsewhere in this work⁸.

(3) HABEAS CORPUS PROCEEDINGS

1531. Habeas corpus proceedings; in general.

The writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum¹ is a prerogative process for securing a person's liberty by affording an effective means of immediate release from unlawful or unjustifiable detention whether in prison or in private custody. The right to the writ of habeas corpus is a common law right existing independently of statute².

The practice and procedure relating to applications for habeas corpus and appeals in habeas corpus proceedings are discussed in detail elsewhere in this work³.

1 The writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum is the writ popularly known simply as 'habeas corpus', but there are other forms of writ of habeas corpus. These are (1) the writ of habeas corpus ad testificandum, issued to bring up a prisoner to give evidence in court (see PARA 1009; and ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 250); (2) the writ of habeas corpus ad respondendum, issued to bring up a prisoner to answer a criminal charge (see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 250); (3) the writ of habeas corpus cepi corpus, issued on a sheriff's return that he has in his custody a person required to answer proceedings for his committal; and (4) the writ of habeas corpus ad deliberandum et recipiendum, issued to remove a prisoner from one custody to another for the purposes of trial. These last two forms of writ are obsolete and have been replaced by other process: see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 207 note 1.

2 The effectiveness of the writ was increased by the Habeas Corpus Act 1679 (criminal cases) and the Habeas Corpus Act 1816 (non criminal cases): see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 213. However, the writ is almost invariably issued by virtue of the common law jurisdiction: see ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 213 note 1.

(4) PROCEEDINGS RELATING TO CRIMINAL MATTERS

1532. Proceedings relating to anti-social behaviour and harassment.

Under the Civil Procedure Rules, the civil courts are given jurisdiction to deal with proceedings relating to anti-social behaviour and harassment, which are basically criminal in nature¹. The jurisdiction covers injunctions under the Housing Act 1996²; applications by local authorities under the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003 or the Police and Justice Act 2006³ for a power of arrest to be attached to an injunction⁴; claims for demotion orders under the Housing Act 1985 and Housing Act 1988, proceedings relating to demoted tenancies and applications to suspend the right to buy⁵; anti-social behaviour orders under the Crime and Disorder Act 1998⁶; claims under the Protection from Harassment Act 1997⁷; applications for drinking banning orders and interim drinking banning orders under the Violent Crime Reduction Act 2006⁸; and parenting orders under the Anti-social Behaviour Act 2003⁹.

1533. Proceedings under the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005.

Jurisdiction is conferred on the civil courts in relation to proceedings under the Prevention of Terrorism Act 2005¹. Part 76 of the Civil Procedure Rules contains rules about control order proceedings in the High Court² and appeals to the Court of Appeal against an order of the High Court in such proceedings³. In relation to such proceedings, the overriding objective⁴, and so far as relevant any other rule, must be read and given effect in a way which is compatible with the duty of the court in such proceedings to ensure that information is not disclosed contrary to the public interest⁵. Subject to that duty, however, the court must satisfy itself that the material available to it enables it properly to determine proceedings⁶. A special procedure is introduced for applications⁷, and the rules as to appeals⁸ are modified in relation to appeals to the Court of Appeal⁹.

The Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 makes provision for financial restrictions proceedings¹. Part 79 of the Civil Procedure Rules sets out the procedure for applications to the High Court to set aside financial restrictions decisions² and for subsequent appeals to the Court of Appeal³. In relation to such proceedings, the overriding objective⁴, and so far as relevant any other rule, must be read and given effect in a way which is compatible with the duty of the court in such proceedings to ensure that information is not disclosed contrary to the public interest⁵. Subject to that duty, however, the court must satisfy itself that the material available to it enables it properly to determine proceedings⁶.

1 See the Counter-Terrorism Act 2008 Pt 6 (ss 63-73); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. 'Financial restrictions proceedings' means proceedings in the High Court on an application under s 63 (application to set aside financial restrictions decision: see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE) or on a claim arising from any matter to which such an application relates: s 65.

2 See CPR 79.1(1)(a). As to such applications see CPR 79 Section 2 (CPR 79.3-79.12), Section 4 (CPR 79.15-79.30); and CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE. 1535. Applications for serious crime prevention order etc.

Provision is made by Part 77 of the Civil Procedure Rules for the civil courts to act in support of criminal justice. That Part contains rules about applications for a serious crime prevention order ('SCPO') under the Serious Crime Act 2007¹ and related applications² under that Act³. An application for a SCPO must be started in accordance with Part 8 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁴ as modified by the relevant practice direction⁵. An application by a third party to make representations and an application to vary or discharge a SCPO⁶ must be made to the High Court in accordance with the normal procedure⁷ as modified by the relevant practice direction⁸, but an application to vary or discharge a SCPO made by the Crown Court⁹ must be started in accordance with Part 8¹⁰.

Applications under Part 77 must be made to the Queen's Bench Division of the High Court in one of the courts set out in the relevant practice direction¹¹.

(5) COMMERCIAL PROCEEDINGS AND OTHER SPECIALIST PROCEEDINGS

1536. The Commercial Court.

The Commercial Court was established in 1895 and constituted as part of the Queen's Bench Division¹ 'to provide a court in which there was a greater familiarity with the subject matter of commercial and mercantile disputes and to provide procedures which would enable those disputes to be determined justly, expeditiously and efficiently and without unnecessary formality'². The Commercial Court will only take 'commercial claims' as defined by rules of court³, which include any case arising out of trade and commerce in general, including any case relating to:

- 1135 (1) a business document or contract;
- 1136 (2) the export or import of goods;
- 1137 (3) the carriage of goods by land, sea, air or pipeline;
- 1138 (4) the exploitation of oil and gas reserves or other natural resources;
- 1139 (5) insurance and re-insurance;
- 1140 (6) banking and financial services;
- 1141 (7) the operation of markets and exchanges;
- 1142 (8) the purchase and sale of commodities;
- 1143 (9) the construction of ships;
- 1144 (10) business agency; and
- 1145 (11) arbitration⁴.

The judges of the Commercial Court are such of the puisne judges of the High Court as the Lord Chief Justice may, after consulting the Lord Chancellor, from time to time nominate to be commercial judges⁵. One of these judges is in charge of the commercial list, in which commercial claims in the Queen's Bench Division may be entered⁶.

All proceedings in the commercial list, including any appeal from a judgment, order or decision of a master or district judge before the proceedings were transferred to the Commercial Court, will be heard or determined by a Commercial Court judge, except that (a) another judge of the Queen's Bench Division or Chancery Division may hear urgent applications if no Commercial Court judge is available; and (b) unless the court otherwise orders, any application relating to the enforcement of a Commercial Court judgment or order for the payment of money will be dealt with by a master of the Queen's Bench Division or a district judge⁷.

Special provision for commercial proceedings is made in the Civil Procedure Rules by Part 58 and the practice direction relating to the Commercial Court which is supplementary thereto⁸.

The Commercial Court encourages the use of alternative dispute resolution ('ADR') in appropriate cases, including mediation, conciliation and (non-binding and without prejudice) early neutral evaluation by a Commercial Court judge⁹.

¹ Supreme Court Act 1981 s 6(1)(b). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. The Commercial Court was created as such by the Administration of Justice Act 1970 s 3(1) (repealed). Before that the term 'Commercial Court' was loosely used to refer to the court consisting of specified Queen's Bench judges who were to try the list of commercial causes which came to be known as the 'commercial list'. The originator of this successful expedient was Mathew J, who envisaged the establishment of a special court with a simplified procedure which might better meet the requirements of the commercial community, and thus avoid unnecessary delay and inconvenience and the greater expense of the ordinary procedure. This court was established by a Resolution of the Judges issued on 24 May 1894: see Barry v Peruvian Corpn Ltd [1896] 1 QB 208 at 209, CA, per Lord Esher MR, and an article in (1902) 46 Sol Jo 644. Thereafter a series of notices relating to commercial causes was issued: see Notice dated February 1895 [1895] WN Appendix, p 2; Notice dated 28 July 1911; Practice Note [1927] WN 258; and Notice dated November 1929 (all reprinted in the Annual Practice 1965, pp 2402-2405); Practice Direction [1977] 1 All ER 912; Practice Direction [1981] 3 All ER 864. As to the more detailed history and practice of the court see Theobald Matthew's Practice of the Commercial Court and Scrutton's 'The Work of the Commercial Courts' (1923) 1 Cambridge Law Journal 6.

2 See The Commercial Court Guide (5th Edn, 1999) Introduction. The guide was brought into force by Practice Direction--Commercial Court PD 58 paras 9.1-9.5, which superseded all previous practice directions and practice statements in the Commercial Court: PARA 12. It has now been superseded by The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide (2006 Edn), which is published with the approval of the Lord Chief Justice and the Head of Civil Justice in consultation with the judges of the Admiralty and Commercial Courts and with the advice and support of the Admiralty Court and Commercial Court Committees (see para A1.2). However, it 'is not intended to provide a blueprint for litigation to which practitioners and the court must unthinkingly conform. 1537. Commencing proceedings in the Commercial Court.

A commercial claim¹ may be started in the commercial list². Proceedings in the Commercial Court are commenced by a claim form under Part 7 or Part 8 of the Civil Procedure Rules, except for certain applications relating to arbitrations³. The Commercial Court does not give a fixed date for a hearing when it issues a claim and there is no production centre for the issue of claim forms for the Commercial Court⁴. An adapted version of the practice form for Part 7 claims has been approved for use in the Commercial Court⁵. Similarly, an adapted version of the practice form for Part 8 claims has been approved for Part 8 claims in the Commercial Court⁶.

The appropriate claim form must be marked in the top right hand corner with the words 'Queen's Bench Division, Commercial Court', and on the issue of the claim form out of the Registry the case will be entered in the commercial list⁷. The statement of value of the case (otherwise required by the Civil Procedure Rules) is not necessary where a claim form has been marked for the Commercial Court in this way⁸.

There is no requirement for a claim form to contain or be accompanied by particulars of claim in the Commercial Court, and the particulars of claim will often be served after the claim form⁹. A defendant must file an acknowledgment of service in every case¹⁰, and normally, the period for filing an acknowledgment of service is 14 days after service of the claim form¹¹.

The procedure for disputing the jurisdiction of the court¹² applies to claims in the commercial list with modifications¹³. An application¹⁴ must be made within 28 days after filing an acknowledgment of service¹⁵. If the defendant files an acknowledgment of service indicating an intention to dispute the court's jurisdiction, the claimant need not serve particulars of claim before the hearing of the application¹⁶.

Particular provision is made for transfers into and out of the commercial list. An application for the transfer of proceedings to or from the commercial list must be made to a judge dealing with claims in that list, except that a Commercial Court judge may order a claim to be transferred to any other specialist list¹⁷. If an application is made to a court other than the Commercial Court to transfer proceedings to the commercial list, the other court may either adjourn the application to be heard by a Commercial Court judge or dismiss the application¹⁸. An application by a defendant, including an additional defendant¹⁹, for an order transferring proceedings from the commercial list should be made promptly and normally not later than the first case management conference²⁰. A party applying to the Commercial Court to transfer a claim to the commercial list must give notice of the application to the court in which the claim is proceeding, and the Commercial Court will not make an order for transfer until it is satisfied that such notice has been given²¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'commercial claim' see PARA 1536.

2 CPR 58.4(1).

3 See The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide (2006 Edn) para B2.1. The applications relating to arbitrations referred to in the text governed by CPR Pt 62. CPR Pt 8 (see PARA 127 et seq) applies to claims in the commercial list, with the modification that a defendant to a Part 8 claim who wishes to rely on written evidence must file and serve it within 28 days after filing an acknowledgment of service: CPR 58.12.

- 4 CPR 7.9, 7.10 and Practice Direction--Production Centre PD 7C (see PARAS 125-126) accordingly have no application in the Commercial Court: see The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide (2006 Edn) para B2.3.

If the claimant is claiming interest, he must include a statement to that effect and give the details set out in CPR 16.4(2) (see PARA 587) in both the claim form and the particulars of claim: CPR 58.5(3).
- 9 See The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide (2006 Edn) para B3.4. This has the effect of disapplying Practice Direction--Statements of Case PD16 para 3.1 which requires particulars of claim to be set out in or with the claim form where practicable. As to particulars of claim see PARA 587. If, in a Part 7 claim, particulars of claim are not contained in or served with the claim form, the claim form must state that, if an acknowledgment of service is filed (see PARA 184) which indicates an intention to defend the claim, particulars of claim will follow: CPR 58.1(5)(a). When the claim form is served, it must be accompanied by the documents specified in CPR 7.8(1) (see PARA 124): CPR 58.1(5)(b). The claimant must serve particulars of claim within 28 days of the filing of an acknowledgment of service which indicates an intention to defend (CPR 58.1(5)(c)) and CPR 7.4(2) (see PARA 123) does not apply (CPR 58.1(5)(d)).
- 10 CPR 58.6(1).
- 11 CPR 58.6(2). However, where the claim form is served out of the jurisdiction, or on the agent of a defendant who is overseas, the time periods provided by CPR 6.12(3), 6.35 and 6.37(5) (see PARAS 147, 171, 185, 204) apply after service of the claim form: CPR 58.6(3).

Pleadings must be drafted in a form that complies with Appendix 4 of The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide (for example being as brief and concise as possible and avoiding contentious paraphrasing) unless the court orders otherwise¹. The general provisions as to pleadings² apply subject to some exceptions and additions³. These include allowing the attaching or serving of only relevant pages or sections of a written agreement relied upon where appropriate⁴ and the serving of summaries of pleadings where the pleading itself exceeds 25 pages in length⁵.

Where insurers have the conduct of a case for multiple parties, the statement of truth in any statement of case may be signed by a senior individual with responsibility for the case at a lead insurer, rather than by the parties themselves, but must specify the capacity in which the individual signing does so⁶.

The procedure as to admission of part of a claim for a specified amount of money⁷ does not apply to claims in the commercial list⁸. If the defendant admits part of a claim for a specified amount of money, the claimant may apply⁹ for judgment on the admission¹⁰.

The rules as to defence and reply¹¹ apply to claims in the commercial list with the modification¹² that the claimant must file any reply to a defence and serve it on all other parties within 21 days after service of the defence¹³. The requirements as to service in relation to the period for filing a defence where the claim form is served out of the jurisdiction¹⁴ apply to claims in the commercial list, except that if the particulars of claim are served after the defendant has filed an acknowledgment of service¹⁵ the period for filing a defence is 28 days from service of the particulars of claim¹⁶.

1539. Case management in the Commercial Court.

Cases in the commercial list proceed as if allocated to the multi-track¹ and the usual allocation rules do not apply².

Specific Commercial Court case management procedure takes the place of Part 29 of the Civil Procedure Rules and the complementary practice direction thereto which deal with case management in the multi-track³, with the exception that the provisions dealing with the requirement for a legal representative to attend case management conferences and pre-trial reviews and with variation of the case management timetable⁴ do apply to proceedings in the Commercial Court⁵. As soon as practicable the court will hold a case management conference which must be fixed in accordance with the practice direction⁶. At the case management conference or at any hearing at which the parties are represented the court may give such directions for the management of the case as it considers appropriate⁷.

The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide identifies ten 'key features' of case management in a normal case (commenced by a Part 7 claim form⁸) in the Commercial Court:

- 1146 (1) statements of case⁹ will be exchanged within fixed or monitored time periods;
- 1147 (2) a case memorandum, a list of issues and a case management bundle will be produced at an early point in the case;
- 1148 (3) the case memorandum, list of issues and case management bundle will be amended and updated or revised on a running basis throughout the life of the case and will be used by the court at every stage of the case;
- 1149 (4) a mandatory case management conference will be held shortly after statements of case have been served, if not before (and preceded by the parties lodging case management information sheets identifying their views on the requirements of the case);
- 1150 (5) at the case management conference the court will (as necessary) discuss the issues in the case, and the requirements of the case with the advocates retained in the case; the court will set a pre-trial timetable and give any other directions as may be appropriate¹⁰;
- 1151 (6) before the progress monitoring date the parties will report to the court (using a progress monitoring information sheet) on compliance with the pre-trial timetable;
- 1152 (7) on or shortly after the progress monitoring date a judge of the court will (without a hearing) consider progress and give such further directions as he thinks appropriate;
- 1153 (8) if at the progress monitoring date all parties have indicated that they will be ready for trial, all parties will complete a pre-trial check list;
- 1154 (9) in many cases there will be a pre-trial review; in such cases the parties will be required to prepare (for consideration by the court) a trial timetable;
- 1155 (10) there will, throughout the case, be regular reviews of the estimated length of trial¹¹.

The above procedure presumes the service of particulars of claim¹². However, in some cases the court may commence case management before particulars of claim are served or may decide to try a case without particulars of claim or a defence being served¹³.

1540. Disclosure in commercial proceedings.

The court will seek to ensure that disclosure is no wider than appropriate; anything wider than standard disclosure¹ will need to be justified².

Part 31 of the Civil Procedure Rules³ and the practice direction supplementary thereto⁴ apply in the Commercial Court, subject to particular provisions of *The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide*⁵, which makes special provision for disclosure in commercial proceedings. In particular, disclosure statements must meet three additional requirements relating to searches for documents, in addition to complying with those in the relevant rules⁶. They must (1) expressly state that the disclosing party believes the extent of the search to have been reasonable in all the circumstances; (2) draw attention to any particular limitations on the extent of the search adopted for reasons of proportionality; and (3) give the reasons why they were adopted⁷.

Specific provision is made for the disclosure of a ship's papers in proceedings relating to a marine insurance policy⁸.

The court may at any stage order that any disclosure statement be verified by affidavit or witness statement: see para E3.9. If in such proceedings the underwriters apply for specific disclosure under CPR 31.12 (see PARA 547), the court may (1) order a party to produce all the ship's papers; and (2) require that party to use his best endeavours to obtain and disclose documents which are not or have not been in his control: CPR 58.14(1). Such an order may be made at any stage of the proceedings and on such terms, if any, as to staying the proceedings or otherwise, as the court thinks fit: CPR 58.14(2).

1541. Applications in commercial proceedings.

There are five types of application in the Commercial Court, each treated differently. They are:

- 1156 (1) applications without notice;
- 1157 (2) expedited applications;
- 1158 (3) paper applications;
- 1159 (4) ordinary applications;
- 1160 (5) heavy applications¹.

Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules makes provision for applications generally and takes effect in the Commercial Court subject to the modifications made by Part 58 and the relevant practice direction². The practice direction supplementing Part 23 also applies generally but subject to a number of modifications³.

An adapted version of application notice has been approved for use in the Commercial Court. Special provision is made for time estimates and time limits for applications⁴.

Ordinary applications in the Commercial Court are applications expected to involve an oral hearing lasting half a day or less⁵. They will often be very short and will normally be heard on Fridays⁶. Very short applications, such as to extend time, can usually be heard without evidence and on short notice⁷. For other ordinary applications, evidence in support must normally be filed and served with the application, with evidence in answer within 14 days and any in reply within seven days⁸.

In ordinary applications, an 'ordinary application bundle'⁹ must be lodged with the Listing Office by 1 pm one clear day before the date fixed for the hearing (the application may be stood out of the list without further warning) and provided by the applicant to the other parties. The case management bundle will be passed by the Listing Office to the judge¹⁰. Except in very short and simple cases, skeleton arguments must be provided by all parties and lodged with the Listing Office and served on the advocates for all other parties to the application by 1 pm the day before the hearing¹¹.

By contrast, heavy applications are those in which an oral hearing is expected to last more than half a day and normally involve more evidence and more complex or extensive issues¹². Again, evidence in support must normally be filed and served with the application; however, evidence in answer must follow within 28 days and any in reply as soon as possible but in any event within 14 days thereafter¹³.

In heavy applications, an application bundle¹⁴ must be lodged with the Listing Office by 4 pm two clear days before the hearing, together with a reading list and an estimate for the reading time likely to be required by the court as agreed between the counsel or other advocates to appear on the application¹⁵. Skeleton arguments must be lodged with the Listing Office and served on the advocates for all other parties to the application, the applicant's by 4 pm two clear days before the hearing and the respondent's by 4 pm one clear day before the hearing¹⁶. The applicant's skeleton argument should normally contain a chronology and a dramatis personae if appropriate¹⁷.

The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide makes further detailed provision for lodging of reading lists, bundles, skeletons, evidence and time estimates in various different circumstances¹⁸. Provision is also made for dealing with applications by consent¹⁹. Different provisions apply to urgent applications such as applications for freezing injunctions and search orders²⁰.

The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide makes express provision for the use of alternative dispute resolution ('ADR')²¹ including the option of a without prejudice early neutral evaluation by a Commercial Court judge²².

1543. Judgments and orders in the Commercial Court.

If, in a Part 7 claim¹ in the commercial list², a defendant³ fails to file an acknowledgment of service⁴, the claimant⁵ need not serve particulars of claim⁶ before he may obtain or apply for⁷ default judgment⁸.

Except for orders made by the court on its own initiative and unless the court orders otherwise, every judgment or order will be drawn up by the parties⁹. An application for a consent order must include a draft of the proposed order signed on behalf of all the parties to whom it relates¹⁰ and the normal provisions as to consent judgments and orders¹¹ do not apply¹².

1544. Powers of Commercial Court or judges in arbitration proceedings.

The Commercial Court has two distinct functions in arbitration proceedings: its judges may be appointed as arbitrators and it has a supervisory role over arbitrations in commercial cases.

If in all the circumstances he thinks fit, a judge of the Commercial Court or an Official Referee may accept appointment as sole arbitrator, or as umpire, by or by virtue of an arbitration agreement¹ where the dispute appears to him to be of a commercial character². An appeal from the decision of a judge appointed as an arbitrator must be made to the Court of Appeal, not to the Commercial Court as it would be in the case of a non-judge arbitrator³.

Substantive and procedural provisions relating to arbitration are principally found in the Arbitration Act 1996 and in Part 62 of the Civil Procedure Rules and the relevant practice direction supplementary thereto⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'arbitration agreement' see the Arbitration Act 1996 ss 5(1), 6(1); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1213.

2 See the Arbitration Act 1996 s 93(1); and ARBITRATION vol 2 (2008) PARA 1226. A judge must not accept such an appointment unless he has been informed by the Lord Chief Justice that he can be made available, having regard to the state of business in the High Court and Crown Court: s 93(2).

1545. Mercantile courts.

Mercantile courts have been established at Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, Chester, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Mold and Newcastle upon Tyne and at the Commercial Court of the Queen's Bench Division at the Royal Courts of Justice (called 'The London Mercantile Court')¹. Provision is made for mercantile courts to hear mercantile claims, either from the outset or following a transfer from another court². 'Mercantile claim' means a claim proceeding in a mercantile court, and 'mercantile court' means a specialist list³ established within the courts listed in the practice direction supplementing Part 59 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁴. A claim may only be started in a mercantile court if it (1) relates to a commercial or business matter in a broad sense; and (2) is not required to proceed in the Chancery Division or in another specialist list⁵.

Procedure in mercantile courts is described in The Mercantile Court Guides, which are complementary to *The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide*⁶. The Mercantile Court Guides are concerned mainly to draw attention to areas where there are differences between the respective rules and practice directions in the Commercial Court and the mercantile courts and to highlight other areas where guidance is appropriate as to the practice and procedure in the mercantile courts⁷.

The claim form⁸ must be marked in the top right hand corner 'Queen's Bench Division, _____ District Registry, Mercantile Court' or 'Queen's Bench Division, The London Mercantile Court' as appropriate⁹.

The normal procedure for transfer between Divisions and to and from a specialist list¹⁰ applies in respect of transfers into and out of the mercantile court, with the modifications that (a) a mercantile judge may transfer a mercantile claim to another mercantile court; and (b) a commercial court judge may transfer a claim from the Commercial Court to a mercantile court¹¹.

The court may at any time before or after issue of the claim form order a mercantile claim to proceed without the filing or service of statements of case¹².

All mercantile claims are treated as being allocated to the multi-track¹³. Only specified parts of Part 29 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹⁴ apply¹⁵. As soon as practicable the court will hold a case management conference which must be fixed in accordance with the relevant practice direction¹⁶. At the case management conference or at any hearing at which the parties are represented the court may give such directions for the management of the case as it considers appropriate¹⁷.

Particular provision is made for claims in the mercantile court in respect of the claim form and particulars of claim¹⁸; acknowledgment of service¹⁹; disputing the court's jurisdiction²⁰; default judgment²¹; admissions²²; defence and reply²³; and judgments and orders²⁴.

2 See CPR Pt 59 and Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59, which make detailed provision as to the procedure applicable in mercantile claim cases. The Civil Procedure Rules and their practice directions apply to mercantile claims unless Pt 59 or a practice direction provides otherwise: CPR 59.2.

5 CPR 59.1(2). A claim should only be started in a mercantile court if it will benefit from the expertise of a mercantile judge: Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59 para 2.1. 'Mercantile judge' means a judge authorised to sit in a mercantile court: CPR 59.1(3)(c).

6 Separate guides are available for each of the individual mercantile courts. They can be found on the Courts Service website at www.hmcourts-service.gov.uk. As to The Admiralty and Commercial Courts Guide see PARA 1536 note 2.

11 See CPR 59.3; and Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59 para 4. If a claim which has not been issued in a mercantile court is suitable to continue as a mercantile claim (1) any party wishing the claim to be transferred to a mercantile court may make an application for transfer to the court to which transfer is sought; (2) if all parties consent to the transfer, the application may be made by letter to the mercantile listing officer of the court to which transfer is sought, stating why the case is suitable to be transferred to that court and enclosing the written consents of the parties, the claim form and statements of case: para 4.1. If an application for transfer is made to a court which does not have power to make the order, that court may (a) adjourn the application to be heard by a mercantile judge; or (b) dismiss the application: para 4.2. A mercantile judge may make an order under CPR 59.3 of his own initiative: Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59 para 4.3.

17 CPR 59.11(4). See also Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59 paras 7.1-7.11, which provide as follows. The only parts of Practice Direction--The Multi-Track PD 29 which apply are para 5 (case management conferences), excluding para 5.9 and modified so far as is made necessary by other specific provisions of PD 59, and PD 29 para 7 (failure to comply with case management directions): Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59 para 7.1. If proceedings are started in a mercantile court, the claimant must apply for a case management conference, in the case of a CPR Pt 7 claim, within 14 days of the date when all defendants who intend to file and serve a defence have done so and, in the case of a Pt 8 claim, within 14 days of the date when all defendants who intend to serve evidence have done so: Practice Direction--Mercantile Courts PD 59 para 7.2. If proceedings are transferred to a mercantile court, the claimant must apply for a case management conference within 14 days of receiving an acknowledgment of the transfer from the receiving court, unless the judge held, or gave directions for, a case management conference when he made the order transferring the proceedings: para 7.3. Any party may, at a time earlier than that provided in para 7.2 or 7.3, apply in writing to the court to fix a case management conference: para 7.4. If the claimant does not make an application in accordance with para 7.2 or 7.3, any other party may apply for a case management conference: para 7.5. The court may fix a case management conference at any time on its own initiative; if it does so, the court will give at least seven days' notice to the parties, unless there are compelling reasons for a shorter period of notice: para 7.6. Not less than seven days before a case management conference (1) each party must file and serve (a) a case management information sheet substantially in the form set out in Appendix A; and (b) an application notice for any order which that party intends to seek at the case management conference, other than directions referred to in the case management information sheet; and (2) the claimant (or other party applying for the conference) must in addition file and serve (a) a case management file containing the claim form, the statements of case (excluding schedules of more than 15 pages), any orders already made, the case management information sheets, and a short list of the principal issues to be prepared by the claimant; and (b) a draft order substantially in the form set out at Appendix B, setting out the directions which that party thinks appropriate: para 7.7. In appropriate cases (i) the parties may, not less than seven days before the date fixed for the case management conference, submit agreed directions for the approval of the judge; (ii) the judge will then either make the directions proposed, or make them with alterations, or require the case management conference to proceed; but (iii) the parties must assume that the conference will proceed until informed to the contrary: para 7.8. If the parties submit agreed directions and the judge makes them with alterations, any party objecting to the alterations may, within seven days of receiving the order containing the directions, apply to the court for the directions to be varied: para 7.9. The directions given at the case management conference (A) will normally cover all steps in the case through to trial, including the fixing of a trial date or window, or directions for the taking of steps to fix the trial date or window; and (B) may include the fixing of a progress monitoring date or dates, and make provision for the court to be informed as to the progress of the case at the date or dates fixed: para 7.10. If the court fixes a progress monitoring date, it may after that date fix a further case management conference or a pre-trial review on its own initiative if no or insufficient information is provided by the parties or it is appropriate in view of the information provided: para 7.11.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(5) COMMERCIAL PROCEEDINGS AND OTHER SPECIALIST PROCEEDINGS/1546. Proceedings in the Technology and Construction Court.

1546. Proceedings in the Technology and Construction Court.

Technology and Construction Court ('TCC') claims¹ will be dealt with in a Technology and Construction Court² and by a TCC judge³, unless (1) Part 60 of the Civil Procedure Rules or the relevant practice direction⁴ permits otherwise; or (2) a TCC judge directs otherwise⁵.

The TCC is a specialist list for the purposes of the rules relating to the transfer of proceedings⁶ but modified procedures apply⁷.

A TCC claim must be issued in (a) the High Court in London; (b) a district registry of the High Court; or (c) a specified⁸ county court⁹. When a TCC claim is issued or an order is made transferring a claim to the TCC specialist list, the court will assign the claim to a named TCC judge (the 'assigned TCC judge') who will have the primary responsibility for the case management of that claim¹⁰. An application should normally be made to the assigned TCC judge. If the assigned TCC judge is not available, or the court gives permission, the application may be made to another TCC judge¹¹. If an application is urgent and there is no TCC judge available to deal with it, the application may be made to any judge who, if the claim were not a TCC claim, would be authorised to deal with the application¹².

Every claim allocated to the TCC will be allocated to the multi-track¹³ and the rules relating to track allocation¹⁴ will not apply¹⁵. Provision is made for case management¹⁶, in particular for the holding of a case management conference¹⁷ and a pre-trial review¹⁸. The Civil Procedure Rules and the practice directions supplementing them apply to TCC claims unless Part 60 or a practice direction provides otherwise¹⁹.

1 A TCC claim is a claim which involves issues or questions which are technically complex or for which a trial by a judge of the Technology and Construction Court (TCC) is for any other reason desirable, and which has been issued in or transferred into the specialist list for such claims: CPR 60.1(2)(a), (3). TCC claims include all official referees' business referred to in the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 68(1)(a): CPR 60.1(4) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2) to refer to the Senior Courts Act 1981 instead of the Supreme Court Act 1981; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

The following are examples of the types of claim which it may be appropriate to bring as TCC claims: (1) building or other construction disputes, including claims for the enforcement of the decisions of adjudicators under the Housing Grants, Construction and Regeneration Act 1996; (2) engineering disputes; (3) claims by and against engineers, architects, surveyors, accountants and other specialised advisers relating to the services they provide; (4) claims by and against local authorities relating to their statutory duties concerning the development of land or the construction of buildings; (5) claims relating to the design, supply and installation of computers, computer software and related network systems; (6) claims relating to the quality of goods sold or hired, and work done, materials supplied or services rendered; (7) claims between landlord and tenant for breach of a repairing covenant; (8) claims between neighbours, owners and occupiers of land in trespass, nuisance etc; (9) claims relating to the environment (for example, pollution cases); (10) claims arising out of fires; (11) claims involving taking of accounts where these are complicated; and (12) challenges to decisions of arbitrators in construction and engineering disputes including applications for permission to appeal and appeals: Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 2.1. A claim given as an example in para 2.1 will not be suitable for this specialist list unless it demonstrates the characteristics in CPR 60.1(3). Similarly, the examples are not exhaustive and other types of claim may be appropriate to this specialist list: Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 2.2. See Collins v Drumgold [2008] EWHC 584 (TCC), [2008] All ER (D) 27 (Apr) (appropriate type of case for transfer to Technology and Construction Court under CPR 30.3(2) and Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 2.1).

2 'Technology and Construction Court' means any court in which TCC claims are dealt with in accordance with CPR Pt 60 or Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60: CPR 60.1(2)(b). As to the TCC see PARA 43 note 1.

3 'TCC judge' means any judge authorised to hear TCC claims: CPR 60.1(2)(c).

6 CPR 60.2(1).

7 See Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 5. Where no TCC judge is available to deal with a claim which has been issued in a High Court district registry or one of the county courts listed in para 3.4 (see note 8), the claim may be transferred (1) if it has been issued in a district registry, to another district registry or to the High Court in London; or (2) if it has been issued in a county court, to another county court where a TCC judge would be available: para 5.1. Paragraph 5.1 is without prejudice to the court's general powers to transfer proceedings under CPR Pt 30 (see generally PARA 66 et seq): Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 5.2. A party applying to a TCC judge to transfer a claim to the TCC specialist list must give notice of the application to the court in which the claim is proceeding, and a TCC judge will not make an order for transfer until he is satisfied that such notice has been given: para 5.3. See in particular, CPR 30.5(3); and PARA 67.

8 ie specified in Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60. The specified county courts are Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, Central London, Chester, Exeter, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Mold, Newcastle upon Tyne and Nottingham: para 3.4.

9 CPR 60.4; Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 3.1. The claim form must be marked in the top right hand corner 'Technology and Construction Court' below the words 'The High Court, Queen's Bench Division' or 'The ____ County Court': para 3.2. TCC claims brought in the High Court outside London may be issued in any district registry, but it is preferable that wherever possible they should be issued in one of the following district registries, in which a TCC judge will usually be available: ie Birmingham, Bristol, Cardiff, Chester, Exeter, Leeds, Liverpool, Manchester, Mold, Newcastle upon Tyne and Nottingham: para 3.3.

10 Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 6.1. All documents relating to the claim must be marked in similar manner to the claim form with the words 'Technology and Construction Court' and the name of the assigned TCC judge: para 6.2.

11 Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 7.1.

12 Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 7.2.

13 As to the multi-track see PARAS 269, 293 et seq.

14 ie CPR Pt 26: see PARA 261 et seq.

16 See CPR 60.6(2), which provides that CPR Pt 29 and Practice Direction--The Multi-Track PD 29 apply to the case management of TCC claims, except where they are varied by or inconsistent with Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60.

17 The court will fix a case management conference within 14 days of the earliest of these events (1) the filing of an acknowledgment of service; (2) the filing of a defence; or (3) the date of an order transferring the claim to a TCC: Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 para 8.1. When the court notifies the parties of the date and time of the case management conference, it will at the same time send each party a case management information sheet (in the form set out in Appendix A) and a case management conference directions form (in the form set out in Appendix B): para 8.2. Not less than two days before the case management conference, each party must file and serve on all other parties (a) completed copies of the case management information sheet and case management directions form; and (b) an application notice for any order which that party intends to seek at the case management conference, other than directions referred to in the case management directions form: para 8.3. The parties are encouraged to agree directions to propose to the court by reference to the case management directions form: para 8.4. If any party fails to file or serve the case management information sheet and the case management directions form by the date specified, the court may (i) impose such sanction as it sees fit; and (ii) either proceed with or adjourn the case management conference: para 8.5. The directions given at the case management conference will normally include the fixing of dates for (A) any further case management conferences; (B) a pre-trial review; (C) the trial of any preliminary issues that it orders to be tried; and (D) the trial: para 8.6.

18 When the court fixes the date for a pre-trial review it will send each party a pre-trial review questionnaire (which is in the form set out in Practice Direction--Technology and Construction Court Claims PD 60 Appendix C): para 9.1. Each party must file and serve on all other parties completed copies of the questionnaire not less than two days before the date fixed for the pre-trial review: para 9.2. The parties are encouraged to agree directions to propose to the court: para 9.3. If any party fails to return or exchange the questionnaire by the date specified the court may (1) impose such sanction as it sees fit; and (2) either proceed with or adjourn the pre-trial review: para 9.4. At the pre-trial review, the court will give such directions for the conduct of the trial as it sees fit: para 9.5.

19 CPR 60.3. CPR Pt 15 (defence and reply: see PARA 199 et seq) applies to TCC claims with the modification to CPR 15.8 that the claimant must file any reply to a defence and serve it on all other parties, within 21 days after service of the defence: CPR 60.5. Except for orders made by the court of its own initiative and unless the court otherwise orders, every judgment or order made in claims proceeding in the TCC will be drawn up by the parties, and CPR 40.3 is modified accordingly: CPR 60.7(1). An application for a consent order must include a draft of the proposed order signed on behalf of all the parties to whom it relates, and CPR 40.6 (consent judgments and orders) does not apply: CPR 60.7(2), (3).

(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE

(i) Introduction

1548. Management and investment of funds in court; in general.

The Lord Chancellor, with the concurrence of the Treasury, may make provision as to the payment of interest on funds in court¹ and may make rules as to the administration and management of funds in court including the deposit, payment, delivery and transfer in, into and out of any court of funds in court and regulating the evidence of such deposit, payment, delivery or transfer². Any such rules may make different provision for different cases³.

Subject to rules so made, all sums of money, securities and effects paid and deposited in, or under the custody of, the High Court, a county court or such other courts and tribunals as the Lord Chancellor may prescribe by such rules, is to be vested in the Accountant General⁴. One or more accounts must be opened and kept in the name of the Accountant General at such bank or banks as may be designated by the Lord Chancellor with the concurrence of the Treasury⁵.

A sum of money paid and deposited in court may be invested and reinvested by the Accountant General in any manner authorised by rules made as mentioned above⁶. The Accountant General may, in such cases as the Lord Chancellor may prescribe by such rules, apply to the court for an order for directions as to the manner in which a particular fund in court is to be dealt with⁷.

1 For these purposes, 'funds' or 'funds in court' means (1) any money, securities or other investments, including foreign currency and assets, standing or to be placed to the account of the Accountant General by virtue of the Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 38(1) (see the text and note 4) or of any other person by virtue of rules made under s 38(7) (see the text and note 2); and (2) any effects deposited with the Accountant General by virtue of s 38(1), but does not include any statutory deposit referred to in s 40 (which provides for money or securities deposited with the Accountant General under any enactment or subordinate legislation to be treated as if they were funds in court except in so far as that enactment or subordinate legislation, or rules made under s 38(7), provide to the contrary): see s 47. 'Accountant General' means the Accountant General of the Supreme Court: Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 47. As to the Accountant General see PARA 1549. The definition of 'Accountant General' is prospectively amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 4 para 27(1), (3), as from a day to be appointed; from such day, 'Accountant General' means, in relation to England and Wales, the Accountant General of the Senior Courts and, in relation to Northern Ireland, the Accountant General of the Court of Judicature. At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

2 Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 38(7). This power to make rules is exercisable by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 46(1). Rules so made may (1) provide for the discharge of the functions of the Accountant General under the rules by a person or persons appointed by him; (2) provide for the transfer of money in court to and from the National Debt Commissioners; (3) provide for money paid and deposited in a county court to be vested in, and accounted for by, a person other than the Accountant General; (4) prescribe cases in which interest is to be paid on funds in court; (5) prescribe cases in which funds in court are to be invested; (6) make provision for the transfer of funds in court from one court to another; and (7) prescribe cases in which moneys payable under a judgment or order are to be paid into court: ss 38(8), 47. In exercise of the power so conferred, the Lord Chancellor has made the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821 (amended by SI 1988/817; SI 1990/518; SI 1991/1227; SI 1997/177; SI 1999/1021; SI 2000/2918; SI 2001/703; SI 2003/375; SI 2003/720; SI 2007/729; and SI 2007/2617): see PARA 1550 et seq. The Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, came into force on 1 June 1987: art 1(1).

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE/(i) Introduction/1549. The Accountant General and the Court Funds Office.

1549. The Accountant General and the Court Funds Office.

The Court Funds Office¹ is the office of the Accountant General². The position of Accountant General³ is held by the Permanent Secretary to the Lord Chancellor, and is an office of the Supreme Court⁴. Subject to such conditions as the Accountant General may direct, his functions under the Court Funds Rules 1987⁵ may be discharged by any officer appointed by him⁶, and any direction issued by him to give effect to those rules is to be authenticated on his behalf by such officers as the Treasury from time to time prescribes or approves⁷.

The Accountant General must maintain one or more accounts in his name at such bank or banks as the Lord Chancellor may designate with Treasury concurrence⁸. Where in his opinion the cash balance in his bank account exceeds the amount which he requires to satisfy current demands, he must remit the excess to the National Debt Commissioners, and where in his opinion the balance is insufficient to meet those demands the commissioners must remit to that account such amount as he may in writing request⁹. Money and securities held by him vest in his successor in office without any assignment or transfer¹⁰.

If the Lord Chancellor, whether on a recommendation made to him by any person interested¹¹ or not, certifies that the Accountant General has been guilty of any default with respect to any money, securities and effects for which he is responsible¹² such sum as may be certified by the Lord Chancellor to be necessary for making good the default must be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament or, if and so far as it is not so paid, must be charged on and issued out of the Consolidated Fund¹³.

The Accountant General must prepare accounts in respect of his transactions relating to court funds and must send them to the Comptroller and Auditor General at such times as the Treasury may direct¹⁴.

1 The Court Funds Office was originally created in 1726 as the Accountant General's Office (12 Geo 1, c 32 (Suits of Court of Chancery) (repealed)), and was subsequently renamed the Chancery Pay Office (Court of Chancery (Funds) Act 1872 (repealed)), and then the Supreme Court Pay Office (Supreme Court of Judicature (Funds, &c) Act 1883 (repealed)). The name dates only from 1975 and is retained by the current rules: see the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 3. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court of England and Wales is renamed the Senior Courts of England and Wales: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

2 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 3.

3 The office of Accountant General of the Court of Chancery was created in 1726 with the Accountant General's Office (see note 1), but was abolished in 1872, when funds were vested in HM Paymaster General by the Court of Chancery (Funds) Act 1872 s 6 (repealed). For the purposes of the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, 'Accountant General' means the Accountant General of the Supreme Court or an officer appointed by him under r 4 (see the text and notes 6-7): r 2(2).

The commissioners may invest, in such manner as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Treasury, money so transferred to them and the interest or dividends accruing on investments so made: Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 39(1). If in any accounting year the aggregate of the sums of money received by the commissioners by way of interest and dividends on investments so made by them after deduction of (1) any sum required by the Treasury to be set aside to provide for depreciation in the value of investments so made; and (2) such sum as the Lord Chancellor may with the concurrence of the Treasury direct to be paid to him in respect of the cost to him in that year of administering funds in court; and (3) an amount equal to the expenses incurred by the commissioners in that year in so making investments and disposing of investments so made, exceeds the aggregate of the sums due to be paid or credited in respect of that year by way of interest on funds in court, the excess must be paid into the Consolidated Fund: s 39(2) (s 39(2), (3) amended, and s 39(4A) added, by the Public Trustee and Administration of Funds Act 1986 s 5). If in any accounting year the aggregate of the sums of money received as mentioned in the Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 39(2) (as so amended), after deduction of the sum or sums falling to be deducted under heads (1)-(3), is less than the aggregate of the sums due as mentioned, the deficiency must be made good out of the Consolidated Fund: s 39(3) (as so amended). The commissioners must pay to the Lord Chancellor any sum deducted by them under head (2) and any sum so received by the Lord Chancellor must be paid into the Consolidated Fund: s 39(4). Any sum deducted by the commissioners under head (3) must be applied as an appropriation in aid of moneys provided by Parliament for the expenses of the National Debt Commissioners; and, so far as not so applied, must be paid into the Consolidated Fund: s 39(4A) (as so added). If at any time the commissioners are unable to pay to the Accountant General a sum due from them to him under rules made under s 38(7) (see PARA 1548), the Treasury must provide them with it out of the Consolidated Fund: s 39(5). Section 43 may be repealed or modified by Order in Council, subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: see s 44(1), (2). The Comptroller and Auditor General must examine, certify and report on such accounts sent to him and lay copies of them and his report on them before each House of Parliament: s 45(3).

1551 Certificates in respect of funds in court

NOTE 4--Reference to the Lands Tribunal is now to the Upper Tribunal: SI 1987/821 r 2(2) (amended by SI 2009/1307).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE/(i) Introduction/1552. Lodgment and payment schedules.

1552. Lodgment and payment schedules.

Where lodgment of funds in court¹ is directed by an order² or authorised by a master³, the Accountant General⁴ may not make such lodgment until he has received:

- 1174 (1) in proceedings in the Chancery Division, a lodgment schedule⁵; or
- 1175 (2) in proceedings in the Queen's Bench Division, the Family Division or any other court or tribunal, a copy of the order⁶.

In the latter case, however, the Accountant General retains a discretion to refuse the making of a lodgment until he has received a lodgment schedule⁷.

The provisions above do not apply to proceedings in the Court of Protection⁸. Where, in proceedings in the Court of Protection, a person ('Person A') seeks to lodge funds in court on behalf of a person who lacks capacity⁹ ('Person B'), the Accountant General must not make such lodgment until he has received one of the following documents: (a) a lodgment schedule; (b) where a deputy¹⁰ has not been appointed in relation to Person B, and the funds are required to be lodged by Person A by court order, a copy of that order; (c) where, prior to 1 October 2007, Person A had been appointed as Person B's receiver under Part VII of the Mental Health Act 1983 (as that part was in force immediately prior to that date), a copy of the order of the Court of Protection by which Person A was so appointed; or (d) a copy of the order of the Court of Protection appointing Person A as Person B's deputy¹¹.

Where proceedings in which money has been lodged in court are ordered to be transferred to another court¹², the court officer¹³ of the transferring court must advise the Accountant General in writing¹⁴.

A payment schedule¹⁵, signed and authenticated by a court officer, must be lodged with the Accountant General where an order directs the manner in which any fund in court is to be dealt with and is sufficient authority to the Accountant General to deal with a fund in accordance with the schedule¹⁶.

Except in proceedings in the Court of Protection, the Lands Tribunal or the Employment Appeal Tribunal, the preparation of a lodgment or payment schedule is normally the responsibility of the party having carriage of the order¹⁷ and the court officer of the court in question must sign and authenticate the schedule and forward it to the Accountant General¹⁸. Any amendment needed to correct a clerical or accidental error or omission must be signed by the court officer¹⁹.

Where a payment schedule directs that regular payments, not being interest²⁰ payable as it accrues due, are to be made by the Accountant General, the schedule must state the dates on which payments are to be made²¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'lodge in court' see PARA 1551 note 3; and as to the meaning of 'fund' see PARA 1548 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'order' see PARA 1551 note 4.

3 For these purposes, 'master' means a master of the Supreme Court and includes the Admiralty Registrar, a district judge, a registrar in bankruptcy and the registrar of the Employment Appeal Tribunal: Court Funds Rules

1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition amended by SI 1997/177; and SI 2007/2617). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

4 As to the Accountant General see PARA 1549.

5 'Lodgment schedule' means a schedule to an order directing funds to be lodged to the account of the Accountant General: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2).

8 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 6(1A) (added by SI 2007/2617). As to the Court of Protection see MENTAL HEALTH.

9 'Person who lacks capacity' means a person who (1) immediately before 1 October 2007, was a patient within the meaning of the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt VII (ss 93-113) (as that Act was in force immediately prior to that date); or (2) a court has found lacks capacity within the meaning of the Mental Capacity Act 2005 and whose lack of capacity relates (directly or indirectly) to funds in court held (or to be held) on his behalf: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition added by SI 2007/2617).

10 'Deputy' means, in relation to a person who lacks capacity, a person (1) appointed by the Court under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 s 16(2)(b) to make decisions on that person's behalf; or (2) deemed to be so appointed by virtue of Sch 5 para 1 (existing receivers): Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition added by SI 2007/2617). Where two or more deputies are appointed in relation to a person who lacks capacity, in the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, (a) the word 'deputy' is to be construed as a reference to those deputies acting jointly if and to the extent that joint action is required by the terms of their appointment; and (b) any rule permitting the Accountant General to refuse to follow a direction given by or undertake any other act at the request of, a deputy includes a power, where more than one deputy has been appointed, to refuse to do so on the grounds that while the terms of appointment require the deputies to act jointly, the direction or request was not jointly made: r 2(2A) (added by SI 2007/2617).

11 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 6(1B) (added by SI 2007/2617).

14 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 6(2) (amended by SI 1999/1021).

15 'Payment schedule' means a schedule to an order directing the payment of funds from the account of the Accountant General: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2).

16 See the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 7(1), (2) (amended by SI 1999/1021). Where, however, money is lodged in court in proceedings under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 84 (power to discharge or modify restrictive covenants affecting land: see EQUITY vol 16(2) (Reissue) PARA 630 et seq) and directions are given by the Lands Tribunal instructing the Accountant General to deal with that fund, such directions are sufficient authority to the Accountant General to deal with the fund accordingly: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 7(3).

17 See the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 8(1). That party must submit the schedule to the appropriate court office for authentication: r 8(1). Without prejudice to r 8(1), however, the court officer of a court in which an order has been made for the lodgment of or dealing with funds in court may prepare the lodgment or payment schedule where he considers it appropriate to do so: r 8(2) (rr 8(2)-(4) amended by SI 1999/1021).

18 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 8(3) (as amended: see note 17).

NOTE 3--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

TEXT AND NOTES 16, 17--References to the Lands Tribunal are now to the Upper Tribunal:
SI 1987/821 rr 7(3), 8(1) (amended by SI 2009/1307).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE/(ii) Lodgment of Funds in Court/1553. Mode of lodgment.

(ii) Lodgment of Funds in Court

1553. Mode of lodgment.

Money to be lodged in court¹ must not be paid directly to the bank² except on the Accountant General's direction³. It is paid directly into the Court Funds Office⁴ and must be paid into the bank for the credit of the Accountant General's account as soon as practicable⁵. A litigant in person without a current account may pay money into a district registry or a county court in accordance with the following provision⁶. In such a case, payment must be made in cash at the appropriate court office during office hours on any day on which the office is open and the court officer must give a receipt for it⁷. Payments must be forwarded to the Accountant General within one working day of the date of receipt⁸.

In the Employment Appeal Tribunal and in certain specified Chancery Division and county court proceedings⁹, approval for the lodgment of funds in court must be given by the Accountant General on receipt of a lodgment schedule¹⁰.

Where, in proceedings in the Court of Protection, a person ('Person A') seeks to lodge funds in court on behalf of a person who lacks capacity¹¹ ('Person B'), the Accountant General must not make such lodgment until he has received one of the following documents: (1) a lodgment schedule; (2) where a deputy¹² has not been appointed in relation to Person B, and the funds are required to be lodged by Person A by court order, a copy of that order; (3) where, prior to 1 October 2007, Person A had been appointed as Person B's receiver under Part VII of the Mental Health Act 1983¹³ (as that part was in force immediately prior to that date), a copy of the order of the Court of Protection by which Person A was so appointed; or (4) a copy of the order of the Court of Protection appointing Person A as Person B's deputy¹⁴.

In other cases approval is given on receipt of a written request¹⁵.

The effective date of lodgment of money lodged depends upon the method of payment. In the case of cash or a banker's draft, it is the date of its receipt in the Court Funds Office; in the case of a cheque or instrument other than a banker's draft, it is the date of its receipt in the Court Funds Office or such later date as the Accountant General may determine and, in the case of money paid directly to the credit of the Accountant General's account, it is the date certified by the bank as that on which the money was placed in an account for the credit of the Accountant General¹⁶. The effective date of lodgment of money paid into a district registry or a county court is the date of its receipt in the court office¹⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'lodge in court' see PARA 1551 note 3.

2 'Bank' means such bank or banks as may be designated by the Lord Chancellor with the concurrence of the Treasury: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition amended by SI 2007/729).

3 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 13. Lodgments of money which are not required to be paid into the Court Funds Office under r 16 (see the text and notes 5-10) or to which r 19 applies (see the text and note 6) must be made directly to the bank to the credit of the Accountant General's account: r 16(5) (substituted by SI 1999/1021; and amended by SI 2003/375).

4 Ie except for money representing the proceeds of sale or redemption of National Savings Stock or money to be paid into court under the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 19: see r 16(1) (as substituted (see note 3); and amended by SI 2003/375). 'National Savings Stock' means stock registered on the National Savings

Stock Register: r 2(2). As to the National Savings Stock Register see FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 1347.

5 See the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 16(1), (4) (r 16(1) as substituted: see note 3). Cheques or other instruments must be made payable to the Accountant General of the Supreme Court: r 16(3) (amended by SI 1999/1021). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court of England and Wales is renamed the Senior Courts of England and Wales: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

An officer of a district registry or county court who receives money under the process of the court must give a written receipt for every sum so received: see the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 22 (amended by SI 1999/1021). As to the meaning of 'court officer' see PARA 49 note 3 (definition applied by virtue of r 2(1) (substituted by SI 1999/1021)).

Any person who desires or is directed to pay money into a district registry or county court under any enactment, other than a payment to which the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 15 applies, and who has complied with the requirements of the relevant Civil Procedure Rules must pay the money into the appropriate court office, by a cheque or other instrument made payable to the Accountant General of the Supreme Court which must be forwarded to the Accountant General within one working day of the date of receipt: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821 r 16(7) (amended by SI 1999/1021; and SI 2003/375). The effective date of lodgment of money paid in under this provision is the date of its receipt in the court office: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 16(8) (added by SI 1999/1021). Money paid to a court office under the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 16(7) and which is remitted to the Accountant General in accordance with r 16(7) must be accompanied by a notice stating the reason for the payment and its date: r 19(4) (added by SI 2007/729).

6 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 19(1) (r 19 substituted by SI 2003/375). As to the meaning of 'fund' see PARA 1548 note 1.

(iii) Dealings with Funds in Court

1558. Placing of money in an interest bearing account.

A sum of money paid and deposited in court¹ may be invested and reinvested by the Accountant General² in any manner authorised by the Court Funds Rules 1987³.

There are two interest bearing accounts into which money can be placed: a deposit account (known as a basic account) and an investment account (known as a special account) to which interest⁴ derived from the transfer to, and investment by, the National Debt Commissioners⁵ of the money placed to all the accounts of those kinds accrues⁶. Money under the control of or subject to an order⁷ of the Court of Protection may be invested or reinvested by the Accountant General in such investments as the court may direct, or if a deputy⁸ has been appointed to make decisions in relation to that money on behalf of a person who lacks capacity⁹, as the deputy may in writing direct or, if the deputy has appointed an investment manager¹⁰, as the investment manager may in writing direct¹¹. Subject to that, money under the control of, or subject to an order of, the court may be invested or reinvested by the Accountant General in accordance with the Court Funds Rules 1987 in the following ways:

- 1176 (1) it may be placed to a basic account, or in the case of a person under a disability¹², to a special account;
- 1177 (2) it may be transferred to such of the funds established by common investment schemes¹³ as may be specified;
- 1178 (3) it may be invested in any manner in which trustees are permitted by statute to make investments¹⁴;
- 1179 (4) it may be invested in investment trust ordinary shares¹⁵.

Money subject to an order of the court may be invested or reinvested in accordance with instructions received from the Public Trustee Office¹⁶.

Subject to the relevant rules¹⁷, money, including interest, must be invested as soon as it is available¹⁸. No sum of money or interest must, however, be invested in any case where in the view of the Accountant General the cost of investment, by way of commission or otherwise, would be disproportionate to the amount of money involved¹⁹. Any money which is not invested must be placed, in the case of a person under a disability, to a special account and in all other cases to a basic account and must be drawn from the account and invested when it, together with the interest credited to it, and further sums of money or interest credited to the account which are required to be invested in the same manner, amount to a sum in respect of which the cost of investment is not disproportionate²⁰.

A payment schedule²¹ signed and authenticated by a court officer²² is normally sufficient authority to the Accountant General to deal with a fund in accordance with that schedule²³.

1 As to the courts to which these provisions apply see PARA 1550.

2 As to the Accountant General see PARA 1549.

3 See the Administration of Justice Act 1982 s 38(4); and PARA 1548.

4 As to the meaning of 'interest' see PARA 1552 note 20. The rate at which interest on money placed to a basic account or a special account is to accrue is prescribed from time to time by a direction made by the Lord Chancellor with the concurrence of the Treasury: see the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 27(1). Interest on money placed to a basic account or a special account accrues from day to day from the day on which the money is placed to the account until the day preceding its withdrawal from the account: r 27(2). Unless the Accountant General directs otherwise, accrued interest must be credited (1) on the capital sum when it is withdrawn from the account; or (2) on transfer of the capital sum from a basic account to a special account; and (3) on the last Friday in March and the last Friday in September each year in respect of money placed to a basic account and on the last Friday in May and the last Friday in November each year in respect of money placed to a special account: r 27(3) (amended by SI 1988/817; SI 1999/1021). Accrued interest must be credited without deduction of income tax: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 27(4).

5 As to the National Debt Commissioners see PARA 1549; and FINANCIAL SERVICES AND INSTITUTIONS vol 49 (2008) PARA 1332. As soon as practicable after half-yearly interest accruing on money placed to an interest bearing account has been credited to the appropriate account in accordance with the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, the Accountant General must certify to the National Debt Commissioners the amount of the interest and the commissioners must credit that amount to the account kept by them of money received from the Accountant General: r 56(2).

6 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 26. 'Basic account' means a deposit account bearing interest as established under r 26: r 2(2).

7 As to the meaning of 'order' see PARA 1551 note 4.

8 As to the meaning of 'deputy' see PARA 1552 note 10.

9 As to the meaning of 'person who lacks capacity' see PARA 1552 note 9.

10 'Investment manager' means a person appointed by a deputy to make decisions as to the investment of money held in court on behalf of a person who lacks capacity: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 34(4) (added by SI 2007/2617). If a deputy decides to appoint an investment manager for these purposes, he must send in writing to the Accountant General (1) contact details of the investment manager; and (2) authority for the investment manager to give directions for the investment of the funds held in court: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821 r 34(6) (added by SI 2007/2617).

11 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 34(5) (added by SI 2007/2617). The Accountant General may refuse to comply with a direction made under the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 34(5), if (1) in relation to a direction given by a deputy, it appears to him that the direction is not within the powers conferred on the deputy by the terms of his appointment; (2) in relation to an investment manager, it appears to him that (a) it was not within the powers of the deputy to appoint an investment manager; (b) the deputy has not complied with r 34(5); or (c) it was not within the powers of the investment manager to give that direction; or (3) the court has made a contrary direction, or for another good reason: r 34(7) (added by SI 2007/2617).

12 For these purposes, 'person under a disability' means a person who is a child or lacks capacity: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition amended by SI 1999/1021; SI 2007/729; and SI 2007/2617). 16 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 34(2) (amended by SI 1991/1227; and SI 2007/2617). This does not apply to money under the control of or subject to an order of the Court of Protection: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 34(3) (substituted by SI 2007/2617).

17 I.e. subject to the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, Pt IV (rr 26-33), Pt V (rr 34-37): see the text and notes 4-16, 18-20; and PARA 1559 et seq.

18 Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 35. Subject to the provisions of Pt IV, and to any direction of the court, all money (including interest) must be placed to a basic account or, in the case of a person under a disability, to a special account, on the day on which the schedule or other authority is received in the Court Funds Office or on the effective date of lodgment of the money, whichever is the later: r 28(1) (amended by SI 2007/729; and SI 2007/2617). Interest does not accrue from a date earlier than that on which the money is placed to an interest bearing account in accordance with this rule: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 28(3). This rule does not apply to transitional funds (see PARA 1561): r 28(4) (added by SI 1999/1021; and substituted by SI 2007/729). As to transitional funds see PARA 1561.

1559. Special accounts.

Where funds in court are likely to be required within five years, a long-term investment in a common investment fund¹ is unsuitable, and investment may accordingly be made in a special account², which attracts a higher rate of interest than money merely placed on deposit.

Money, including interest³, may only be placed to a special account where the person entitled to it is under a disability⁴ and it amounts to a sum which is not less than £10⁵. Where judgment is given in favour of a person under a disability, or settlement of his claim is approved by the court⁶, the money to which he is entitled must, subject to any directions of the court, be placed to a special account in his name as at the date of the judgment or on the effective date of lodgment of the money, whichever is the later, without further authority⁷.

1560. Money which may not be placed in a basic account.

Money, including interest¹, must not be placed in a basic account² where the money has been directed by an order³ or other authority to be dealt with other than by being placed in a basic account or has been carried over⁴ to an account of unclaimed balances⁵. Nor may money be placed in a basic account if it amounts to a sum which is less than £10⁶, if it stood to the credit of a fund in court before 1 October 1965 without a request that it be placed on deposit⁷ or if it was paid into court in satisfaction of a claim before 1 April 1983 without a direction that it be placed on deposit⁸.

1561. Treatment of transitional funds.

Transitional funds¹ must be placed to a basic account² 21 days after the effective date of lodgment³ or the effective date of appropriation⁴ and interest⁵ accrues on those funds from the date of placement to that account⁶. This does not apply, however, where a request for payment from the claimant⁷ is received in the Court Funds Office within the 21 days specified⁸.

Where the claimant is a person under a disability⁹, the requirement to place funds to a basic account applies unless the court¹⁰ otherwise directs¹¹. Where the court directs that the requirement does not apply, interest accrues on the funds in court from the date they are placed to a basic account¹². Transitional funds placed to a basic account must, unless the court otherwise directs, remain so placed until the claim is determined or the court approves a settlement, whether or not the claimant has indicated that he wishes to accept the payment or appropriation¹³.

1 'Transitional funds' means money which, less than 21 days prior to 6 April 2007, in satisfaction of a claim, had been paid into court in accordance with CPR Pt 36 or had been appropriated in accordance with CPR Pt 37 as those Parts were in force immediately prior to 6 April 2007: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition added by SI 2007/729).

1562. Interest on payment out of money in court.

No interest¹ accrues on money held in court in relation to a claim after the date on which the claimant² serves notice on the Accountant General³ of acceptance of a Part 36 offer⁴.

Where the permission of the court is not required to take money out of court and money lodged or appropriated by the defendant⁵ in satisfaction of a claim has been accepted by and paid to the claimant, the Accountant General must pay any accrued interest remaining in court in respect of that claim to the defendant⁶.

Where the permission of the court is required to take money out of court, including where the court determines a claim or approves a settlement on behalf of a person under a disability⁷, any interest which has accrued on the money in court must be dealt with as the court orders⁸.

The rate at which interest is paid is prescribed from time to time by the Lord Chancellor with the concurrence of the Treasury⁹.

Where money has been paid into court in a claim proceeding in the Royal Courts of Justice¹⁰ and the claim is transferred to a district registry or county court¹¹, the court officer¹² of the court to which the claim is transferred must notify the Accountant General¹³.

1562 Interest on payment out of money in court

NOTE 10--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE/(iii) Dealings with Funds in Court/1563. Common investment scheme.

1563. Common investment scheme.

The Lord Chancellor may continue to make common investment schemes establishing common investment funds for the purpose of investing funds in court¹ and money held by any person who may² hold shares in common investment funds³. Such a scheme must provide for the fund thereby established to be under the management and control of an investment manager appointed by the Lord Chancellor⁴.

A common investment scheme must make provision:

- 1180 (1) for the investment by its investment manager in accordance with the following provisions of funds in court transferred to the fund under the Court Funds Rules 1987⁵ and of any sums of money transferred to the fund by persons who may⁶ hold shares in the fund⁷;
- 1181 (2) for treating the fund established by it as being divided into shares⁸; and
- 1182 (3) for treating a sum invested in the fund as being represented by a number of shares determined by reference to that sum and the value of the fund at the time the investment was made⁹.

Shares in a common investment fund must be allotted to and held by the Accountant General¹⁰ and may be allotted to and held by the Accountant General of the Supreme Court of Judicature of Northern Ireland and any other person authorised by the Lord Chancellor¹¹. Where a person is so authorised to hold shares in a common investment fund he may invest trust money in shares in the fund without obtaining and considering advice on whether to make such an investment and he may invest trust money in a common investment fund of which he is the investment manager¹². Moneys comprised in the fund established by a common investment scheme may, subject to the provisions of the scheme, be invested by the investment manager of the fund in any way in which he thinks fit, whether or not authorised by the general law in relation to trust funds¹³ and such investment manager is not required or entitled to take account of any trusts or equities affecting any share in the fund whether or not he is also a trustee of any such trust¹⁴.

The investment manager of a fund established by a common investment scheme must be remunerated at such rates and in such manner as the Lord Chancellor determines with the concurrence of the Treasury¹⁵. His salary or remuneration and that of his officers and such other expenses of executing his office or otherwise carrying the provisions of Part VI of the Administration of Justice Act 1982¹⁶ into effect as may be sanctioned by the Treasury must be paid out of moneys provided by Parliament¹⁷.

Such fees, whether by way of percentage or otherwise, in respect of the running of a common investment scheme as the Lord Chancellor fixes with the concurrence of the Treasury are to be charged and such fees must be collected and accounted for by such persons, and in such manner, and must be paid to such account, as the Treasury directs¹⁸. Any expenses which could be retained or paid out of trust property if the investment manager of the fund were a trustee are to be retained or paid out of a fund established by a common investment scheme and such expenses must be retained or paid in the same way as and in addition to fees charged in respect of the running of the scheme¹⁹. Fees and expenses recovered under these provisions must be paid into the Consolidated Fund²⁰.

The investment manager of the fund must prepare accounts and send them direct to the Comptroller General at such times as the Treasury may direct²¹. Provision is made for making good any default by such a manager²².

Money and securities held by an investment manager of a fund established by a common investment scheme vest in his successor in office without any assignment or transfer²³.

Under the Common Investment Scheme 2004, there is only one fund, namely the capital fund²⁴.

Where funds are required to be invested in common investment fund units or such units are required to be realised, the purchases and sales must be effected on the first available valuation day²⁵. Funds may not be directed to be invested in common investment fund units unless the authority giving the direction is satisfied that the funds are likely to remain so invested for at least five years; but this restriction does not apply in any case where there is an express request for investment in common investment fund units by or on behalf of one or more of the persons interested in the fund, or, if no such person is ascertained or traceable, by the person who pays the funds into court²⁶.

1564. Dealings with foreign currencies.

Where foreign currency¹ is lodged in court², the court may direct that it be placed in an interest bearing account³ in the same or any other currency⁴. Any interest⁵ accrues from the date of the order⁶ or the date of placing it in the account, whichever is the later, and the Accountant General⁷ must deal with the interest as the court may direct⁸.

Any charges incurred by placing foreign currency to an account must be deducted from the currency so placed or from the accrued interest, as may be appropriate⁹.

Where income from a security in court is received in a foreign currency, the court may give such direction as it thinks fit, and in the absence of such direction the foreign currency must be converted into sterling and invested in accordance with provisions¹⁰ of the relevant rules¹¹.

1565. Withdrawal from interest bearing accounts.

Money must only be withdrawn from an interest bearing account¹ where the money, including any interest² which has accrued at the time of withdrawal, is required to be withdrawn for the purpose of giving effect to a direction of the court³ or the Court Funds Rules 1987⁴. Such interest must not, however, be used if directed by the court to be otherwise dealt with⁵.

1566. Conversion, allotment and write-off of securities.

Where a question has arisen as to an allotment or conversion of securities¹ which have been paid into court by trustees under the Trustee Act 1925², or in any other case in which he considers it appropriate because no application will otherwise be made, the Accountant General³ may apply to the court⁴ for directions as to how the securities should be dealt with⁵.

Where a security in court has been converted into another security, the Accountant General must write off the original security from the account to which it is standing and place to that account the whole, or where appropriate a proportionate part, of the substituted security⁶. He must deal with the substituted security, and any interest⁷ on it, in the same manner as the original security and interest in so far as this is practicable⁸. Likewise, where a security in court is paid off and the money received is invested or placed to an interest bearing account⁹, the security purchased or money in the account and any interest on it must, unless the court otherwise directs, be dealt with by the Accountant General in the same manner as the original security and interest¹⁰.

Where an allotment is made in respect of a security in court the Accountant General may credit the whole, or where appropriate a proportionate part, of the allotment to the account of the original security if the allotment is fully paid¹¹. If the allotment is not fully paid, he may sell the allotment and credit the whole or a proportionate part of the proceeds of sale to that account or otherwise as the court may direct¹². He may sell any non-apportionable shares and apportion such proceeds as nearly as practicable to the appropriate account¹³.

Where bearer or similar bonds or securities deposited at the bank¹⁴ to the credit of the Accountant General are being paid off, the bank must take the necessary steps to receive the principal money and interest due and must inform the Accountant General in writing of the amounts of the securities paid off and of the principal money and interest received¹⁵. Where the interest on securities in court is payable on the presentation of coupons in a series and the last coupon of any such series has been presented and paid, the bank must take the necessary steps to obtain a new series of coupons¹⁶.

Where a company has been wound up and the Accountant General has received written notice from the liquidator or from the Department for Business, Enterprise and Regulatory Reform that no assets are or will be distributable in respect of the securities of the company and written notice from the Registrar of the Companies Registration Office that the company has been dissolved, he must withdraw from the bank the certificate representing any security in that company and must write off any such security from the account to which it stands¹⁷.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE/(iv) Payment, Transfer and Delivery of Funds/1568. Authority for payment, transfer or delivery of funds.

(iv) Payment, Transfer and Delivery of Funds

1568. Authority for payment, transfer or delivery of funds.

The general rule is that the payment out of money lodged in court¹ may be made by the Accountant General² by means of the Bankers' Automated Clearing System³ to a bank in the United Kingdom or by international money transfer to a bank outside the United Kingdom, for the credit of the account of the payee at that bank⁴. The payment schedule⁵ must contain the necessary details of the payee's bank and account in order for the payment to be made⁶.

However, special requirements apply in the case of payment out to personal representatives of a deceased payee⁷ or to persons who change their name or style⁸, payment of funeral expenses out of funds in court⁹, payment of inheritance tax out of funds in court¹⁰, payments pursuant to Court of Protection directions¹¹, payment out of money lodged in satisfaction of a claim¹², and payment of interest on and transfer or delivery of securities¹³.

The Accountant General may, if he thinks fit, refuse to make a payment (1) until he is satisfied as to the identity and entitlement of any person claiming to be the payee¹⁴; (2) by means of the Bankers' Automated Clearing System or international money transfer in any individual case if the payment schedule is not completed with sufficient information or for another good reason¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'lodge in court' see PARA 1551 note 3.

2 As to the Accountant General see PARA 1549.

3 'Bankers' Automated Clearing System' (BACS) means the method of payment whereby funds are transferred from one bank in the United Kingdom to another by means of an automated system: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 2(2) (definition added by SI 1997/177; and amended by SI 2007/2617).

4 See the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(2) (substituted by SI 2007/2617). The person entitled to the payment out of money lodged in court is referred to as the 'payee': Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(1) (substituted by SI 1997/177). Where the Accountant General does not make a payment by means of the Bankers' Automated Clearing System under the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(2), he must make the payment by a cheque crossed 'account payee' in accordance with r 40(8): r 40(6) (as so substituted). In cases where the payee does not have an account which is suitable for the receipt of funds (in respect of an account held at a bank in the United Kingdom) by the Bankers' Automated Clearing System or (in respect of an account held at a bank outside the United Kingdom) by international money transfer, or there is a written request from the payee for the payment to be made by cheque, the Accountant General must make the payment by a cheque crossed 'account payee': r 40(7)(i), (ii) (r 40(7) as so substituted; r 40(7)(i) further substituted by SI 2007/2617). Where the Accountant General makes a payment under the Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(6) or (7) it must be sent by as follows: (1) where the address of the payee is stated in the payment schedule or supplementary authority and that schedule or authority is dated not more than one year prior to the date on which the Accountant General is able to make payment, he must make payment to the payee at the address so stated; (2) where the payment schedule or supplementary authority is dated more than one year prior to the date on which the Accountant General is able to make payment, he must make payment on receipt of a written request from the payee and, in a case where there has been a written request under r 40(7)(ii), that request is sufficient for these purposes: r 40(8) (substituted by SI 1997/177).

On receipt of a written request from a donee under a power of attorney given by the payee, the Accountant General may make payment by means of the Bankers' Automated Clearing System (if the account is held at a bank in the United Kingdom) or international money transfer (if the account is held at a bank outside the United Kingdom), for the credit of the account of the payee at that bank: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(5) (substituted by SI 2007/2617). The request for payment must be accompanied by (a) an office copy of that power of attorney showing that it has been registered as required by the relevant Act in the case of (i) a lasting power of attorney made under the Mental Capacity Act 2005 s 9; or (ii) an enduring power of attorney (as defined in the Mental Capacity Act 2005 Sch 4 para 2) made before 1 October 2007 which was registered before that date under the Enduring Powers of Attorney Act 1985 (as that Act was in force immediately prior to that date) or on or after that date under the Mental Capacity Act 2005; and (b) in all other cases, a copy of the power of attorney by which the donee was appointed, certified in accordance with the provisions of the Powers of Attorney Act 1971 s 3: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(5A) (added by SI 2007/2617). The Accountant General may refuse to make the payment if the requirements for exhibiting the power of attorney have not been met or he considers that the request for payment is not within the powers conferred on the donee by the power of attorney: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 40(5B) (added by SI 2007/2617).

Where a person entitled to a fund in court¹ either in his own right or as sole, or sole surviving, executor dies, the Accountant General² may, where the fund exceeds £5,000, pay it to the personal representative of the deceased on production of a grant of probate or office copy of the grant, or, where the deceased was entitled to the fund in his own right, letters of administration in respect of the deceased's estate³.

Where a person entitled to a fund in court in his own right dies intestate and no grant of administration has been issued, the Accountant General may, where the assets of the deceased (including the fund in court and after deduction of debts and funeral expenses) do not exceed £5,000, pay the fund to the person who appears to him to have the prior right to a grant of administration of the estate, on lodgment in the Court Funds Office⁴ of a written declaration of kinship⁵.

Where two or more persons were entitled to payment of a fund in court as personal representatives and any of them dies before the fund is dealt with, the Accountant General may pay the fund to the surviving personal representatives on proof of the death of the deceased personal representative; and where the fund does not exceed £5,000 the Accountant General may, unless a court⁶ otherwise directs, pay the fund to any one of them⁷.

On the written request of the person who is the executor of the deceased's¹ will or, if the deceased died intestate, arranged the deceased's funeral, the Accountant General² may, on receipt of an invoice issued by funeral directors, pay direct to those directors such amounts as have been reasonably incurred for the purposes of arranging and conducting the deceased's funeral³. The Accountant General may, if he thinks fit, refuse to make such payment in any individual case (1) if he has not received the invoice referred to; (2) if the person requesting such payment fails to provide him with sufficient evidence as to his entitlement to make the request; (3) if the fund in court to which the deceased was entitled is insufficient to meet the cost of arranging and conducting the funeral; or (4) for another good reason⁴.

1 For these purposes, the 'deceased' means a person (1) who immediately prior to his death was entitled to a fund in court in his own right; (2) in respect of whom a deputy had been appointed or, where the person died before 1 October 2007, a receiver had been appointed under the Mental Health Act 1983 Pt VII (ss 93-113) (as that Act was in force immediately prior to that date); and (3) in respect of whose estate no grant of probate or administration has been issued: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 43A(1) (r 43A added by SI 2007/2617). On the written request of the person who is the executor of the deceased's¹ will or, if the deceased died intestate, appears to the Accountant General² to have the prior right to a grant of administration of the estate³, the Accountant General may pay direct to Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs such funds as may be required to satisfy all, or any part, of the inheritance tax due on the deceased's estate⁴. A request must be accompanied by (1) such information as Her Majesty's Revenue and Customs may require to be sent to financial institutions for the purposes of enabling those institutions to make direct payment of inheritance tax; (2) in the case of a request from the executor of the deceased's will, a certified copy of the will by which he was appointed; and (3) in the case of a request from the person who appears to have the prior right to a grant of administration, a written declaration of kinship⁵. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(6) PRACTICE IN THE COURT FUNDS OFFICE/(iv) Payment, Transfer and Delivery of Funds/1575. Payment out without order of money lodged in satisfaction of claim.

1575. Payment out without order of money lodged in satisfaction of claim.

The general rule is that, upon receipt of a written request, the Accountant General¹ must pay money lodged in court² in satisfaction of a claim or appropriated in accordance with the relevant provision of the Court Funds Rules 1987³ by the claimant⁴ (1) by cheque crossed 'account payee' to the claimant; (2) to a bank in the United Kingdom by means of the Bankers' Automated Clearing System⁵ for the credit of the claimant's account; or (3) to a bank outside the United Kingdom by means of international money transfer for the credit of the account of the claimant at that bank⁶. Where, however, the claimant is represented by a solicitor who is acting for him in the proceedings in which the money was lodged or appropriated by virtue of a certificate which has been issued pursuant to a decision to fund legal services for that claimant as part of the Community Legal Service⁷, the Accountant General must pay the money to that solicitor or, in certain circumstances, to the Legal Services Commission⁸. The written request for payment must provide the necessary details of the claimant's bank account⁹ but, if the claimant does not have a bank account suitable for the receipt of funds by the Bankers' Automated Clearing System or by international money transfer, or if there is a written request from the claimant for the payment to be made by cheque, the Accountant General must make the payment by a cheque crossed 'account payee', to the claimant by post¹⁰.

If he thinks fit, the Accountant General may refuse to make a payment by means of the Bankers' Automated Clearing System or international money transfer in any individual case if the claimant does not provide him with sufficient information or for another good reason¹¹.

The Accountant General must not make any payment under these provisions¹² where¹³:

- 1183 (a) funds have been lodged or appropriated by one or more, but not all, of a number of defendants¹⁴ sued jointly or in the alternative, unless (i) the claimant discontinues the claim against all the other defendants; (ii) those defendants consent in writing to the payment; and (iii) a copy of the notice of discontinuance and the written consent of each consenting defendant is lodged with the Accountant General¹⁵; or
- 1184 (b) a defence of tender before claim¹⁶ has been pleaded, unless (i) a Part 36 offer¹⁷ is accepted without needing the permission of the court; and (ii) the written consent of the defendant that all, or part, of the money paid into court in support of that defence may be used to satisfy the offer (in whole or in part) is lodged with the Accountant General¹⁸; or
- 1185 (c) the claim is made by, or on behalf of, a person under a disability¹⁹; or
- 1186 (d) money has been lodged in proceeding under the Fatal Accidents Act 1976 and the Law Reform (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1934, or under the first mentioned Act alone where more than one person is entitled to the money²⁰; or
- 1187 (e) in respect of transitional funds²¹, (i) the payment into court or appropriation was made less than 21 days prior to the start of the trial; or (ii) the claimant has not accepted the payment or appropriation within 21 days of the payment into court or appropriation²²; or
- 1188 (f) a defendant has paid money into court under a court order or in support of a defence of tender before claim and a Part 36 offer is subsequently accepted without needing the permission of the court²³, unless the request for payment lodged with the Accountant General by the claimant includes the written consent of the defendant that all, or part, of the money paid into court may be used to satisfy the offer (in whole or in part)²⁴.

1576. Securities.

Where securities¹ are lodged in court² or money lodged is invested, the interest³ that accrues is paid by the Accountant General⁴ to the person in whose name the lodgment is made⁵.

Where the Accountant General is required⁶ to transfer or deliver any securities or effects, he must issue directions accordingly which constitute sufficient authority for the relevant transfer or delivery and, in the case of a transfer of securities for sale, for the bank⁷ to receive the proceeds of sale⁸. No directions of the Accountant General are, however, required for the transfer of National Savings stock⁹, on sale or otherwise¹⁰.

Subject to certain exceptions¹¹ and to any directions of the court, where money in court is invested in the purchase of securities, the payment for the purchase includes all applicable charges and, where securities in court are sold, all applicable charges are deducted from the proceeds of sale¹². If, however, the schedule directing a purchase or sale also directs that charges are not to be deducted from the fund in court, the transaction must not be completed until such charges have been paid either to the stockbroker or to the Accountant General, as the case may be¹³.

(v) Unclaimed Funds and Effects

1580. Unclaimed funds; in general.

A fund¹ is treated as unclaimed if it stands to the credit of an account that has not been dealt with for a period of ten years² and the Accountant General³ is, at any time, satisfied that although all reasonable steps have been taken to trace the person entitled to it and to pay it to him, that person cannot be traced⁴. Where, however, the fund was lodged for the benefit of a child, the ten-year period does not run until the child's eighteenth birthday or, if his date of birth is not known, until 18 years have elapsed since the account was opened⁵.

2 I.e. otherwise than by the continuous investment or placing on deposit of accrued interest, the compulsory conversion, redemption or acquisition of securities or the placing on deposit of any money arising therefrom: Court Funds Rules 1987, SI 1987/821, r 57(2)(i). 1581. Carrying over unclaimed funds.

Subject to special provisions where the person entitled to the fund is a child¹, the Accountant General² may carry over³ an unclaimed fund in court⁴ to an account of unclaimed balances⁵.

On receipt of a payment schedule⁶ directing a dealing with a fund carried over in accordance with these provisions, the Accountant General must carry back the unclaimed balance to the appropriate account⁷. Where a fund is carried back, simple interest⁸ must be credited to the fund in respect of the whole period during which the fund stood to an account of unclaimed balances at the rate of interest prescribed, at the date when the fund is carried back, for money placed in a basic account⁹.

The Accountant General must maintain a list of the accounts in respect of which funds have been carried over to an account of unclaimed balances, which may be inspected at the Court Funds Office¹⁰ during normal office hours¹¹. Similarly, the court officer¹² of each county court must maintain a list of unclaimed funds in the custody of that court, which may be inspected at the court office; and he must send to the Accountant General a copy of the list from time to time¹³.

1582. Disposal of unclaimed effects.

Where effects have been deposited in court¹ on or after 3 July 1978 and have been carried over² to an account of unclaimed balances³, the Accountant General⁴ may send to the court a copy of any inventory provided to him⁵ in respect of such effects when 25 years have elapsed since the authority for the lodgment was received⁶.

Upon receipt of such an inventory, the court may cause inquiries to be made whether any party to the proceedings in which the effects were deposited wishes to make any application in respect of them, or whether any other person who may have an interest in the effects can be found⁷. The court may also, of its own motion and without reference to any party or person (other than a party or person who may have an interest and whose whereabouts or the whereabouts of whose personal representatives are known), order the final disposal of the effects by sale, realisation or otherwise⁸. It must not, however, order the destruction of any effects unless it is satisfied that they have no realisable value⁹.

The amount of the net proceeds of any sale or realisation under these provisions must be credited by the court officer¹⁰ and placed to the credit of the unclaimed balance account in which the effects were held prior to the sale or realisation¹¹.

1584. Repayment of closed county court funds.

Where a fund¹ in a county court has been closed, a person may apply to the court at which the funds account was kept for repayment of all or part of the fund to him in whole or in part². If the court is satisfied that the claimant is entitled to the whole or part of the fund, it may order the payment to him of money standing to the credit of the account as at the date of its closure or of a sum of money representing the value of the fund at the date of its closure³.

Where the court makes an order for payment under these provisions, the court officer⁴ must send a sealed copy of the court's order to the Accountant General⁵. On receipt of the order the Accountant General must take such steps as may be necessary to give effect to it and must forward a remittance for the amount of the fund to the claimant⁶.

The provisions of Part X of the Court Funds Rules 1987⁷ apply, with such modifications as may be necessary, to unclaimed moneys in a county court which have not been dealt with for a period of one year immediately before the preceding 1 March⁸.

(7) INTERPLEADER

(i) Introduction

1585. Meaning of 'interpleader'.

Where a person, for example an enforcement officer who has levied under a writ of execution, is in possession of property or its proceeds of sale and he is, or expects to be, sued in respect thereof by two or more persons making adverse claims thereto, he may apply to the court for an order requiring the claimants to litigate their differences and to abide by the court's final order in respect thereof¹. He is thereafter safeguarded by being able to act in respect of the property or its proceeds of sale consistently with, or as may be directed by, the court's final order. In these circumstances he is said to apply to the court for relief by way of interpleader².

1 See CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 1. For a consideration of the nature of interpleader see De La Rue v Hernu, Peron and Stockwell Ltd[1936] 2 KB 164, [1936] 2 All ER 411, CA. For the distinction between interpleader by an enforcement officer and by a stakeholder see PARAS 1588-1589.

2 See CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 1(1). The former interpleader summons (now the interpleader claim or application) is a proceeding the object of which is to extricate the defendant from the embarrassment of being sued, or being likely to be sued, by more than one party in respect of the same subject matter: Eastern Holdings Establishment of Vaduz v Singer and Friedlander Ltd[1967] 2 All ER 1192, [1967] 1 WLR 1017.

1586. Jurisdiction to grant relief.

In former times, interpleader relief was given to a limited extent by the courts of common law but more widely in equity¹. Before 1873 interpleader proceedings were brought either in the Courts of Chancery by a bill of interpleader, or in the common law courts under the Interpleader Act 1831². The sheriff had rights to summon a jury to decide to whom goods belonged³. The High Court jurisdiction to grant relief by way of interpleader is now governed by the procedure contained in the preserved and amended Rules of the Supreme Court⁴ contained in Schedule 1 to, and the preserved and amended County Court Rules⁵ contained in Schedule 2 to, the Civil Procedure Rules⁶, and the statutory provisions have been repealed⁷. Interpleader relief is available in all divisions of the High Court⁸ and in the county court⁹.

The statutory relief available under the Law of Property Act 1925 s 136(1), permitting interpleader by a debtor where an assignment of the debt is alleged and disputed (see PARA 1588) would be within the scope of CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17, without this special statutory provision.

A. RELIEF IN THE HIGH COURT

1587. In general.

Relief in the High Court is available in two classes of case, known traditionally as stakeholder's and sheriff's interpleader.

An interpleader issue arising in an existing claim is technically a 'proceeding' in that claim, and not itself a claim¹. It is, however, sufficiently distinct from the original claim to be regarded for some purposes, for example a solicitor's retainer, as a separate litigation². If the application for relief by way of interpleader is not made in an existing claim the applicant must issue a claim form³ and the court may order an issue to be tried⁴, in which case that issue will fall within the meaning of 'action' for the purposes of the Supreme Court Act 1981⁵.

1588. Stakeholder's interpleader.

In a stakeholder's interpleader, relief is available where the applicant is under a liability in respect of a debt, or in respect of any money, goods or chattels, and he is, or expects to be, sued for or in respect of that debt or money, or those goods or chattels, by two or more persons making adverse claims thereto¹. Those applicants are traditionally referred to as stakeholders, and the ensuing proceedings as stakeholder's interpleader². By statute, stakeholder's interpleader is available also to a debtor, trustee, or other person liable in respect of a debt or chose (or thing) in action which has been the subject of a legal assignment when he has had notice either that the assignment is disputed by the assignor or any person claiming under him, or of other opposing or conflicting claims to the debt or chose (or thing) in action³. In such a case the applicant may either call upon the claimants to interplead, or pay the debt or chose (or thing) in action into court⁴.

As the assignment must have been a legal assignment in order to give rise to the right to interplead, the applicant must have had written notice of the assignment before he applies to interplead⁵. Application for this relief is made under the rules relating to stakeholder's interpleader. Stakeholder's interpleader relief is available to the Crown⁶.

1 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 1(1)(a); see further PARAS 1591-1593. An enforcement officer who, after executing a judgment against a debtor obtained by the assignor of the debt, receives notice of the assignee's claim, is not entitled to relief under this head: cf Plant v Collins [1913] 1 KB 242, CA.

2 See Matthew v Northern Assurance Co (1878) 9 ChD 80.

3 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 136(1) proviso. However, such relief is also available under the general provisions of CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17. The debtor, trustee or other person must have been given express written notice of the assignment: Law of Property Act 1925 s 136(1).

1589. Sheriff's interpleader.

In a sheriff's interpleader, relief is available to a sheriff¹ where a claim is made by any person, other than the person against whom the process is issued, to any money, goods, or chattels taken, or intended to be taken, by a sheriff in execution under any process or to the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels².

1 References in CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 to a sheriff are to be construed as including references to an individual authorised to act as an enforcement officer under the Courts Act 2003 and any other officer charged with the execution of process by or under the authority of the High Court: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 1(2). As to persons other than a sheriff being protected see Levasseur v Mason and Barry Ltd [1891] 2 QB 73, CA (receiver of judgment debtor's property appointed by the court). The rule would also allow an application for relief by a sequestrator appointed by the court.

1590. Discretionary nature of relief.

Interpleader relief is discretionary and cannot be claimed as of right¹. Provided, however, that the applicant fulfils the necessary conditions², and both claimants have substantive claims, the court's jurisdiction is limited only by terms of the relevant rule of court³, and the court leans strongly in favour of granting the application if possible. Where the enforcement officer is the applicant the court may make a specific order barring future claims being brought against him in respect of the seizure for which he applied for relief⁴. Relief will be granted if the conditions relating to jurisdiction and procedure are fulfilled wherever the court is satisfied that it is proper to do so⁵.

Relief may be granted even though the claimant may claim under an equitable title⁶ or even though the applicant may be estopped, as for instance by bailment or agency, from denying a claimant's title, and even where the relief which can be given is not complete⁷. Where there is a question of estoppel the order directing the issue between the claimants should be so framed as not to shut out either claimant from asserting any claim which he may have against the applicant on the estoppel, but should leave it open to him to assert that claim if defeated by the other claimant on the issue⁸.

Relief may also be granted even though the applicant admits liability as to part of the claim only⁹, and though the claims made against him are not co-extensive¹⁰; but relief will be refused where the applicant is or may be liable to both claimants¹¹.

1591. Subject matter of stakeholder's interpleader.

The subject matter of a stakeholder's interpleader is a debt, money, goods or chattels, or a debt or chose (or thing) in action which has been the subject of a legal assignment¹.

A debt for which the claimant has already obtained judgment against the applicant cannot be made the subject matter of an application for relief².

An insurance company's statutory obligation to lay out money payable under a fire insurance policy upon a house in rebuilding it if so requested by a person interested, unless the party claiming the money gives security as to its application³, is not a liability for a debt or money and, if a lessor claims the fulfilment of the obligation and the lessee claims payment of the insurance money to him, there are not adverse claims to a debt or money so as to entitle the company to interplead⁴.

It has been held that 'money'⁵ does not include a contested claim to the reward advertised for the apprehension of a criminal⁶.

The word 'chattels' in this connection is one of the widest words known to the law in its relation to personal property⁷, and includes deeds and other papers⁸, and choses (or things) in action, for instance the shares in a joint stock company⁹. Where either of the claims is substantially one for unliquidated damages the case is outside the scope of interpleader, but, where the main subject of dispute is specified goods or money, the existence of a claim for damages will not in itself bar the applicant from obtaining the relief sought¹⁰.

An applicant may not ordinarily interplead in respect of a debt which has been made the subject of a third party debt order absolute¹¹, even though a claim is made to the debt by an adverse claimant. He is bound to comply with the order and is protected by it¹².

1592. Possession of subject matter.

Where the claim is for a specific article or fund, any applicant for relief, other than a sheriff¹, must be in possession of the subject matter in dispute between the claimants, for he has to satisfy the court that he is willing to pay or transfer it into court or to dispose of it as the court may direct². Where he has parted with possession he may be denied relief even though he undertakes to pay over the value to the party found entitled³. So also he may disentitle himself to relief if, after receiving notice of adverse claims to goods, he sells them and disposes of a portion of the proceeds in accordance with the direction of one of the parties⁴.

1593. Reality of the claims.

To entitle a stakeholder to relief it is essential that he is, or genuinely expects to be, sued by two or more persons¹. It is therefore normally too late to apply for relief after judgment². It is not necessary that he be actually sued³, but there must be some real foundation for the expectation. A mere anticipation, without any intimation having been received, is not enough⁴. Where, therefore, the applicant knows that the rival claims are about to be settled by litigation between the claimants he cannot obtain relief by interpleader⁵. So also where the allegation that proceedings are threatened is known to be groundless, interpleader proceedings, if begun, may be dismissed with costs⁶.

The claims should be at least two in number and should be adverse⁷. The conflict between the claimants must be real in the sense that each claim, if proved, would give a good cause of action against the applicant, so that where the applicant is not under any obligation to one of the claimants⁸, or where he can, without incurring any liability, pay the subject matter of the claim to one of the claimants⁹, he is not entitled to relief. A mere pretext of a conflicting claim is not sufficient, and the court must be satisfied that there is a question to be tried¹⁰. The claims must be adverse in the sense of being claims to the whole or part of the same money or goods or thing. They may arise out of the same transaction and still be so different as to prevent relief being granted¹¹.

It is of the essence of interpleader that the applicant is liable to one or other only of the claimants in respect of the same subject matter¹². Where, therefore, the applicant is or may be liable to both, as when two auctioneers claim agents' commission on the sale of the same house, interpleader is not available¹³.

This principle, however, is subject to the court's power to grant relief even though the claims are not co-extensive, and even though the applicant denies liability in part to either claimant: see PARA 1590.

1594. Wagering contracts.

A stakeholder of money deposited by parties to a wagering contract will not normally be granted relief by way of interpleader, at least where a defence under the Gaming Acts¹ is open to him, or where, by ordering an issue, the court would in effect be driven into the position where it would have to decide the event of a wager². This principle does not seem, however, to have been acted on consistently³. It may well be that the true rule is that, where both of the claimants are the parties to the wagering contract, and the real object of the interpleader is to obtain the court's decision as to which is entitled to the stakes deposited, the court must refuse relief, but not where the claimants are not both parties to the wager, and the illegality of the transaction is set up against a party who is not party to it⁴. Thus, the Court of Appeal has at least acquiesced in relief given in a court of first instance where the only question at issue was between a bankrupt and his own trustee in bankruptcy, and where the bankrupt was endeavouring to set up against the trustee the illegality of the title by which he had himself become entitled to the money in question⁵.

1596. Subject matter of sheriff's interpleader.

Relief by way of sheriff's interpleader is available to sheriffs or other officers¹ charged with the execution of process by or under the authority of the High Court². The claim for relief may be made in two sets of circumstances: (1) when the sheriff is met with a claim which is disputed by the execution creditor to money, goods or chattels taken or intended to be taken in execution under any process of the court, or to the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels³; and (2) when the claim is admitted and the sheriff has withdrawn, and the sheriff requires an order restraining the bringing of proceedings against him in respect of his action in seizing under the writ of execution⁴.

As an intended seizure is enough, actual seizure is unnecessary⁵, and may be undesirable where there is nothing to identify the goods directed to be seized with ownership or possession by the judgment debtor⁶, but the fact that the goods are not in the possession of the judgment debtor but are in the possession of his trustee or even of the claimant himself need not deprive the sheriff of his right to relief⁷.

'Proceeds or value of any such goods'⁸ includes money paid to the sheriff under protest by the claimant himself⁹, and this indicates a convenient procedure to release the goods seized from the sheriff's custody and to allow the claimant to deal in the goods¹⁰.

1597. Nature of claims in sheriff's interpleader.

As in stakeholder's interpleader, the claim made by the third party must be a real one and the applicant sheriff must be or expect to be sued¹. The claim must be one to the goods as such or their proceeds or value as representing the goods².

Interpleader proceedings do not lie on a claim by a third party to be the person rightfully entitled to payment of the debt in respect of which execution has been issued³, nor on a claim by a judgment debtor to set off another judgment debt due to him from a creditor⁴, nor to dispute a landlord's claim for rent made under the statutory provisions which prohibit the removal of goods from leasehold property until certain arrears of rent have been paid by an execution creditor⁵.

Provided the claim has been duly made⁶, a sheriff will normally be entitled to relief even though the claim is obviously bad. If he has already exercised his discretion in the matter he will not be granted relief⁷. If a sheriff is in any way indemnified he is also not entitled to relief and can refuse to accept an offer of indemnity made by the execution creditor⁸. Questions of priority of time between different execution creditors are not claims which entitle a sheriff to interplead⁹, but relief may be available where, in addition to the questions of priority, there is a claim against both execution creditors¹⁰. If, on execution being levied against a partner, a claim is made that the property seized is partnership property and the execution creditor disputes the partnership or denies that the goods seized are partnership property, the dispute is a proper subject for interpleader proceedings¹¹.

If a seizure is made and a claim is made that the goods are owned by the debtor jointly with others or as tenants in common, the sheriff can sell and the question of the distribution of the proceeds if in dispute can be the subject of interpleader proceedings¹².

The claim by a debenture holder can be a subject for interpleader proceedings if, for example, the validity of the receiver's appointment is disputed, but where the charge over the company's assets has been crystallised by the valid appointment of a receiver before the completion of an execution by seizure and sale the rights of the debenture holders will have priority over those of the execution creditor¹³.

1598. Claim and admission in sheriff's interpleader.

The sheriff's right to interplead is founded on the existence of one or more claims to the subject matter of the seizure or intended seizure, not being claims which the execution creditor admits. In order to entitle the sheriff to interplead, any person making a claim to or in respect of any money, goods or chattels taken or intended to be taken in execution under the process of the court, or to the proceeds or value of any such goods or chattels, must give notice of this claim¹ to the sheriff² charged with the execution of the process and must include in his notice a statement of his address, which will be his address for service³. On receipt of the claim the sheriff must forthwith give notice of it to the execution creditor⁴ who must, within seven days after receiving the notice, give notice to the sheriff informing him whether he admits or disputes the claim⁵. Where the sheriff receives a notice from an execution creditor disputing a claim, or the execution creditor fails, within seven days, to give the required notice, and the claim is not withdrawn, the sheriff may apply to the court⁶ for relief⁷. On the other hand, a sheriff who receives a notice from an execution creditor admitting a claim must withdraw from possession of the money, goods or chattels claimed and may apply to the court for an order restraining the bringing of a claim against him for or in respect of his having taken possession of that money or those goods or chattels⁸.

1 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 2(1). Whilst the rule does not specifically require the claim to be in writing (as did the former RSC (1883) Ord LVII r 16(1) (revoked)), this is implied; an oral claim is not sufficient but must be fully investigated by the sheriff; see Observer Ltd v Gordon (Cranfield, Claimants) [1983] 2 All ER 945, [1983] 1 WLR 1008.

The claim should give a description and full details of the goods and chattels claimed, as costs are frequently awarded on the basis of whether it was reasonable for the execution creditor to have been suspicious of the claim because it was vague or insufficient: see Powell v Lock (1835) 3 Ad & El 315. The claim need not necessarily be signed: see JRP Plastics Ltd v Gordon Rossall Plastics Ltd (Hexa Pen Co Ltd, Claimants) [1950] 1 All ER 241, DC.

MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(7) INTERPLEADER/(ii) Interpleader in the High Court/A. RELIEF IN THE HIGH COURT/1599. Claim in respect of goods protected from seizure.

1599. Claim in respect of goods protected from seizure.

Where a judgment debtor whose goods have been seized, or are intended to be seized, by a sheriff¹ under a writ of execution claims that such goods are not liable to execution², he must within five days of the seizure give notice in writing to the sheriff identifying all those goods in respect of which he makes such a claim and the grounds of such claim in respect of each item³. Upon receipt of a notice of claim under this provision, the sheriff must forthwith give notice of it to the execution creditor and to any person who has made a claim to, or in respect of, the goods⁴ and the execution creditor and any person who has made claim must, within seven days of receipt of such notice, inform the sheriff in writing whether he admits or disputes the judgment debtor's claim in respect of each item⁵.

The sheriff must withdraw from possession of any goods in respect of which the judgment debtor's claim is admitted or if the execution creditor or any person claiming the goods⁶ fails to notify him in accordance with the above requirement, and the sheriff must so inform the parties in writing⁷.

Where the sheriff receives notice from the execution creditor, or any such person to whom notice was given as mentioned above, that the claim or any part of it is disputed, he must forthwith seek the directions of the court and may include therein an application for an order⁸ restraining the bringing of any claim against him for, or in respect of, his having seized any of those goods or his having failed so to do⁹. The application must be made in accordance with Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹⁰.

On the hearing of the application, the court may determine the judgment debtor's claim summarily or may give such directions for the determination of any issue raised by such claim as may be just¹¹.

MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(7) INTERPLEADER/(ii) Interpleader in the High Court/A. RELIEF IN THE HIGH COURT/1600. Exercise of sheriff's right to apply for relief.

1600. Exercise of sheriff's right to apply for relief.

The sheriff should exercise his right to apply for relief within a reasonable time of the expiry of the seven days within which the execution creditor is required to admit or dispute the claim¹. There is no necessity for the sheriff to wait until proceedings are taken against him², and a claimant should first allow the sheriff to interplead before himself bringing proceedings against a sheriff³.

The sheriff's application for protection where an execution creditor admits a claim and the sheriff has to withdraw from possession of money, goods or chattels claimed⁴ is to be regarded as an application for relief under the rules relating to interpleader⁵. If the sheriff fails to withdraw after receiving a notice of admission from the execution creditor, the court will not permit him to claim relief in order to obtain protection from an action by the claimant⁶, and even where the sheriff does withdraw the court will not grant him protection where it is apparent that the claimant has a real grievance⁷. In the absence of an admission by the execution creditor the sheriff withdraws in the face of a claim only at his peril, whether he withdraws without seizure⁸, or seizes and then withdraws⁹, or delivers up the goods or some of them¹⁰, or pays over the proceeds to a claimant or the execution creditor¹¹. In all the above cases he may be refused relief even if he offers to bring the amount into court¹².

If the sheriff relinquishes possession the goods are no longer in the custody of the law and may be distrained for rent¹³, but whilst the ownership of the goods is in issue before the court pending determination by the court any removal of those goods out of the sheriff's custody by a claimant is a contempt of court¹⁴.

1601. Wrongdoing by the sheriff or his under-sheriff.

The court may refuse a sheriff relief where the difficulty arises from his own wrongdoing¹. Thus relief will not be given where he has seized goods which he knew were not those of the execution debtor² or which were in the custody of a receiver appointed by the court³. The circumstances in which an order will be made directing that no action be brought against a sheriff who has acted in good faith but mistakenly are considered subsequently⁴.

An under-sheriff who is a solicitor cannot act as such on behalf of a claimant as against an execution creditor, but the fact that he has directed a claim to be made on behalf of a claimant for whom he had previously acted as solicitor is not sufficient, in the absence of collusion or dishonest conduct, or anything to prejudice the execution creditor, to prevent relief being given⁵. The case is otherwise where there is a clear degree of culpability on the under-sheriff's part. A sheriff must not 'play on the same side' as one of the parties to the proceedings⁶. Where, for instance, the under-sheriff postpones execution of the process entrusted to him in order that other creditors for whom he formerly acted as solicitor may take bankruptcy proceedings or gives information to other creditors for whom he has acted which may have the effect of defeating or delaying the execution creditor's rights, the sheriff may be disentitled to relief⁷. A sheriff has also been refused relief where the under-sheriff or his partner was himself the execution creditor⁸.

1602. Conditions of relief.

There are three conditions precedent to interpleader relief, and evidence of them must normally support an application¹. These conditions are that the applicant:

- 1194 (1) claims no interest in the subject matter in dispute other than for charges or costs²;
- 1195 (2) does not collude with any of the claimants to that subject matter³; and
- 1196 (3) is willing to pay or transfer that subject matter into court or to dispose of it as the court may direct⁴.

A stakeholder will file an affidavit, ordinarily to be deposed to by himself personally⁵, in support of his application dealing with these and any other matters; a sheriff⁶ will only provide that evidence if directed by the court to do so⁷, otherwise he may not obtain his costs of so doing. An affidavit on behalf of a corporation or company should be deposed to by the appropriate officer⁸. A partnership has been allowed to rely on an affidavit sworn by two only out of four partners⁹.

A sheriff interpleads on the footing that he is neutral as between the parties and acting as though an officer of the court, and his claim to costs depends on his conforming to that principle¹⁰.

Where the applicant is the officer of a company specially authorised by Act of Parliament to bring proceedings in his own name, his affidavit should depose of an absence of interest or collusion both in himself and, to the best of his knowledge and belief, in the company: Bignold v Audland (1840) 11 Sim 23.

1603. Absence of personal interest.

It is unlikely that a sheriff, his under-sheriff or his officers will have any personal interest in the subject matter in dispute other than for charges or costs¹, but any such interest must be disclosed to the court². A stakeholder may have an interest so as to bar himself from obtaining relief even though he does not lay claim to any specific part of the subject matter if he has a financial stake in the result of the proceedings³. A mere affinity for one side rather than the other is of course insufficient to debar an applicant for relief⁴. The fact that the applicant has a lien over the goods in question for storage, or a claim to commission on the proceeds of sale, does not disentitle him to relief⁵.

1 See CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 3(4)(a); and PARA 1602.

There are no modern reported cases where personal interest has been alleged against the applicant.

1604. Absence of collusion.

The second condition precedent to the granting of interpleader relief is that the applicant does not collude with any of the claimants to the subject matter¹. It is difficult to draw a clear line between interest and collusion, and the modern interpretation is that there must be no identification of interest between the applicant and the claimant. Collusion does not here necessarily entail anything morally wrong; it means that the applicant must not 'play on the same side' as one of the claimants². In executing a writ the sheriff is acting as an officer charged with the carrying out of the court's orders; he is in effect in the same position as an officer of the court, and should act as such³. The court is entitled to expect a high standard of conduct.

MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(7) INTERPLEADER/(ii) Interpleader in the High Court/A. RELIEF IN THE HIGH COURT/1605. Willingness to bring subject matter into court.

1605. Willingness to bring subject matter into court.

The third condition for the granting of interpleader relief is that the applicant must be willing and able to pay or transfer the subject matter of the dispute into court, or to dispose of it as the court may direct¹. Where goods are the subject matter, the court may order them to be sold². A sheriff is never directed to bring the goods into court, but he may be ordered to move them to a place of safety³.

Where the subject matter is money or the proceeds of the sale of goods either seized and sold⁴, or ordered to be sold⁵, or where the claimant is prepared or ordered to pay the value of the goods to the sheriff and secure their release⁶, the court may give directions as to the trial of the issue, ordering either that the money be paid into court or that it be held by the sheriff pending further order, and releasing the applicant from any further part in the proceedings with an order that no action be brought against him⁷.

It is generally necessary that a stakeholder applicant should be able to bring the whole amount into court, and it is no excuse that, before the adverse claim was made, the applicant paid a part of the sum claimed to the claimant⁸.

1 See CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 3(4)(c); and PARA 1602. Where the subject matter of the dispute is a chose (or thing) in action, its disposition is equivalent to payment in the case of money or transfer in the case of goods: Robinson v Jenkins (1890) 24 QBD 275, CA.

2 See PARAS 1616-1618.

3 This sanction is frequently applied where the claimant refuses to sign a 'walking possession agreement' which acknowledges the seizure by the sheriff and gives undertakings as to retention of the seized property in consideration of the sheriff not leaving an officer in possession.

1606. Respondents to the application.

Any person who alleges facts which, if true, would establish a cause of action against the applicant in respect of the subject matter of the application for relief, and who has asserted that claim by notice if the claim is against a sheriff¹, may be recognised as an interpleader claimant. The Crown may be made a party to interpleader proceedings².

There have been interpleader proceedings in respect of claims by minors³, beneficiaries even though the trustees were not joined⁴, administrators, executors or trustees of a settlement⁵, a person claiming a lien on the subject matter in dispute⁶, an agent who had leased goods to the execution debtor⁷, a liquidator of a foreign company⁸, the debtor's trustee in bankruptcy⁹, a trustee under a deed of assignment for the benefit of creditors¹⁰, debenture holders where the property seized was the company's property¹¹, a receiver appointed by the court¹², and an equitable mortgagee¹³. The execution debtor may be a claimant where he claims as executor or trustee for some other person, and not in his own right¹⁴.

If it is desired to add a company in liquidation as a respondent to an interpleader notice or issue, the leave of the Companies Court must first be obtained¹⁵.

1608. More than one claimant.

The fact that there are several interpleader claimants is no bar to relief being granted, the principle being that an applicant ought to be relieved from the vexation attending the bringing of various suits against him¹. Nor is it an objection that all the claimants do not claim precisely the same amount². The court has power to substitute one claimant for another³ or to add a claimant⁴. Where different claimants claim different goods, or the same goods for different reasons, there may be more than one issue directed to be tried between the appropriate parties within the one trial.

B. APPLICATION FOR INTERPLEADER RELIEF

1609. Mode of application.

An application for relief by way of interpleader must be made by claim form¹ using the Part 8 procedure² unless the application is made in an existing claim, in which case it must be made in accordance with Part 23 of the Civil Procedure Rules³.

Where the applicant is a sheriff who has withdrawn from possession of money, goods or chattels taken in execution and who is applying for relief⁴, the claim form must be served on any person who made a claim⁵ to or in respect of that money or those goods or chattels, and that person may attend the hearing of the application⁶. A sheriff's application is made in the proceedings in which the process has been directed to him and is made:

- 1197 (1) where the claim in question is proceeding in the Royal Courts of Justice, to a master⁷ (or, in the Family Division, a district judge or, in the Admiralty Court, the Admiralty Registrar⁸) or, if the execution to which the application relates has been or is to be levied in the district of a district registry, either to a master or to the district judge of that registry⁹;
- 1198 (2) where the claim is proceeding in a district registry, either to the district judge of that registry, or, if execution has been or is to be levied in the district of some other district registry or outside the district of any district registry, either to that district judge or to the district judge of that other registry or to a master, as the case may be¹⁰.

The first consideration is the convenience of the majority of the parties¹¹.

The application must be made as quickly as possible, or the applicant may be refused relief or may not obtain all his costs¹². The matter is urgent because in most cases the goods seized remain, throughout the application, under the control of the court, and in sheriff's interpleaders the goods are in the custody of the law awaiting the court's determination as to the person to whom the goods can be released¹³. A claimant may therefore be prevented from trading or dealing in goods which may subsequently be found to be his own. Delay may also increase the costs by storage charges or sheriff's possession fees.

It is normally too late for an applicant to apply after judgment in a claim, even if this were signed in default¹⁴.

Where the applicant, knowing of the adverse claims, allowed himself to be sued by one of the parties and advised the joinder in the action of the other claimant instead of resorting to interpleader proceedings, it was held that he had forfeited the usual privilege allowed to an applicant in interpleader of being awarded his costs, and that he must pay the costs of the successful claimant¹⁵.

A claim form or application notice in a stakeholder's interpleader application must be supported by evidence¹⁶, but in a sheriff's interpleader an affidavit should not be filed on behalf of the sheriff unless directed by the court¹⁷.

1610. Witness statement or affidavit of claims.

A claim form or application notice for interpleader relief calls upon the claimants to appear and state the nature and particulars of their respective claims. In both stakeholder's and sheriff's interpleaders the claimant¹ must within 14 days of service on him of the claim form² serve on the execution creditor and the sheriff a witness statement³ or affidavit⁴ specifying any money and describing any goods or chattels claimed and setting out the grounds upon which such a claim is based⁵.

Where the applicant is a sheriff the claim form served must give notice of this requirement⁶.

1611. Sheriff's inventory of goods seized.

It is for the claimant in a sheriff's interpleader to inform the court what goods he is claiming¹. The claimant may not call on the sheriff to deliver particulars of the goods seized so as to enable him to prepare his claim², but the master or district judge may order the sheriff to assist the court by producing an inventory of the goods he has seized, and it is for the master or district judge on the return of the claim form or application notice to consider ordering the sheriff to provide the parties with such an inventory in advance of the hearing. Whilst the sheriff is not normally required to provide the claimant with the inventory, where all the goods seized are claimed the sheriff should not provide an inventory to one side only³. For the sheriff to prepare an inventory is a step in the execution allowing him to charge a prescribed fee based on a percentage of the value of the goods seized⁴.

The issue of the interpleader application does not of itself stay further proceedings in respect of the goods claimed; but the court has power to grant a stay of proceedings⁵, and the sheriff cannot safely advance the execution while a claim⁶ remains undetermined.

Expense may be saved if a claimant formulates a clear itemised claim so that the court may order the sheriff to check that the claimant has included all the goods seized. If any items are omitted by the claimant, the claim may be barred as to those items.

C. ORDER ON THE APPLICATION

1612. In general.

If an interpleader claimant¹, having been duly served² with a claim form for interpleader relief, does not appear at the hearing of the application or, having appeared, fails or refuses to comply with an order made in the proceedings, the court may make an order declaring him forever barred from prosecuting his claim against the applicant for such relief and all persons claiming under him³.

Where on the hearing of a claim in interpleader proceedings all the interpleader claimants appear, the court may order that any such claimant be made a defendant in any claim pending with respect to the subject matter in dispute in substitution for or in addition to the applicant for interpleader relief⁴, or that an issue between the interpleader claimants be stated and tried, in which case it may direct which of those claimants is to be claimant and which defendant⁵. It may also order that any claim in which the applicant is defendant be stayed⁶, may make one order in several causes⁷, and may order the sale of goods taken in execution⁸. It may make provision for the safe keeping or payment into or deposit in court of the subject matter; and has general power to make such order as to costs or any other matter as it thinks just⁹.

1 For these purposes, all the persons by whom adverse claims to the subject matter in dispute are made are referred to as the 'interpleader claimants': see CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 5(1).

1613. Failure of parties to appear.

Where an interpleader claimant¹ who has been duly served² does not appear on the hearing, or, having appeared, fails or refuses to comply with an order made in the proceedings, the court may make an order declaring the claimant, and all persons claiming under him, forever barred from prosecuting his claim against the applicant for interpleader relief and all persons claiming under him³. Such an order does not, however, affect the rights of the claimants as between themselves⁴.

An order under this rule cannot be made against a claimant who actually appears and makes out some sort of claim, however nebulous⁵; likewise such an order should not be made in a claimant's favour without giving the execution creditor a chance to test the claimant's evidence by cross-examination, and there should be disclosure of documents in order to test whether the claim is good⁶.

1615. Stay of proceedings.

Where a defendant to a claim applies for relief by way of interpleader in the claim, the court may by order stay all further proceedings in that claim¹.

The court has power to stay an action by a claimant against a sheriff, not only for damages caused by seizure of the goods, but also for trespass, but only if no substantial injury has been done². Accordingly, where the applicant is a sheriff and the court either makes an order barring the claimant or ordering the sheriff to withdraw, the court usually directs that no claim is to be brought against the sheriff; but the sheriff will be directed to be protected only where he has made an honest mistake in executing the process of the court and where, but for the mistake, everything that he has done would have been justified³. In deciding whether there has been a substantial grievance the court will look at all the relevant facts surrounding the execution including the value of goods and also the claimant's conduct. The fact that the sheriff has sold the successful claimant's goods is not of itself a substantial grievance where the claimant does not prove that the prices obtained at public auction were unreasonable and where his own claim to the goods has been delayed⁴. Where substantial grievance has been caused, even though the seizure was in good faith, and particularly where there has been misconduct⁵, a claim against the sheriff ought not to be barred⁶. It is the quality of the sheriff's admitted wrong which is relevant.

Where the sheriff has sold goods found to be the property of the claimant, the court should make an order directing that no claim is to be brought against the sheriff unless it can be shown that the claimant had a fairly arguable case that the sheriff had no defence to the claimant's prima facie claim for conversion either at common law or by statute⁷.

The court also has power to restrain a claim against the execution creditor⁸.

An execution creditor may not be sued for a mistake on the sheriff's part where he has not done anything to authorise the sheriff's act, and his becoming a party to an issue is not such a ratification of the sheriff's act as to make him liable as the sheriff's principal⁹.

Where the execution creditor abandons the seizure and an order to bar a claim against the sheriff has been refused, the sheriff may still show, if he can, that the goods really belonged to the judgment debtor¹⁰.

1616. Power to order sale.

Where an application for relief by way of interpleader is made by a sheriff¹ who has taken possession of any goods or chattels in execution under any process, and an interpleader claimant² alleges that he is entitled, under a bill of sale or otherwise, to the goods or chattels by way of security for a debt, the court may (and unless the claimant pays into court the value of the goods claimed or gives security, ordinarily will³), order those goods or chattels or any part of them to be sold and may direct that the proceeds of the sale be applied in such manner and on such terms as may be just and as may be specified in the order⁴. The court's power to order a sale is not, however, confined to that conferred by this provision. In or for the purpose of any interpleader proceedings the court may make such order as it thinks just as to any matter⁵, and it has a discretionary power to order sale which may be exercised whenever it appears just and reasonable⁶.

1619. Available methods of trial.

If the interpleader claimants¹ appear and it is considered that there is a dispute between them, however nebulous, to try², the court should first consider giving directions as to (1) whether a sufficiently detailed witness statement or affidavit³ has been supplied by the claimant⁴; (2) whether the court should direct the sheriff to provide an inventory⁵; and (3) the disclosure of documents⁶.

The dispute may then be determined in a number of alternative ways, including:

- 1199 (a) dismissal of the application⁷;
- 1200 (b) a summary determination on the merits of the claim⁸;
- 1201 (c) a reference of the matter to the judge⁹;
- 1202 (d) remission of the proceedings to the county court¹⁰;
- 1203 (e) a reference of the dispute to arbitration¹¹;
- 1204 (f) the substitution or addition of the claimant as defendant to proceedings already begun¹²;
- 1205 (g) an order that an issue be stated and tried¹³.

Where the claimant's witness statement or affidavit⁷ raises on the face of it a serious claim to chattels of a considerable overall value and the prospect of difficult points of law, summary determination should not be ordered even if the claimants have consented⁸.

Where the interpleader claimants¹ appear on the hearing of an interpleader claim and the matter is not dealt with in one of the ways described in the preceding paragraphs², the court may order that an issue between the claimants be stated and tried³, and may direct which of the interpleader claimants is to be claimant and which defendant⁴.

Part 39 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁵ applies, with the necessary modifications, to the trial of an interpleader issue as it applies to the trial of a claim⁶.

The court may try to provide for a convenient way of disposal of the subject matter of the dispute pending the trial of the issue by sale or otherwise, but if this is not possible the sheriff will have to remain in possession of the goods pending the final order. The court by whom an interpleader issue is tried may give such judgment or make such order as finally to dispose of all questions arising in the interpleader proceedings⁷. If the position of the applicant⁸ can be finally dealt with on the order directing an issue to be stated, for example by ordering him to deliver up the goods to a party to await the outcome of the issue, or to place them in store with provision made for storage fees⁹, or to withdraw from possession either unconditionally or after a party has given security for the goods, the order will also provide for the applicant's costs and include an order that no claim be brought against him. In these circumstances the applicant will not have to take any further part in the proceedings. If, as is frequently the case, the applicant's position cannot be fully provided for by the order directing the issue, the applicant will remain as a party before the court, if not a party to the dispute in the issue itself, and will have to appear before the court at the trial to secure a final order protecting his position and providing for costs¹⁰.

1623. Parties to the issue.

The question who is to be claimant and who defendant¹ in the issue² is one for the discretion of the court³, but usually the order directing the issue appoints as claimant the party on whom the burden of proof is considered to lie at the outset.

In a sheriff's interpleader this will ordinarily be the interpleader claimant, since the judgment debtor is usually in possession at the moment of seizure⁴. Where, however, it can be established that the interpleader claimant was in possession at the moment of seizure, and not the judgment debtor, the position is reversed, and it is the execution creditor who should be claimant, and the interpleader claimant who should be defendant, in the issue⁵. If it is not clear before the trial of the issue who was in possession at the moment of seizure, the interpleader claimant should normally be nominated as claimant.

Apart from the general rule enunciated above, it is less easy to be precise in cases of stakeholder's interpleader, since the exact circumstances vary more considerably in cases of this class. Where the applicant is a defendant to proceedings already begun, then in the absence of any special considerations the claimant in the claim is normally made claimant in the issue, but the decision will depend on the particular facts and the position may be reversed⁶.

Where a claim was made to stolen property in the hands of the police, and an issue was directed between the interpleader claimant and a convicted person, the interpleader claimant was made plaintiff (now known as 'claimant'), and that person defendant in the ensuing issue⁷. Where one of the interpleader claimants who would normally have been made plaintiff (now known as 'claimant') was an alien enemy, it was stated that, if it were desired to dispose of the claim before the cessation of hostilities, it would be desirable to make him defendant in the issue⁸.

A party aggrieved by an order nominating him as claimant or defendant has the same right of appeal as any other party to a discretionary interim order, and his grievance is not normally a ground for an application for a new trial once the issue is disposed of⁹.

There is power to add new parties both before and after the issue has been drawn up¹⁰, and to substitute a new interpleader claimant as claimant to the issue where the party originally made claimant refuses to proceed with the trial¹¹.

MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(7) INTERPLEADER/(ii) Interpleader in the High Court/D. DISPUTES BETWEEN CLAIMANTS/1624. Security by claimant in sheriff's interpleader.

1624. Security by claimant in sheriff's interpleader.

Where the applicant in a sheriff's interpleader is a sheriff in possession, the interpleader claimant may be ordered either to pay into court a sum of money equal to the value of the goods or to give security to the master's satisfaction for the payment of that amount in accordance with the orders of the court¹, and also, if he desires the sheriff to withdraw, to pay to the sheriff the possession money from the date of the order until payment into court or security is given.

Where the claimant is a receiver appointed by the court he may be directed to hold the goods and keep them subject to the further order of the court².

Where an issue has been directed between a claimant and the execution creditor and the claimant has paid into court the value of the goods, that sum takes the place of the goods for the purposes of the dispute, so that if the successful execution creditor takes the money out of court he cannot later seize the goods again if the sum is not sufficient to satisfy the judgment³. But if, subsequently to the payment in, another execution is levied at the instance of a different execution creditor, and the claimant makes another claim to the goods and the sheriff again interpleads, the claimant must pay into court another sum to abide the event of the trial of the issue between him and the second execution creditor⁴.

1 Each case will be considered on its merits. If the judgment debtor and claimant are associated companies, or members of the same family, or business associates, the court will be more ready to order a sale or security for costs and sheriff's charges than where there is no obvious connection between the judgment debtor and claimant and where there is no prima facie reason to doubt the validity of the claim.

1625. Security for costs of issue.

As between the parties to an issue the ordinary rules relating to security for costs apply¹, but for the purpose of ascertaining whether a party is liable to give security for costs the court will be guided by the substantial position of the parties and not by their nominal position under the order². Therefore, the defendant to the issue may be ordered to give security, provided he is substantially the claimant³, or, at least, as much so as the nominal claimant⁴, and the nominal claimant may escape the obligation on the ground that he is substantially the defendant, or, at least, as much so as the nominal defendant⁵. Indeed the court has ordered each of two parties to an issue to give security on the ground that substantially each was making a claim and each, therefore, should be treated as a claimant⁶.

The matter is one purely for the court's discretion⁷. In a case where the security ordered was not given and the claimant six months afterwards applied for judgment in his favour, an order was made for security to be given within a fortnight, otherwise the claimant was to be at liberty to obtain his judgment⁸.

In Frost v Heywood (1843) 2 Dowl NS 801 a bankrupt plaintiff was ordered to give security, but in Ridgway v Jones (1860) 29 LJB 97 insolvency was held an insufficient reason in itself for ordering security. 1626. Evidence.

The ordinary rules relating to evidence, burden of proof, presumptions and estoppels, both at trial and after it by way of res judicata, apply to interpleader issues as to other proceedings in the High Court¹.

A particular application of the rules of evidence concerns the right to set up *jus tertii*². An interpleader claimant who is bound to establish a better title than his adversary must do so, and may not in general set up *jus tertii*³. Moreover, he must usually show that he would have been in a position to sue the sheriff or stakeholder had he resisted the claim instead of seeking interpleader relief⁴. Conversely, his adversary may, in general, rely on *jus tertii*⁵. Thus, in a sheriff's interpleader, if the judgment debtor was in possession at the moment of seizure, the interpleader claimant may not rely on *jus tertii*⁶, while the execution creditor may⁷; but if that claimant was in possession at the time of seizure, the position is reversed and only that claimant may rely on *jus tertii*⁸. There is no difference of principle in these matters between sheriff's and stakeholder's interpleader. Thus, an interpleader claimant in a stakeholder's interpleader who was plaintiff (now known as 'claimant') in the issue was not allowed to raise jus tertii against the defendant in the issue who was claimant in the action (now known as the 'claim')⁹. It is sufficient that the party on whom the burden lies should establish a good possessory title as against his adversary without proving that he is absolute owner¹⁰. An equitable title may be sufficient, even if in the course of establishing it may be necessary to establish jus tertii, as where a second mortgagee has to establish the prior incumbrancer's position in order to prove that the equity of redemption has passed to him prior to the seizure¹¹. A lien may be sufficient provided it is good against the opposing party¹², and so may the equitable rights of debenture holders¹³.

E. COSTS

1627. In general.

In and for the purposes of any interpleader proceedings the court may make such order as to costs or any other matter¹ as it thinks just². Where the interpleader claimant³ fails to appear at the hearing, the court may direct that the sheriff's⁴ and execution creditor's costs are to be assessed by a master⁵ or, where the hearing was heard in a district registry, by a district judge of that registry⁶.

Detailed provisions about costs fall outside the scope of this title⁷.

1 The expression 'or any other matter' includes charges within the meaning of CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 3(4) (a): see PARA 1602. Thus, an unsuccessful claimant may be ordered to pay a wharfinger's charges accruing after the summons: De Rothschild Frères v Morrison, Kekewich & Co (1890) 24 QBD 750, CA. Such charges may be paid out of the subject matter in dispute: see Attenborough v London and St Katharine's Dock Co (1878) 3 CPD 450, CA; cf Harwood v Betham (1832) 1 LJ Ex 180.

2 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 8(1). This power is subject to CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 rr 1-7: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 8(1).

3 As to the meaning of 'interpleader claimant' see PARA 1612 note 1.

4 As to the meaning of 'sheriff' see PARA 1589 note 1.

5 For these purposes, references to a master are to be construed, where the claim in question is proceeding in the Admiralty Court or in the Family Division, as references to the Admiralty Registrar or to a district judge of that Division: CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 8(3).

6 CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 8(2). The following rules apply: CPR 44.4 (basis of assessment); CPR 44.5 (factors to be taken into account in deciding the amount of costs); and CPR 48.4 (limitations on court's power to award costs in favour of trustees or personal representative); CPR 48.6 (litigants in person): CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 8(2). See further The Civil Court Practice.

(iii) Interpleader in County Courts

A. IN GENERAL

1628. Jurisdiction.

The jurisdiction of county courts to grant relief by way of interpleader is governed entirely by statute and by the preserved and amended County Court Rules governing the procedure which are set out in Schedule 2 to the Civil Procedure Rules¹. County courts have jurisdiction in the following two classes of case:

- 1206 (1) where a person makes a claim to or in respect of any goods seized under a warrant of execution, or in respect of the proceeds or value of the goods ('interpleader under execution'²); the district judge³ may, as well before as after any action is brought against him, call before the court the party at whose instance the process was issued and the party making the claim⁴;
- 1207 (2) where a person (the 'applicant') is under a liability in respect of any debt, money or goods and he is, or expects to be, sued⁵ for, or in respect of the debt, money or goods, by two or more persons (the 'interpleader claimants') making adverse claims, he may apply to the court for relief ('interpleader otherwise than under execution')⁶.

A person claiming under head (2) above may do so by virtue of the statutory provisions relating to interpleader where a chose (or thing) in action has been the subject of a legal assignment and its amount or value does not exceed the county court limit⁷, or otherwise⁸. To entitle the applicant to relief the claims must be adverse and conflicting in the sense that they are claims to the same thing and that the applicant is not liable to both claimants⁹. It is essential that where the application arises out of an assignment, the applicant should have due notice of it in writing¹⁰.

Particular provision is made where interpleader proceedings under execution are ordered to be transferred from the High Court¹¹.

7 See the Law of Property Act 1925 s 136(1) proviso; and PARA 1588. The county court has jurisdiction under this provision where the amount or value of the debt or thing in action does not exceed the county court limit: Law of Property Act 1925 ss 136(3), 205(1)(iiiA) (added by the County Courts Act 1984 s 148(1), Sch 2 Pt II paras 4, 9). The jurisdiction limit is £30,000; High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 2(5).

8 See PARA 1639. The High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, abolished the former limit.

1630. Claims to damages.

In two classes of case a county court has jurisdiction to adjudicate upon a claim to damages in the course of interpleader proceedings:

1208 (1) on a district judge's application for interpleader relief, the judge must adjudicate on any claim to damages arising or capable of arising out of the execution of the warrant by the district judge¹;

1209 (2) in transferred proceedings², where the High Court application originated by way of sheriff's interpleader, the county court has jurisdiction, subject to any directions to the contrary in the order of the High Court, to adjudicate on any claim for damages against an execution creditor³.

B. PROCEDURE ON DISTRICT JUDGE'S APPLICATION

1631. The claim.

In order to found an application relating to interpleader by a district judge, a claim must have been made to or in respect of goods seized in execution or their proceeds or value¹. The claim must be in respect of the goods or chattels as such or the proceeds as representing them². If, after assigning his debt, a creditor recovers judgment against the debtor, and in execution of the judgment the district judge takes and sells the debtor's goods, the district judge, on receiving notice of the assignee's claim, may not seek interpleader relief, since the assignee's claim is a claim to be paid the debt and not a claim to the goods taken in execution or to their proceeds as such³.

The interpleader claimant⁴ must deliver to the bailiff holding the warrant of execution, or file⁵ in the office of the county court for the district in which the goods were seized, notice of his claim stating the grounds of the interpleader claim⁶ or, in the case of a claim for rent, the required particulars⁷, and the interpleader claimant's full name and address⁸. On receipt of the interpleader claim the court must send notice of it to the execution creditor⁹ and, except where the interpleader claim is to the proceeds or value of the goods, must send a further notice to the interpleader claimant requiring him to make a deposit or give security¹⁰.

Within four days of receiving the notice the execution creditor must give notice to the court informing the court whether he admits or disputes the interpleader claim, or requesting the district judge to withdraw from possession of the goods or money claimed¹¹. If, within the four day period, the execution creditor gives notice to the court admitting the interpleader claim or requesting the district judge to withdraw from possession of the goods or money claimed, the execution creditor will only be liable to the district judge for any possession fees or expenses incurred before the receipt by the district judge of his notice¹². Where the execution creditor gives such a notice admitting the claim or requesting the district judge to withdraw, the district judge must withdraw from possession of the goods or money claimed and may apply to the judge, on notice to the interpleader claimant, for an order restraining the bringing of a claim against the district judge for or in respect of his having taken possession of the goods or money¹³. On the hearing of the application the judge may make such order as may be just¹⁴.

3 Plant v Collins[1913] 1 KB 242, CA. In such a case the district judge is also disentitled to claim relief by way of interpleader otherwise than by execution under CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 r 6(1), (2) (see PARA 1628), since he is not a person under liability for any debt, money or goods within the meaning of that rule (Plant v Collins [1913] 1 KB 242 at 246-247, CA); nor can he claim relief under the statutory provisions relating to interpleader in the case of a legal assignment of a chose (or thing) in action (Plant v Collins [1913] 1 KB 242 at 246, CA; and see PARA 1588 text and note 3). For the principle that the claim must relate to the goods or their proceeds as such cf PARA 1597. As to a claim by a landlord for rent see PARA 1597 the text and note 5.

4 In CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 Pt I (rr 1-5), 'interpleader claimant' means any person making a claim to or in respect of goods seized in execution or the proceeds or value thereof, and 'interpleader claim' means that claim: CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 r 1(A1).

No possession fees are now prescribed by CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 r 2, but if these fees become payable, it has been held that the district judge might be entitled to such fees even if the goods of which he was in purported possession were actually in the possession of the sheriff: AW Ltd v Cooper and Hall Ltd [1925] 2 KB 816. It was also held that an appeal would lie from an order of the judge directing payment of the district judge's fees.

13 CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 r 3. As the rule gives protection in relation to any action in respect of the seizure, it is not limited to a claim brought by the interpleader claimant. Protection is only likely to be granted where that claimant has suffered no real grievance and his claim is only for nominal damages. The court is unlikely to protect the district judge where there is substantial grievance: see Cave v Capel [1954] 1 QB 367, [1954] 1 All ER 428, CA; and PARA 1598.

It is the quality of the district judge's act which is relevant, such as selling the goods at a gross undervalue: Neumann v Bakeaway Ltd [1983] 2 All ER 935, [1983] 1 WLR 1016n, CA. The test is whether the claimant can show that it is fairly arguable that his claim against the district judge overrides the district judge's defences under the County Courts Act 1984 s 98 (prospectively repealed), or at common law: see Observer Ltd v Gordon (Cranfield, Claimants) [1983] 2 All ER 945, [1983] 1 WLR 1008.

1632. Security by claimant on claim.

On receipt of the prescribed notice from the court¹ the interpleader claimant may deposit with the bailiff² either (1) the amount of the value of the goods claimed³; or (2) the sum which the bailiff is allowed to charge as costs for keeping possession of the goods until the judge's decision can be obtained on the claim⁴; or may give the bailiff in the prescribed manner security for the value of the goods claimed⁵. For this purpose the amount of the value of the goods claimed is in case of dispute⁶ to be fixed by appraisal⁷, and where that amount is deposited it must be paid by the bailiff into court to abide the judge's decision upon the claim⁸. In default of the claimant's complying with these provisions the bailiff must sell the goods as if no claim had been made and must pay into court the proceeds of the sale to abide the judge's decision⁹, but notwithstanding this provision the goods must not be sold if the district judge decides that in all the circumstances the judge's decision on the claim ought to be awaited¹⁰.

Where the real owner claims the goods but makes no deposit and does not give security and the bailiff thereupon sells under this provision, the sale conveys a good title to the goods even though the judgment debtor is not the true owner¹¹. It is not, however, clear whether the purchaser obtains a good title to the goods where the claimant is not the real owner and the real owner makes no claim until after the sale¹², or whether, where the claimant is not the real owner, the bailiff is liable to the real owner for conversion in respect of the sale¹³.

The provisions of the County Courts Act 1984 s 98 (prospectively repealed) (which validate the titles of purchasers and protect district judges and other officers from actions in cases where goods are sold without notice of a claim, and which overrule the actual decision in Crane & Sons v Ormerod [1903] 2 KB 37, CA) will not, it seems, apply if a claim has been made, even though it was not made by the true owner.

13 See Cramer v Matthews (1881) 7 QBD 425; Jelks v Hayward [1905] 2 KB 460 (which was not a decision under what is now the County Courts Act 1984 s 100(3), and is overruled by s 98: see note 12). Where, after the goods have been sold under s 100(3), a district judge is faced with a claim by the true owner, he may claim relief by way of interpleader against the true owner (cf Cramer v Matthews (1881) 7 QBD 425, Jelks v Hayward [1905] 2 KB 460), and it seems that he will be entitled to such relief at least so far as it relates to the sale as distinct from the original seizure. 1633. Deposit of amount of judgment debt but less than value of goods.

It is not quite clear what the position is where the interpleader claimant deposits¹ the amount of the judgment debt and costs where these are less than the value of the goods. Where such a claimant, whose title under a bill of sale was admitted, deposited the amount of the judgment debt and costs, and not the value of the goods, and the high bailiff² withdrew from possession without consulting the execution creditor, it was held that the high bailiff ought not to have withdrawn, and that, on the application of the execution creditor, the court had power to order the high bailiff to retake possession and to order a sale of the goods³ if there was evidence that the proceeds of such a sale might realise sufficient to discharge the bill of sale and leave a surplus towards the judgment debt and costs⁴.

In another case, however, where such a claimant deposited more than sufficient to cover the judgment debt and costs, although less than the value of the goods, and the execution creditor admitted that claimant's title before the return day of the summons (now the interpleader notice), it was held that the bailiff was not entitled to possession fees after the date of the deposit since, having taken the amount deposited, which he had no right to do except on the assumption that it represented the amount of the value of the goods, he ought to have withdrawn from possession and could not afterwards be heard to say that it did not represent the value⁵.

1634. Effect of deposit on second execution.

Where an amount equal to the value of the goods is paid into court¹, and the district judge² thereupon withdraws from possession, the goods may be seized again by another execution creditor. In such a case the remedy of the original execution creditor is against the money in court and not against the goods³. Where the amount deposited as the value of the goods is less than the amount of the judgment debt, and the amount in court is paid out to the execution creditor on the interpleader claimant's failing to establish his claim, the execution creditor is not entitled to the amount deposited as value of the goods a second time by the same claimant on a second execution upon the same judgment being levied by the execution creditor, since he has elected to accept the money deposited in the first instance in lieu of the goods⁴.

The question as to what the result would have been if the judgment creditor had seized the goods the second time on another judgment was left open. 1635. Sale by order of the court.

In addition to the bailiff's power of sale already noted¹, where a claimant alleges that he is entitled to the goods under a bill of sale or otherwise by way of security for a debt, the judge may order the goods or any part of them to be sold, and may direct the proceeds of sale to be applied in such manner as may be just².

A district judge cannot be compelled to interplead so as to give the execution creditor the right to invoke this power, even where the value of the goods exceeds the sum secured by it³; but the judge may exercise the jurisdiction, notwithstanding that the district judge has withdrawn, if satisfied that the execution creditor has not had an opportunity of disputing the value of the goods as against the claimant⁴.

1636. Issue of interpleader proceedings by district judge.

Where the execution creditor gives notice¹ disputing an interpleader claim², or where he fails within the four day period to give notice to the district judge admitting or disputing the title of the interpleader claimant, or requesting the district judge to withdraw from possession³, the district judge, unless the interpleader claimant has withdrawn his claim, must issue an interpleader notice to the execution creditor and the interpleader claimant⁴. On the issue of such an interpleader notice, the court officer⁵ must enter the proceedings in the records of the court, fix a day for the hearing by the judge and prepare sufficient copies of the notice for service⁶. The notice must be served on the execution creditor and the interpleader claimant⁷ and must be effected not less than 14 days before the return day⁸.

Upon the issue of the notice any claim brought in any county court, or other court, in respect of the interpleader claim or of any damage arising out of the execution of the warrant must be stayed⁹. The stay is limited to the persons who would be parties to the interpleader notice¹⁰.

10 Thus in Hills v Renny (1880) 5 ExD 313, CA, it was held that the provision did not apply to proceedings against purchasers who had bought under a sale by the bailiff which had occurred before the action. It was not argued in this case that there was a discretionary power to order a stay under the inherent jurisdiction of the court. As to the protection of purchasers of goods taken in execution see the County Courts Act 1984 s 98(1) (repealed, as from a day to be appointed, by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 ss 62(3), 146, Sch 13 paras 68, 74, Sch 23 Pt 3); and cf Curtis v Maloney [1951] 1 KB 736, [1950] 2 All ER 982, CA; Dyal Singh v Kenyon Insurance Ltd [1954] AC 287, [1954] 1 All ER 847, PC.

1637. Particulars of the interpleader claim.

The interpleader claim should state the grounds of the claim or, in the case of a claim for rent, particulars stating (1) the amount of rent claimed to be in arrear; (2) the period in respect of which the rent is due¹ and, in every case, the interpleader claimant's full name and address². If damages are claimed, the amount and the grounds of the claim must also be stated³.

Particulars which merely state that the goods claimed are the property of the claimant without giving the grounds of the claim are insufficient⁴, but particulars giving the date of and parties to an assignment under which the claim is made are a sufficient compliance with the rule⁵. The goods claimed need not be specifically set out⁶ and slight errors in the particulars will not invalidate their sufficiency⁷. Where the particulars are insufficient or not delivered in time the judge should either amend them or order new interpleader proceedings to be issued as he is bound to adjudicate upon the claim on the merits⁸. Where he erroneously decides that the particulars are insufficient and orders the claimant to pay the costs, the High Court may order him to adjudicate upon the claim but has no jurisdiction to reverse the order as to costs⁹.

On receipt of the claim, the district judge must send notice of the claim to the execution creditor¹⁰ and, except where the claim is to the proceeds or value of the goods, send to the claimant a notice requiring him to make a deposit or give security¹¹.

1638. Claim for damages.

Where, in interpleader proceedings under an execution, the interpleader claimant¹ claims damages from the district judge or from the execution creditor, or the execution creditor wishes to make a claim against the district judge for damages arising or capable of arising out of the execution, (1) the party claiming damages must, within eight days after service of the interpleader notice on him, give notice of his claim to the district judge and to any other party against whom the claim is made, stating the amount and the grounds of the claim; and (2) the party from whom damages are claimed may pay money into court in satisfaction of the claim as if the interpleader proceedings were a claim brought in accordance with Part 7 of the Civil Procedure Rules² by the person making the claim³.

A party entitled to damages which could have been made the subject of a claim in interpleader proceedings under these provisions cannot claim damages by a subsequent claim brought after the interpleader proceedings have been determined⁴.

Where goods are sold by the district judge or any officer charged with the enforcement of a warrant or other process of execution issued from a county court, which goods at the time of seizure were in the possession of the judgment debtor, without any claims being made to them, then damages will not be recoverable against the district judge or any person acting under his authority, unless it can be proved that notice had been given, or that it might by making reasonable inquiry have been ascertained, that the goods were not the property of the execution debtor⁵. The right of any claimant, who may prove that at the time of the sale he had a title to any goods so seized and sold, to any remedy to which he may be entitled against any person other than the district judge or other authorised officer, is not affected⁶.

A sale by public auction is not conclusive evidence of an allegation by the interpleader claimant that the goods have been sold at a gross undervalue⁷.

C. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION FOR AN INTERPLEADER OTHERWISE THAN UNDER EXECUTION

1639. Application for relief.

Where the applicant for interpleader relief is a stakeholder¹ he must make application to the court in which the relevant claim² is pending against him or, if no claim is pending against him, in the court in which he might be sued³ by filing⁴ a witness statement or affidavit⁵ showing that he claims no interest in the subject matter in dispute other than for charges or costs⁶, that he does not collude with any of the interpleader claimants⁷, and that he is willing to pay or transfer the subject matter into court or dispose of it as the court may direct⁸. He must also file as many copies of the witness statement or affidavit as there are interpleader claimants⁹.

Where the applicant seeks relief in a pending claim in which he is a defendant¹⁰, the witness statement or affidavit and the required copies must be filed within 14 days after service on him of the claim form¹¹.

1 The distinction between different applications for interpleader relief is set out in CPR Sch 1 RSC Ord 17 r 1, where it is stated that interpleaders may be divided into two types. The first is where a sheriff seizes or intends to seize goods by way of execution and such goods are claimed by a person other than the judgment debtor; this is analogous to the application for interpleader relief in the county court under an execution. The second type comprises all other interpleader proceedings, which are generally known as stakeholder's interpleaders. See PARA 1585. For the purposes of CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 Pt II (rr 6-11) (see the text and notes 2-11; and PARA 1640 et seq), the applicant is a person under a liability in respect of a debt or any money or goods who is, or expects to be, sued for or in respect of the debt, money or goods by two or more persons making adverse claims to them (the 'interpleader claimants'): see CPR Sch 2 CCR Ord 33 r 6(1).

MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(7) INTERPLEADER/(iii) Interpleader in County Courts/C. PROCEDURE ON APPLICATION FOR AN INTERPLEADER OTHERWISE THAN UNDER EXECUTION/1640. Relief in pending claim and otherwise.

1640. Relief in pending claim and otherwise.

On the filing of the applicant's witness statement or affidavit and the required copies¹, the procedure to be adopted depends on whether or not the applicant is a defendant² in proceedings already commenced.

Where the applicant is a defendant in a pending claim:

- 1210 (1) the return day of the application must be a day fixed for the pre-trial review of the claim including the interpleader proceedings and, if a day has already been fixed for the pre-trial review or hearing of the claim, the court must, if necessary, postpone it³;
- 1211 (2) the interpleader claimant⁴, the applicant, and the claimant in the claim must be given notice of the application, prepared by the court together with sufficient copies for service⁵;
- 1212 (3) the notice to the interpleader claimant must be served on him together with a copy of the applicant's witness statement or affidavit⁶ and of the claim form and particulars of claim in the claim⁷, not less than 21 days before the return day in the same manner as an interpleader notice issued on a district judge's application⁸;
- 1213 (4) the notices to the applicant and the claimant must be sent to them by the court and the notice to the claimant must be accompanied by a copy of the applicant's witness statement or affidavit⁹.

Where the applicant is not a defendant in a pending claim, the court must enter the proceedings in the records of the court¹⁰ and fix a day for a pre-trial review, or if the court so directs, a day for the hearing of the proceedings, and must prepare and issue an interpleader notice, together with sufficient copies for service¹¹. The notice, together with a copy of the witness statement or affidavit¹², must be served on each of the claimants not less than one day before the return day in the same manner as an interpleader notice issued on a district judge's application¹³. The court must deliver or send a notice of issue to the applicant¹⁴.

Before or after the court officer¹⁵ proceeds, the district judge may direct the applicant to bring the subject matter of the proceedings into court, or to dispose of it in such manner as the district judge thinks fit, to abide the order of the court¹⁶.

D. HEARING OF INTERPLEADER PROCEEDINGS

1642. Adjudication of claim on district judge's application.

On the hearing of interpleader proceedings on the district judge's application, the judge must adjudicate upon the interpleader claim and must also adjudicate between the parties or between either of them and the district judge¹ upon any claim to damages arising or capable of arising out of the execution of the warrant by the district judge. The judge makes such order in respect of any such claim and the costs of the proceedings as he thinks fit².

Damages ought to be awarded against the district judge where the interpleader claimant can prove substantial loss or injury³, although if a claim for damages is not made during the proceedings it cannot be made afterwards⁴.

1643. Adjudication of claims in an application for interpleader relief otherwise than under execution.

When the application for interpleader proceeds either in¹, or otherwise than in², a pending claim, then where the interpleader claimant³ does not appear at the pre-trial review or at the hearing of the interpleader proceedings, or fails or refuses to comply with an order made in the proceedings, the court may make an order barring his interpleader claim⁴.

If the applicant is a defendant⁵ in a pending claim⁶, and the claimant fails to appear at the pre-trial review or the hearing of the interpleader proceedings, the claim, including the interpleader proceedings, may be struck out⁷.

In any other case, where a day is fixed for the hearing of the interpleader proceedings, the court must hear and determine the proceedings and give judgment finally determining the rights and claims of the parties⁸.

Where the court makes an order barring the interpleader claim of an interpleader claimant, the order must declare the interpleader claimant, and all persons claiming under him, forever barred from prosecuting his interpleader claim against the applicant and all persons claiming under him⁹. Such an order will not, however, affect the rights of the interpleader claimants as between themselves except where a claimant has filed a notice¹⁰ that he makes no interpleader claim¹¹.

1644. Adjudication of claim in proceedings transferred from the High Court.

Where interpleader proceedings are ordered to be transferred from the High Court to the county court under an execution¹, a special procedure applies².

Notice of the hearing or pre-trial review of the proceedings must be given by the court officer³ to the sheriff⁴, as well as to every other party to the proceedings⁵. Within eight days of receipt of that notice, the interpleader claimant must file in triplicate particulars of any goods alleged to be his property and the grounds of his interpleader claim⁶. The court officer must send a copy of these particulars to the execution creditor and to the sheriff. The judge may hear the proceedings or the district judge may proceed with the pre-trial review, if he thinks fit, notwithstanding that the particulars have not been filed⁷.

On any day fixed for the pre-trial review of the proceedings, or for the hearing of any application by the sheriff or other party for directions, the court may order the sheriff (1) to postpone the sale of the goods seized; or (2) to remain in possession of such goods until the hearing of the proceedings; or (3) to hand over possession of such goods to the district judge⁸. Where a direction is given under head (3) above, the district judge will be allowed his reasonable charges for keeping possession of the goods, not exceeding those charges which might be allowed to the sheriff, and, if the district judge is directed to sell the goods, such charges for the sale as would be allowed under an execution issued by the county court⁹.

No order made in the interpleader proceedings transferred from the High Court will prejudice or affect the rights of the sheriff to any proper charges and the judge may make such order with respect to those charges as may be just¹⁰.

The order made at the hearing of the proceedings will direct how any money in the hands of the sheriff is to be disposed of¹¹.

Subject to any directions in the order of the High Court, damages may be claimed against the execution creditor in the same manner as in interpleader proceedings commenced in a county court¹².

In general costs in interpleader proceedings in a county court are in the discretion of the judge¹. (8) EUROPEAN ORDER FOR PAYMENT PROCEDURE

1647. In general.

Section I of Part 78 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹ applies to applications for European orders for payment² and other related proceedings under the EOP Regulation³ creating a European order for payment procedure⁴. The EOP Regulation requires that the European order for payment procedure be established for the collection of pecuniary claims for a specific amount that have fallen due at the time when the application for a European order for payment is submitted⁵. The EOP Regulation applies to civil and commercial matters in cross-border cases⁶, whatever the nature of the court or tribunal⁷. It does not extend, in particular, to revenue, customs or administrative matters or the liability of the state for acts and omissions in the exercise of state authority ('acta jure imperii')⁸. It does not apply to (1) rights in property arising out of a matrimonial relationship, wills and succession; (2) bankruptcy, proceedings relating to the winding-up of insolvent companies or other legal persons, judicial arrangements, compositions and analogous proceedings; (3) social security; (4) claims arising from non-contractual obligations, unless they have been the subject of an agreement between the parties or there has been an admission of debt or they relate to liquidated debts arising from joint ownership of property⁹.

³ I.e. European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) creating a European order for payment procedure: CPR 78.2(2)(a). The purpose of the regulation is (1) to simplify, speed up and reduce the costs of litigation in cross-border cases concerning uncontested pecuniary claims by creating a European order for payment procedure; and (2) to permit the free circulation of European orders for payment throughout the member states by laying down minimum standards, compliance with which renders unnecessary any intermediate proceedings in the member state of enforcement prior to recognition and enforcement: see art 1(1). The regulation does not prevent a claimant from pursuing a claim within the meaning of art 4 (see the text to note 5) by making use of another procedure available under the law of a member state or under Community law: art 1(2). The term 'member state' means member states of the European Union with the exception of Denmark: art 2(3); CPR 78.2(2)(g).

judgments in civil and commercial matters, arts 59, 60 (see CONFLICT OF LAWS): European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 3(2). The relevant moment for determining whether there is a cross-border case is the time when the application for a European order for payment is submitted in accordance with European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11): art 3(3).

7 European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 2(1). 'Court' means any authority in a member state with competence regarding European orders for payment or any other related matters: European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 5(3). For the purposes of applying that regulation, jurisdiction is to be determined in accordance with the relevant rules of Community law, in particular EC Council Regulation 44/2001 (OJ L12, 16.1.2001, p 1): European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 6(1). However, if the claim relates to a contract concluded by a person, the consumer, for a purpose which can be regarded as being outside his trade or profession, and if the defendant is the consumer, only the court in the member state in which the defendant is domiciled, within the meaning of EC Council Regulation 44/2001 (OJ L12, 16.1.2001, p 1) art 59, has jurisdiction: European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 6(2).

NOTE 5--The county court has jurisdiction in relation to the EOP Regulation: High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 2(1)(q) (added by SI 2008/2934).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(8) EUROPEAN ORDER FOR PAYMENT PROCEDURE/1648. Application for a European order for payment; defendant's response.

1648. Application for a European order for payment; defendant's response.

An application for a European order for payment¹ must be made using the specified standard form². The application must state:

- 1214 (1) the names and addresses of the parties, and, where applicable, their representatives, and of the court to which the application is made;
- 1215 (2) the amount of the claim, including the principal and, where applicable, interest, contractual penalties and costs;
- 1216 (3) if interest on the claim is demanded, the interest rate and the period of time for which that interest is demanded unless statutory interest is automatically added to the principal under the law of the member state of origin;
- 1217 (4) the cause of the action, including a description of the circumstances invoked as the basis of the claim and, where applicable, of the interest demanded;
- 1218 (5) a description of evidence supporting the claim;
- 1219 (6) the grounds for jurisdiction; and
- 1220 (7) the cross-border nature of the case³.

In the application, the claimant must declare that the information provided is true to the best of his knowledge and belief and must acknowledge that any deliberate false statement could lead to appropriate penalties under the law of the member state of origin⁴.

The defendant may lodge a statement of opposition to the European order for payment with the court of origin using the standard form⁵, which must be supplied to him together with the European order for payment⁶. The statement of opposition must be sent within 30 days of service of the order on the defendant⁷. The defendant must indicate in the statement of opposition that he contests the claim, without having to specify the reasons for this⁸. At any stage before a statement of opposition⁹ is filed, the claimant may notify the court¹⁰ that the claimant no longer wishes to proceed with the claim¹¹. Where the claimant so notifies the court, the court will notify the defendant that the application has been withdrawn and no order as to costs will be made¹².

Representation by a lawyer or another legal professional is not mandatory for the claimant in respect of the application for a European order for payment or for the defendant in respect of the statement of opposition to a European order for payment¹³.

The claimant may indicate¹⁴ to the court that he opposes a transfer to ordinary civil proceedings¹⁵ in the event of opposition by the defendant. This does not prevent the claimant from informing the court thereof subsequently, but in any event before the order is issued¹⁶. Where a statement of opposition is filed and the claimant has not opposed the transfer of the matter, the EOP application will be treated as if it had been started as a claim under Part 7 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹⁷ and the EOP application form A will be treated as a Part 7 claim form including particulars of claim, and thereafter, the Civil Procedure Rules apply with necessary modifications¹⁸. When the court notifies the claimant of the transfer to ordinary civil proceedings¹⁹ the court will also (a) notify the claimant (i) that the EOP application form A is now treated as a Part 7 claim form including particulars of claim; and (ii) of the time within which the defendant must respond²⁰; and (b) notify the defendant (i) that a statement of opposition has been received; (ii) that the application will not continue under Part 78 of the Civil Procedure Rules; (iii) that the application has been transferred²¹; (iv) that the EOP application form A is now treated as a Part 7 claim form including particulars of claim; and (v) of the time within which the defendant must respond²².

The defendant must file a defence within 30 days of the date of the notice issued by the court²³ as above²⁴. If the defendant wishes to dispute the court's jurisdiction, the defendant must instead file an acknowledgment of service²⁵ within the period specified above and make an application disputing the court's jurisdiction²⁶ within the period specified²⁷ for such an application²⁸.

If the defendant fails to file an acknowledgment of service within the period specified and does not within that period file a defence²⁹ or file an admission³⁰, the claimant may obtain default judgment if Part 12 of the Civil Procedure Rules³¹ allows it³².

After the expiry of the time limit for sending a statement of opposition³³, the defendant is entitled to apply for a review of the European order for payment before the competent court in the member state of origin where either the order for payment was served by one of the methods provided for³⁴ and service was not effected in sufficient time to enable him to arrange for his defence, without any fault on his part, or the defendant was prevented from objecting to the claim by reason of force majeure or due to extraordinary circumstances without any fault on his part, provided in either case that he acts promptly³⁵. After expiry of the time limit for sending a statement of opposition the defendant is also entitled to apply for a review of the European order for payment before the competent court in the member state of origin where the order for payment was clearly wrongly issued, having regard to the requirements laid down in the EOP Regulation, or due to other exceptional circumstances³⁶. If the court rejects the defendant's application on the basis that none of the grounds for review referred to above applies, the European order for payment will remain in force³⁷. If the court decides that the review is justified for one of the reasons laid down above, the European order for payment will be null and void³⁸.

The combined court fees³⁹ of a European order for payment procedure and of the ordinary civil proceedings that ensue in the event of a statement of opposition to a European order for payment in a member state must not exceed the court fees of ordinary civil proceedings without a preceding European order for payment procedure in that member state⁴⁰.

1649. Making of a European order for payment.

The court seised of an application for a European order for payment¹ must examine, as soon as possible and on the basis of the application form, whether the requirements² are met and whether the claim appears to be founded³. If the requirements as to the application⁴ are not met and unless the claim is clearly unfounded or the application is inadmissible, the court must give the claimant the opportunity to complete or rectify the application, using the standard form⁵. Where the court requests the claimant to complete or rectify the application, it must specify a time limit it deems appropriate in the circumstances; the court may at its discretion extend that time limit⁶.

If the requirements referred to above are met for only part of the claim, the court must inform the claimant to that effect, using the standard form⁷. The claimant must be invited to accept or refuse a proposal for a European order for payment for the amount specified by the court and must be informed of the consequences of his decision⁸. The claimant must reply by returning the standard form sent by the court within a time limit specified⁹ by the court¹⁰. If the claimant accepts the court's proposal, the court must issue a European order for payment¹¹ for that part of the claim accepted by the claimant¹². The consequences with respect to the remaining part of the initial claim are governed by national law¹³. If the claimant fails to send his reply within the time limit specified by the court or refuses the court's proposal, the court must reject the application for a European order for payment in its entirety¹⁴.

The court must reject the application if (1) the requirements¹⁵ are not met; or (2) the claim is clearly unfounded; or (3) the claimant fails to send his reply within the time limit specified by the court¹⁶; or (4) the claimant fails to send his reply within the time limit specified by the court or refuses the court's proposal¹⁷ for an order¹⁸. The claimant must be informed of the grounds for the rejection by means of the standard form¹⁹. There is no right of appeal against the rejection of the application²⁰. The rejection of the application does not prevent the claimant from pursuing the claim by means of a new application for a European order for payment or of any other procedure available under the law of a member state²¹.

If the requirements are met, the court must issue, as soon as possible and normally within 30 days of the lodging of the application, a European order for payment using the standard form²². The European order for payment must be issued together with a copy of the application form²³. In the European order for payment, the defendant must be advised of his options to (a) pay the amount indicated in the order to the claimant; or (b) oppose the order by lodging with the court of origin a statement of opposition, to be sent within 30 days of service of the order on him²⁴. In the European order for payment, the defendant must also be informed that (i) the order was issued solely on the basis of the information which was provided by the claimant and was not verified by the court; (ii) the order will become enforceable unless a statement of opposition has been lodged with the court²⁵; (iii) where a statement of opposition is lodged, the proceedings will continue before the competent courts of the member state of origin²⁶ in accordance with the rules of ordinary civil procedure unless the claimant has explicitly requested that the proceedings be terminated in that event²⁷. The court must ensure that the order is served on the defendant in accordance with national law by a method that meets the prescribed²⁸ minimum standards²⁹. The order must be served on the defendant or on a representative of the defendant, either with or without proof of receipt³⁰.

1650. Enforcement of a European order for payment.

If within the specified time limit¹, taking into account an appropriate period of time to allow a statement to arrive, no statement of opposition² has been lodged with the court of origin³, the court of origin must without delay declare the European order for payment⁴ enforceable using the standard form⁵. The court must verify the date of service⁶. Without prejudice to this, the formal requirements for enforceability are to be governed by the law of the member state of origin⁷, as are enforcement procedures⁸. The court must send the enforceable European order for payment to the claimant⁹. A European order for payment which has become enforceable in the member state of origin must be recognised and enforced in the other member states¹⁰ without the need for a declaration of enforceability and without any possibility of opposing its recognition¹¹.

A European order for payment which has become enforceable must be enforced under the same conditions as an enforceable decision issued in the member state of enforcement¹². For enforcement in another member state, the claimant must provide the competent enforcement authorities of that member state with (1) a copy of the European order for payment, as declared enforceable by the court of origin, which satisfies the conditions necessary to establish its authenticity; and (2) where necessary, a translation of the European order for payment into the official language of the member state of enforcement or, if there are several official languages in that member state, the official language or one of the official languages of court proceedings of the place where enforcement is sought, in conformity with the law of that member state, or into another language that the member state of enforcement has indicated it can accept¹³. The translation must be certified by a person qualified to do so in one of the member states¹⁴.

No security, bond or deposit, however described, may be required of a claimant who in one member state applies for enforcement of a European order for payment issued in another member state on the ground that he is a foreign national or that he is not domiciled or resident in the member state of enforcement¹⁵.

A person seeking to enforce an EOP¹⁶ in England and Wales must file¹⁷ at the court in which enforcement proceedings are to be brought the documents specified above¹⁸. Where a person applies to enforce an EOP expressed in a foreign currency, the application must contain a certificate of the sterling equivalent of the judgment sum at the close of business on the date nearest preceding the date of the application¹⁹.

Enforcement must, upon application by the defendant, be refused by the competent court in the member state of enforcement if the European order for payment is irreconcilable with an earlier decision or order previously given in any member state or in a third country, provided that (a) the earlier decision or order involved the same cause of action between the same parties; and (b) the earlier decision or order fulfils the conditions necessary for its recognition in the member state of enforcement; and (c) the irreconcilability could not have been raised as an objection in the court proceedings in the member state of origin²⁰. Enforcement must, upon application, also be refused if and to the extent that the defendant has paid the claimant the amount awarded in the European order for payment²¹. Under no circumstances may the European order for payment be reviewed as to its substance in the member state of enforcement²².

Where the defendant has applied for a review²³, the competent court in the member state of enforcement may, upon application by the defendant (i) limit the enforcement proceedings to protective measures; or (ii) make enforcement conditional on the provision of such security as it shall determine; or (iii) under exceptional circumstances, stay the enforcement proceedings²⁴.

The judgment debtor must, as soon as practicable, serve copies of any order made under European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 22 on (1) all other parties to the proceedings and any other person affected by the order (the 'affected persons'); and (2) any court in which enforcement proceedings of the EOP are pending in England and Wales (the 'relevant courts'); CPR 78.10(2). Where the defendant has sought a review and also applies for a stay of or limitation on enforcement in accordance with European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 23, such application must be made in accordance with CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq; and PARA 1648 note 35) to the court in which the EOP is being enforced: CPR 78.11(1). The defendant must, as soon as practicable, serve a copy of any order made under European Parliament and Council Regulation 1896/2006 (OJ L399, 30.12.2006, p 11) art 23 on (1) all other parties to the proceedings and any other person affected by the order; and (2) any court in which enforcement proceedings are pending in England and Wales, and the order will not have effect on any person until it has been served in accordance with this rule and they have received it: CPR 78.11(2). Unless the court orders otherwise, an application must be accompanied by evidence of the review application in the court of origin, including (a) the review application or a copy of the review application certified by an appropriate officer of the court of origin; and (b) where that document is not in English, a translation of it into English: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 9.1. The written evidence in support of the application must state (i) that a review application has been brought in the member state of origin; (ii) the nature of that review application; and (iii) the date on which the review application was filed, the stage the application has reached and the date by which it is believed that the application will be determined: para 9.2.

(9) EUROPEAN SMALL CLAIMS PROCEDURE

1651. European small claims procedure.

A European procedure for small claims (referred to in this and the following paragraphs as the 'European small claims procedure'), intended to simplify and speed up litigation concerning small claims in cross-border cases¹, and to reduce costs, has been established². The European small claims procedure is required to be available to litigants as an alternative to the procedures existing under the laws of the member states³. The procedure applies, in cross-border cases, to civil and commercial matters, whatever the nature of the court or tribunal, where the value of a claim does not exceed EUR 2,000 at the time when the claim form is received by the court or tribunal with jurisdiction, excluding all interest, expenses and disbursements⁴. It does not extend, in particular, to revenue, customs or administrative matters or to the liability of the state for acts and omissions in the exercise of state authority ('acta jure imperii')⁵. Nor does it apply to matters concerning (1) the status or legal capacity of natural persons; (2) rights in property arising out of a matrimonial relationship, maintenance obligations, wills and succession; (3) bankruptcy, proceedings relating to the winding-up of insolvent companies or other legal persons, judicial arrangements, compositions and analogous proceedings; (4) social security; (5) arbitration; (6) employment law; (7) tenancies of immovable property, with the exception of actions on monetary claims; or (8) violations of privacy and of rights relating to personality, including defamation⁶.

Section II of Part 78 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁷ makes provision for the European small claims procedure in England and Wales⁸. European small claims procedure ('ESCP') claims are treated as if they were allocated to the small claims track⁹.

1 For the purposes of European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) establishing a European small claims procedure, a cross-border case is one in which at least one of the parties is domiciled or habitually resident in a member state other than the member state of the court or tribunal seised: art 3(1). Domicile is to be determined in accordance with EC Council Regulation 44/2001 (OJ L12, 16.1.2001, p 1) arts 59, 60 (see CONFLICT OF LAWS): European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 3(2). The relevant moment for determining whether there is a cross-border case is the date on which the claim form is received by the court or tribunal with jurisdiction: art 3(3). 'Member state' means member states of the European Union with the exception of Denmark: art 2(3); CPR 78.12(2)(g).

2 See European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 1(1). The regulation also eliminates the intermediate proceedings necessary to enable recognition and enforcement, in other member states, of judgments given in one member state in the European small claims procedure: art 1(1). Subject to the provisions of the regulation, the European small claims procedure is to be governed by the procedural law of the member state in which the procedure is conducted: art 19.

7 Ie CPR 78.12-78.22, in force from 1 January 2009: see the Civil Procedure (Amendment) Rules 2008, SI 2008/2178, r 1(3)(b).

8 CPR 78.1(2), 78.12(1). Claims under the ESCP are primarily governed by the ESCP Regulation. Where the ESCP Regulation is silent, the Civil Procedure Rules apply with necessary modifications. In particular, CPR Pt 52 (see PARA 1657 et seq) applies to any appeals: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 10. Where the ESCP Regulation is silent on service, the Service Regulation and the Civil Procedure Rules apply as appropriate: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 15. 'ESCP' means the European small claims procedure established by the ESCP Regulation (European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1)): CPR 78.12(2)(a), (c). The 'Service Regulation' means EC Parliament and Council Regulation 1393/2007 (OJ L324, 10.12.2007, p 79) on service (see PARA 157 et seq): CPR 78.1(3)(b).

9 CPR 78.14(1). As to the small claims track see PARA 274 et seq. CPR Pt 27 applies, except CPR 27.14 (special rules about costs in cases allocated to the small claims track: see PARA 285): CPR 78.14(2). CPR 26.6(1) (scope of the small claims track: see PARA 37) is also disapplied because the ESCP Regulation art 2(1) has a different financial limit: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 13.2.

1651 European small claims procedure

NOTES 8, 9--The county court has jurisdiction in relation to the ESCP Regulation: High Court and County Courts Jurisdiction Order 1991, SI 1991/724, art 2(1)(r) (added by SI 2008/2934).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/24. MISCELLANEOUS PROCEEDINGS/(9) EUROPEAN SMALL CLAIMS PROCEDURE/1652. Commencement and conduct of the procedure.

1652. Commencement and conduct of the procedure.

The claimant must commence the European small claims procedure¹ by filling in the standard claim form², and lodging it with the court or tribunal with jurisdiction directly, by post or by any other means of communication, such as fax or e-mail, acceptable to the member state³ in which the procedure is commenced⁴. The claim form must include a description of evidence supporting the claim and be accompanied, where appropriate, by any relevant supporting documents⁵.

Where a claim is outside the scope of the procedure⁶, the court or tribunal must inform the claimant to that effect⁷. Unless the claimant withdraws the claim, the court or tribunal must proceed with it in accordance with the relevant procedural law applicable in the member state in which the procedure is conducted⁸. Where the court or tribunal considers the information provided by the claimant to be inadequate or insufficiently clear or if the claim form is not filled in properly, it must, unless the claim appears to be clearly unfounded or the application inadmissible, give the claimant the opportunity to complete or rectify the claim form or to supply supplementary information or documents or to withdraw the claim, within such period as it specifies⁹. Where the claim appears to be clearly unfounded or the application inadmissible or where the claimant fails to complete or rectify the claim form within the time specified, the application must be dismissed¹⁰.

After receiving the properly filled in claim form, the court or tribunal must fill in Part I of the standard answer form¹¹. A copy of the claim form, and, where applicable, of the supporting documents, together with the answer form thus filled in, must be served on the defendant¹². These documents must be dispatched within 14 days of receiving the properly filled in claim form¹³.

The defendant must submit his response within 30 days of service of the claim form and answer form, by filling in Part II of the standard answer form¹⁴, accompanied, where appropriate, by any relevant supporting documents, and returning it to the court or tribunal, or in any other appropriate way not using the answer form¹⁵. Within 14 days of receipt of the response from the defendant, the court or tribunal must dispatch a copy of it, together with any relevant supporting documents to the claimant¹⁶. If, in his response, the defendant claims that the value of a non-monetary claim exceeds the limit for claims under the procedure¹⁷, the court or tribunal must decide within 30 days of dispatching the response to the claimant, whether the claim is within the scope of the for the European small claims procedure¹⁸. Such decision may not be contested separately¹⁹.

Any counterclaim to be submitted on the appropriate form²⁰ and any relevant supporting documents must be served on the claimant²¹. Those documents must be dispatched within 14 days of receipt, and the claimant must have 30 days from service to respond to any counterclaim²². If the counterclaim exceeds the limit for the European small claims, the claim and counterclaim may not proceed in the European small claims procedure but must be dealt with in accordance with the relevant procedural law applicable in the member state in which the procedure is conducted²³.

The claim form, the response, any counterclaim, any response to a counterclaim and any description of relevant supporting documents must be submitted in the language or one of the languages of the court or tribunal²⁴. If any other document received by the court or tribunal is not in the language in which the proceedings are conducted, the court or tribunal may require a translation of that document only if the translation appears to be necessary for giving the judgment²⁵. Where a party has refused to accept a document because it is not in either of the following languages: (1) the official language of the member state addressed, or, if there are several official languages in that member state, the official language or one of the official languages of the place where service is to be effected or to where the document is to be dispatched; or (2) a language which the addressee understands, the court or tribunal must so inform the other party with a view to that party providing a translation of the document²⁶.

1 As to the European small claims procedure see PARA 1651.

2 The standard claim Form A, as set out in European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) Annex I. Member states must ensure that the claim form is available at all courts and tribunals at which the European small claims procedure can be commenced: art 4(5).

3 As to the meaning of 'member state' see PARA 1651 note 1.

4 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 4(1). Member states must inform the Commission which means of communication are acceptable to them. The Commission must make such information publicly available: art 4(2). In England and Wales, an ESCP claim form must be filed at court in person or by post: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 11. Where a declaration provided by the claimant in the ESCP claim form contains any deliberate false statement, CPR 32.14 (see PARA 988) applies as if the ESCP claim form were verified by a statement of truth: CPR 78.13. 'ESCP claim form' means the claim form completed and filed in the ESCP: CPR 78.12(2)(d).

6 As to the scope of the procedure see PARA 1651.

7 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 4(3). Where the court identifies that the claim is outside the scope of the ESCP Regulation (ie European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1)), the court will notify the claimant of this in a transfer of proceedings notice: CPR 78.15(1). If the claimant wishes to withdraw the claim, the claimant must notify the court of this within 21 days of the date of the transfer of proceedings notice (CPR 78.15(2)) and where the claimant has so notified the court, the claim is automatically withdrawn (CPR 78.15(3)). Where the claimant has not notified the court that he wishes to withdraw the claim and the claim is instead to be transferred under the ESCP Regulation art 4(3), (1) the claim will be treated as if it had been started as a claim under CPR Pt 7 (see PARA 116 et seq) and the ESCP claim form will be treated as a Part 7 claim form including particulars of claim; and (2) thereafter, the Civil Procedure Rules apply with necessary modifications, and subject to CPR 78.15, and the court will notify the claimant of the transfer and its effect: CPR 78.15(4).

8 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 4(3).

9 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 4(4). The court or tribunal must use standard Form B, as set out in Annex II, for this purpose: art 4(4). The time specified for the purposes of art 4(4) is within 30 days of the date of the request by the court to complete or rectify the claim form (using Form B annexed to the ESCP Regulation): Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 12.2.

11 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 5(2). The form is standard answer Form C, as set out in Annex III: art 5(2).

12 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 5(2). Service must be in accordance with art 13: art 5(2). Documents must be served by postal service attested by an acknowledgment of receipt including the date of receipt: art 13(1). If service in accordance with art 13(1) is not possible, service may be effected by any of the methods provided for in EC Regulation 805/2004 (OJ L143, 30.4.2004, p 15) creating a European Enforcement Order for uncontested claims, art 13 or 14: European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 13(2).

15 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 5(3). Documents other than the ESCP claim form that are filed at or sent to the court in the ESCP proceedings, including the defendant's response, may be filed, in addition to by post or in person, by fax or other electronic means where the facilities are available: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 14. Where a declaration provided by the defendant in the defendant's response contains any deliberate false statement, CPR 32.14 (see PARA 988) applies as if the defendant's response were verified by a statement of truth: CPR 78.16. 'Defendant's response' means the response to the ESCP claim form: CPR 78.12(2)(b).

17 Ie the limit set out in European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 2(1): see PARA 1651.

18 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 5(5). Where, under art 5(5), the defendant claims that the value of a non-monetary claim exceeds the limit in art 2(1), then when the court dispatches the defendant's response to the claimant, it will (1) notify the claimant that the court is considering whether the claim is outside the scope of the ESCP Regulation in a consideration of transfer notice; and (2) send a copy of the notice to the defendant: CPR 78.17(1), (2). If the claimant wishes to withdraw the claim in the event that the court decides that the claim is outside the scope of the ESCP Regulation the claimant must notify the court and the defendant of this within 21 days of the date of the consideration of transfer notice: CPR 78.17(3). The court will notify the defendant as well as the claimant of its decision whether the claim is outside the scope of the ESCP Regulation: CPR 78.17(4). If the court decides that the claim is outside the scope of the ESCP Regulation and the claimant has notified the court and defendant in accordance with CPR 78.17(3), the claim is automatically withdrawn: CPR 78.17(5). If the court decides that the claim is outside the scope of the ESCP Regulation and the claimant has not notified the court and defendant in accordance with CPR 78.17(3), (a) the claim will be treated as if it had been started as a claim under CPR Pt 7 and the ESCP claim form will be treated as a Part 7 claim form including particulars of claim; (b) the defendant's response will be treated as a defence; and (c) thereafter, the Civil Procedure Rules apply with necessary modifications and subject to CPR 78.17, and the court will notify the parties: CPR 78.17(6). CPR 78.17 applies to an ESCP counterclaim as if the counterclaim were an ESCP claim: CPR 78.17(7). 'ESCP counterclaim' has the meaning given to counterclaim by the ESCP Regulation recital (16), which provides that the concept of 'counterclaim' should be interpreted within the meaning of EC Regulation 44/2001 (OJ L12, 16.1.2001, p 1) on jurisdiction and the recognition and enforcement of judgments in civil and commercial matters, art 6(3) as arising from the same contract or facts on which the original claim was based. European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) arts 2 and 4 as well as art 5(3), (4) and (5) should apply, mutatis mutandis, to counterclaims: CPR 78.12(2)(e). Attention is also drawn to the ESCP Regulation art 5(7) first para (transfer of claim and counterclaim in certain circumstances: see the text and note 25): Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 16.2.

23 European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 5(7). Where the ESCP counterclaim exceeds the limit set in art 2(1), the court will notify the defendant of this in a transfer of proceedings notice and send a copy of the notice to the claimant, when the court dispatches the defendant's response to the claimant: CPR 78.18(1). If the defendant wishes to withdraw the ESCP counterclaim, the defendant must notify the court and the claimant of this within 21 days of the date of the transfer of proceedings notice: CPR 78.18(2). If the defendant so notifies the court and claimant, the ESCP counterclaim is automatically withdrawn: CPR 78.18(3). If the defendant does not notify the court and claimant, (1) the claim will be treated as if it had been started as a claim under CPR Pt 7 (see PARA 116 et seq) and the ESCP claim form will be treated as a Part 7 claim form including particulars of claim; (2) the defendant's response and ESCP counterclaim are to be treated as the defence and counterclaim; and (3) thereafter, the Civil Procedure Rules apply with necessary modifications and subject to CPR 78.18, and the court will notify the parties: CPR 78.18(4).

accompanied by a statement by the person making it that it is a correct translation. The statement must include that person's name, address and qualifications for making the translation: CPR 78.1(4).

1653. Hearing and evidence.

The European small claims procedure¹ is a written procedure, but the court or tribunal must hold an oral hearing if it considers this to be necessary or if a party so requests². The court or tribunal may refuse such a request if it considers that with regard to the circumstances of the case, an oral hearing is obviously not necessary for the fair conduct of the proceedings; the reasons for refusal must be given in writing and the refusal may not be contested separately³. The court or tribunal may hold an oral hearing through video conference or other communication technology if the technical means are available⁴.

The court or tribunal must determine the means of taking evidence and the extent of the evidence necessary for its judgment under the rules applicable to the admissibility of evidence; it may admit the taking of evidence through written statements of witnesses, experts or parties and it may also admit the taking of evidence through video conference or other communication technology if the technical means are available⁵. The court or tribunal may take expert evidence or oral testimony only if it is necessary for giving the judgment and in making its decision, the court or tribunal must take costs into account⁶. The court or tribunal must use the simplest and least burdensome method of taking evidence⁷.

Representation by a lawyer or another legal professional must not be mandatory⁸. The member states⁹ must ensure that the parties can receive practical assistance in filling in the forms¹⁰.

The court or tribunal must not require the parties to make any legal assessment of the claim¹¹. If necessary, the court or tribunal must inform the parties about procedural questions¹². Whenever appropriate, the court or tribunal must seek to reach a settlement between the parties¹³.

Where the court or tribunal sets a time limit, the party concerned must be informed of the consequences of not complying with it¹⁴. The court or tribunal may extend the time limits for specified steps¹⁵, in exceptional circumstances, if necessary in order to safeguard the rights of the parties¹⁶. If, in exceptional circumstances, it is not possible for the court or tribunal to respect the time limits provided for in serving documents and giving judgment or directions¹⁷, it must take the steps required by those provisions as soon as possible¹⁸.

1654. Conclusion of the procedure.

Within 30 days of receipt of the response from the defendant or the claimant within the specified time limits¹, the court or tribunal must give a judgment, or demand further details concerning the claim from the parties within a specified period of time, not exceeding 30 days, take evidence² or summon the parties to an oral hearing to be held within 30 days of the summons³.

The court or tribunal must give the judgment either within 30 days of any oral hearing or after having received all information necessary for giving the judgment⁴. The judgment must be served on the parties⁵. If the court or tribunal has not received an answer from the relevant party within the specified time limits⁶, it must give a judgment on the claim or counterclaim⁷.

The judgment is enforceable notwithstanding any possible appeal⁸. The provision of a security may not be required⁹. The procedure for stay or limitation of enforcement¹⁰ also applies in the event that the judgment is to be enforced in the member state¹¹ where the judgment was given¹².

The unsuccessful party must bear the costs of the proceedings; however, the court or tribunal must not award costs to the successful party to the extent that they were unnecessarily incurred or are disproportionate to the claim¹³.

1655. Appeal and review.

Member states¹ must inform the Commission whether an appeal is available under their procedural law against a judgment given in the European small claims procedure² and within what time limit such appeal must be lodged³. The Commission must make that information publicly available⁴. The unsuccessful party must bear the costs of the appeal; however, the court or tribunal must not award costs to the successful party to the extent that they were unnecessarily incurred or are disproportionate to the claim⁵.

The defendant is entitled to apply for a review of the judgment given in the European small claims procedure before the court or tribunal with jurisdiction of the member state where the judgment was given where (1) the claim form or the summons to an oral hearing was served by a method without proof of receipt by him personally⁶ and service was not effected in sufficient time to enable him to arrange for his defence without any fault on his part; or (2) the defendant was prevented from objecting to the claim by reason of force majeure, or due to extraordinary circumstances without any fault on his part, provided in either case that he acts promptly⁷. If the court or tribunal rejects the review on the basis that none of the grounds referred to above applies, the judgment will remain in force⁸. If the court or tribunal decides that the review is justified for one of the reasons laid down above, the judgment given in the European small claims procedure will be null and void⁹.

Where an application is made under CPR Pt 78 Section II there will not normally be an oral hearing: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 18.1. 1656. Recognition and enforcement in another member state.

A judgment given in a member state¹ in the European small claims procedure² must be recognised and enforced in another member state without the need for a declaration of enforceability and without any possibility of opposing its recognition³. At the request of one of the parties, the court or tribunal must issue a certificate concerning a judgment in the European small claims procedure using the standard form⁴, at no extra cost⁵.

Without prejudice to the provisions of the Community legislation⁶, the enforcement procedures are to be governed by the law of the member state of enforcement⁷. Any judgment given in the European small claims procedure must be enforced under the same conditions as a judgment given in the member state of enforcement⁸. The party seeking enforcement must produce (1) a copy of the judgment which satisfies the conditions necessary to establish its authenticity; and (2) a copy of the certificate concerning the judgment referred above and, where necessary, the translation of it into the official language of the member state of enforcement or, if there are several official languages in that member state, the official language or one of the official languages of court or tribunal proceedings of the place where enforcement is sought in conformity with the law of that member state, or into another language that the member state of enforcement has indicated it can accept⁹.

The party seeking the enforcement of a judgment given in the European small claims procedure in another member state must not be required to have an authorised representative, or a postal address, in the member state of enforcement, other than with agents having competence for the enforcement procedure¹⁰.

No security, bond or deposit, however described, may be required of a party who in one member state applies for enforcement of a judgment given in the European small claims procedure in another member state on the ground that he is a foreign national or that he is not domiciled or resident in the member state of enforcement¹¹.

Upon application by the person against whom enforcement is sought, enforcement may be refused by the court or tribunal with jurisdiction in the member state of enforcement if the judgment given in the European small claims procedure is irreconcilable with an earlier judgment given in any member state or in a third country, provided that (a) the earlier judgment involved the same cause of action and was between the same parties; (b) the earlier judgment was given in the member state of enforcement or fulfils the conditions necessary for its recognition in the member state of enforcement; and (c) the irreconcilability was not and could not have been raised as an objection in the court or tribunal proceedings in the member state where the judgment in the European small claims procedure was given¹². Under no circumstances may a judgment given in the European small claims procedure be reviewed as to its substance in the member state of enforcement¹³.

Where a party has challenged a judgment given in the European small claims procedure or where such a challenge is still possible, or where a party has made an application for review¹⁴, the court or tribunal with jurisdiction or the competent authority in the member state of enforcement may, upon application by the party against whom enforcement is sought (i) limit the enforcement proceedings to protective measures; (ii) make enforcement conditional on the provision of such security as it shall determine; or (iii) under exceptional circumstances, stay the enforcement proceedings¹⁵.

The judgment debtor must, as soon as practicable, serve copies of any order made under European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 22 on (1) all other parties to the proceedings and any other person affected by the order (the 'affected persons'); and (2) any court in which enforcement proceedings are pending in England and Wales (the 'relevant courts'): CPR 78.21(2). Upon service of the order on the affected persons, all enforcement proceedings of the ESCP judgment in the relevant courts will cease: CPR 78.21(4). An application must be accompanied by an official copy of the earlier judgment, any other documents relied upon and any translations required by the ESCP Regulation: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 para 20.1. The defendant must, as soon as practicable, serve a copy of any order made under European Parliament and Council Regulation 861/2007 (OJ L199, 31.7.2007, p 1) art 23 on (1) all other parties to the proceedings and any other person affected by the order; and (2) any court in which enforcement proceedings are pending in England and Wales, and the order will not have effect on any person until it has been served in accordance with these provisions and they have received it: CPR 78.22(2).

Where a defendant makes an application under the ESCP Regulation art 23 in circumstances where (a) an application for review has been made under art 18 ('review application'); or (b) the defendant has challenged the judgment, then unless the court orders otherwise, the application under art 23 must be accompanied by evidence of the review application or challenge in the member state of judgment. This must include a copy of the document initiating the review application or challenge or a copy of the review application or challenge, certified by an appropriate officer of the court in the member state of judgment: Practice Direction--European order for payment and European small claims procedures PD 78 paras 21.1, 21.2. 25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES

(1) GENERAL RULES

1657. Introduction.

An appeal is an application to a superior court or tribunal to reverse, vary or set aside the judgment, order, determination, decision or award of a lower court or tribunal in the hierarchy of courts or tribunals on the ground that it was wrongly made or that as a matter of justice or law it requires to be corrected¹. A right of appeal is conferred by statute or equivalent legislative authority; it is not a mere matter of practice or procedure, and neither the superior nor the lower court or tribunal nor both combined can create or take away such a right².

² See R v Sillem (1864) 10 HL Cas 704; National Telephone Co Ltd v HM Postmaster-General [1913] 2 KB 614, CA (affd [1913] AC 546, HL). If the statute creating the right of appeal does not provide a procedure for the appeal, it is the duty of the appellate tribunal to do so, so that the right may be effective and the appeal may be heard: Smith v Williams [1922] 1 KB 158. See, however, Hoser v Ministry of Housing and Local Government [1963] Ch 428, [1962] 3 All ER 945. The right of appeal may extend to hearing appeals on questions of law or questions of fact, as is the case on appeals from the High Court (see the Supreme Court Act 1981 ss 15, 16; and PARA 1702); or it may be excluded on a question of fact, as is the case on certain appeals from county courts (see the County Courts Act 1984 s 77; and PARA 1679). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. Under CPR Pt 52 (see PARA 1658 et seq) permission to appeal will be required from either the lower court or tribunal or from the Court of Appeal itself before the Court of Appeal will hear the appeal: see CPR 52.3, 52.13; and PARAS 1661, 1682.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(1) GENERAL RULES/1658. Routes of appeal.

1658. Routes of appeal.

The Lord Chancellor may by order provide¹ that appeals² which would otherwise lie to a county court, the High Court or the Court of Appeal are to lie instead to another of those courts, as specified in the order³.

Accordingly, provisions have been made⁴ applying to appeals⁵ to the county court⁶, the High Court⁷ and the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal⁸ in all cases in which a notice of appeal has been filed, or an application for permission to appeal has been made, on or after 2 May 2000⁹, with the exception of appeals in family proceedings¹⁰. Routes of appeal are also specified in a practice direction which supplements Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹¹.

Subject to what follows, an appeal lies to a judge of the High Court where the decision¹² to be appealed is made by a master or other person holding a specified office¹³, by a district judge of the High Court¹⁴ or by a person appointed to act as a deputy for any person holding such an office as is referred to above or to act as a temporary additional officer in any such office¹⁵.

In general¹⁶, an appeal lies from a decision of a county court to the High Court¹⁷; but where the decision to be appealed is made by a district judge or deputy district judge of a county court, an appeal lies to a judge of a county court¹⁸. Further, where the decision to be appealed is a final decision¹⁹ in a claim allocated to the multi-track²⁰, or is a final decision made in specialist proceedings²¹, an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal²².

Where an appeal is made to a county court or the High Court (other than from the decision of an officer of the court authorised to assess costs by the Lord Chancellor), and on hearing the appeal the court makes a decision, an appeal lies from that decision to the Court of Appeal and not to any other court²³.

These provisions are subject to any rule, enactment or practice direction which sets out special provisions with regard to any particular category of appeal²⁴. All parties to an appeal must comply with the relevant practice direction²⁵.

Appeal from the Court of Appeal lies to the House of Lords²⁶.

1 Before making such an order the Lord Chancellor must consult the Lord Chief Justice, the Master of the Rolls, the President of the Queen's Bench Division, the President of the Family Division and the Chancellor of the High Court: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 56(4) (amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 15(1), Sch 4 paras 279, 280(1), (2)). The Lord Chief Justice may nominate a judicial office holder (as defined in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 109(4)) to exercise his functions under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 56: s 56(8) (added by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 para 280(3)).

2 For these purposes an application to have a case stated for the opinion of the High Court constitutes an appeal: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 56(7).

Access to Justice Act 1999 s 56(1). Section 56 does not apply to an appeal in a criminal cause or matter: s 56(2). An order under s 56(1) may make different provision for different classes of proceedings or appeals, and may contain consequential amendments or repeals of enactments: s 56(3). Such order must be made by statutory instrument, but no such order may be made unless a draft of it has been laid before and approved by resolution of each House of Parliament: s 56(5), (6). In the exercise of this power, the Lord Chancellor has made the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071 (amended by SI 2003/490), which came into force on 2 May 2000: see art 1(1) (see the text and notes 4-23); and the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) (Family Proceedings) Order 2005, SI 2005/3276, which came into force on 30 December 2005: see art 1(1).

4 See note 3; and see also CPR Pt 52; Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52; the text and notes 5-25; and PARA 1659 et seq. See also Tanfern Ltd v Cameron-MacDonald (Practice Note) [2000] 1 WLR 1311, CA.

5 'Appeal' includes an appeal by way of case stated: CPR 52.1(3)(a).

6 CPR 52.1(1)(c).

7 CPR 52.1(1)(b).

8 CPR 52.1(1)(a).

9 See the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 6. However, CPR Pt 52 applies as of 2 October 2000 in respect of cases allocated to the small claims track: Civil Procedure (Amendment No 4) Rules 2000, SI 2000/2092, r 21. The former RSC Ords 55, 56, 58, 59, 60 and 61 (revoked subject to these transitional provisions) continued to govern appeals in respect of which a notice of appeal was filed, or an application for permission to appeal was made, prior to 2 May 2000: see the Civil Procedure (Amendment) Rules 2000, SI 2000/221, r 39 (substituted by SI 2000/940). In respect of the transitional provisions see Tanfern Ltd v Cameron-MacDonald (Practice Note) [2000] 1 WLR 1311, CA.

10 See the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 1(4)(a). For these purposes, 'family proceedings' means proceedings which are business of any description which in the High Court is for the time being assigned to the Family Division and to no other division by or under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 61, Sch 1 (see PARA 46): Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 1(2)(b) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by virtue of the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2), to substitute a reference to the Senior Courts Act 1981 for the reference to the Supreme Court Act 1981; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). The Civil Procedure Rules do not, in general, apply to such proceedings: see PARA 32. However, it is provided by Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 2.2 that for the purpose only of appeals to the Court of Appeal from cases in family proceedings, that practice direction applies with such modifications as may be required. Separate provision has now been made for the destination of appeals in cases involving adoption and related matters: see the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) (Family Proceedings) Order 2005, SI 2005/3276.

11 See Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 2A. Subject to paras 2A.2-2A.6 (see the text and notes 19, 23, 24), and subject to obtaining any necessary permission, appeal lies (1) from a decision of a district judge of a county court to a circuit judge; (2) from a master or district judge of the High Court to a High Court judge; (3) from a circuit judge to a High Court judge; and (4) from a High Court judge to the Court of Appeal: para 2.1, Tables 1-3.

12 'Decision' includes any judgment, order or direction of the High Court or a county court: Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 1(2)(a).

13 Is an office referred to in the Supreme Court Act 1981 ss 88, 89, Sch 2 Pt II (as substituted and amended): Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 2(a) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by virtue of the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2), to substitute a reference to the Senior Courts Act 1981 for the reference to the Supreme Court Act 1981; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). The specified offices are: master, Queen's Bench Division; Queen's Coroner and Attorney and Master of the Crown Office (now the Administrative Court) and Registrar of Criminal Appeals; Admiralty Registrar; master, Chancery Division; registrar in bankruptcy of the High Court; taxing master of the Senior Courts; district judge of the principal registry of the Family Division: Supreme Court Act 1981 Sch 2 Pt 2 (substituted by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 50(6), Sch 10 Pt 1 para 13(1), (3)). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

14 As to district judges see PARA 55.

15 Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 2.

16 Is subject to the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, arts 4, 5 and to art 3(2): see the text and notes 17-23.

18 Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 3(2).

19 'Final decision' means a decision of a court that would finally determine (subject to any possible appeal or detailed assessment of costs) the entire proceedings whichever way the court decided the issues before it: Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 1(2)(c). A decision of a court is to be treated as a final decision where it is made at the conclusion of part of a hearing or trial which has been split into parts and would, if made at the conclusion of that hearing or trial, be a final decision under art 1(2)(c): art 1(3). Identical provision is made by Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 2A.2, 2A.3.

20 As to allocation to the multi-track see PARAS 269, 293 et seq.

21 In proceedings under the Companies Act 1985 or the Companies Act 1989 or to which CPR Pt 57 Section I, II or III (probate claims, rectification of wills and substitution and removal of personal representatives: see EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS) or any of CPR Pts 58-63 apply: see PARAS 116, 1547.

22 Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 4 (amended by SI 2003/490). Note that claims where the Part 8 procedure is used are not included in these provisions, although they are treated as allocated to the multi-track by virtue of CPR 8.9(c) (see PARA 136). As to the Part 8 procedure see PARA 127 et seq.

23 Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 5. An order made on a summary or detailed assessment of costs or on an application to enforce a final decision is not a final decision and any appeal from such an order will follow the appeal routes set out in Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 2A.1, Tables 1-3 (see note 10): para 2A.4. See also CPR 52.1(2) (CPR Pt 52 does not apply to an appeal in detailed assessment proceedings against a decision of an authorised court officer). As to appeals in detailed assessment proceedings see CPR 47.21-47.23; and see The Civil Court Practice. As to costs generally see also PARA 1729 et seq.

24 See CPR 52.1(4). See El Du Pont de Nemours and Co v ST Dupont (2002) Times, 7 November (appeal under the Trade Marks Act 1938 was governed by special provisions of that Act); and Zissis v Lukomski [2006] EWCA Civ 341, [2006] 1 WLR 2778 (appeal under Party Wall etc Act 1996 s 10(17) governed by CPR Pt 52).

25 CPR 52.2. The relevant general practice direction is Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52, although certain practice directions dealing with specific types of proceedings may contain additional or alternative provisions relating to appeals.

26 See PARA 1717. As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed.

UPDATE

1658 Routes of appeal

NOTES 10, 13, 26--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(1) GENERAL RULES/1659. Power to impose requirement for permission to appeal.

1659. Power to impose requirement for permission to appeal.

Rules of court may provide that any right of appeal to a county court, the High Court¹, or the Court of Appeal², may be exercised only with permission³. For these purposes rules of court may make provision as to:

- 1221 (1) the classes of case in which a right of appeal may be exercised only with permission⁴;
- 1222 (2) the court or courts which may give permission for these purposes⁵;
- 1223 (3) any considerations to be taken into account in deciding whether permission should be given⁶; and
- 1224 (4) any requirements to be satisfied before permission may be given⁷, and may make different provision for different circumstances⁸.

No appeal may be made against a decision of a court under these provisions to give or refuse permission, but this does not affect any right under rules of court to make a further application for permission to the same or another court⁹.

² For these purposes a right of appeal to the Court of Appeal includes (1) the right to make an application for a new trial; and (2) the right to make an application to set aside a verdict, finding or judgment in any cause or matter in the High Court which has been tried, or in which any issue has been tried, by a jury: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(6). As to jury trial in civil cases see PARA 1132. As to the meaning of 'cause or matter' see PARA 44 note 1. However, the new civil procedure (see PARA 24 et seq) no longer employs this terminology: see PARA 18.

⁴ Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(3)(a). See CPR 52.3(1); and PARA 1660.

⁵ Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(3)(b). See CPR 52.3(2); and PARA 1660.

⁶ Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(3)(c). See CPR 52.3(6); and PARA 1660.

⁹ Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(4). See CPR 52.3(3); and PARA 1660. See R (on the application of Sivasubramaniam) v Wandsworth County Court, R (on the application of Sivasubramaniam) v Kingston upon Thames County Court [2002] EWCA Civ 1738, [2003] 1 WLR 475. The Court of Appeal has the power to revoke the grant of permission to appeal where the judge granting permission has been misled: Angel Airlines SA v Dean & Dean Solicitors [2006] EWCA Civ 1505, [2006] All ER (D) 280 (Oct). See R (on the application of Strickson) v Preston County Court [2007] EWCA Civ 1132, [2008] All ER (D) 269 (Feb) (judicial review of permission to appeal decision available only in exceptional circumstances).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(1) GENERAL RULES/1660. General procedure for permission to appeal.

1660. General procedure for permission to appeal.

An appellant¹ or respondent² requires permission to appeal:

- 1225 (1) where the appeal is from a decision of a judge³ in a county court or the High Court, except where the appeal is against a committal order⁴, a refusal to grant habeas corpus⁵ or a secure accommodation order⁶; or
- 1226 (2) as provided by the relevant practice direction⁷.

An application for permission to appeal may be made to the lower court at the hearing at which the decision to be appealed was made⁸ or to the appeal court in an appeal notice⁹. Where the lower court refuses an application for permission to appeal, a further application for permission to appeal may be made to the appeal court¹⁰.

Applications for permission may be considered by the appeal court without a hearing¹¹. Where the appeal court, without a hearing, refuses permission to appeal, the person seeking permission may request the decision to be reconsidered at an oral hearing¹². Such a request must be filed within seven days after service¹³ of the notice that permission has been refused¹⁴. There is no appeal from a decision of the appeal court to allow or refuse permission to appeal to that court (although where the appeal court, without a hearing, refuses permission to appeal, the person seeking permission may request that decision to be reconsidered at a hearing)¹⁵.

Permission to appeal may be given only where the court considers that the appeal would have a real prospect of success¹⁶ or there is some other compelling reason why the appeal should be heard¹⁷. An order giving permission may limit the issues to be heard¹⁸ and be made subject to conditions¹⁹.

Except as provided above, or otherwise provided by statute, the permission of the Court of Appeal, or, where the lower court's rules allow, of the lower court, is required for all appeals to the Court of Appeal²⁰. Where the lower court is not required to give permission to appeal, it may give an indication of its opinion as to whether permission should be given²¹.

1 For the purposes of CPR Pt 52 'appellant' means a person who brings or seeks to bring an appeal: CPR 52.1(3)(d). As to the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1658 note 5. A person who seeks to bring an appeal is an appellant notwithstanding that he did not seek to be a party to the proceedings: George Wimpey UK Ltd v Tewkesbury Borough Council (MA Holdings Ltd intervening) [2008] EWCA Civ 12, [2008] 3 All ER 859, [2008] 1 WLR 1649.

2 For the purposes of CPR Pt 52 'respondent' means a person other than the appellant who was a party to the proceedings in the lower court and who is affected by the appeal (CPR 52.1(3)(e)(i)); and a person who is permitted by the appeal court to be a party to the appeal (CPR 52.1(3)(e)(ii)). 'Lower court' means the court, tribunal or other person or body from whose decision an appeal is brought (CPR 52.1(3)(c)); and 'appeal court' means the court to which an appeal is made (CPR 52.1(3)(b)). As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 As to the meaning of 'judge' see PARA 49.

4 CPR 52.3(1)(a)(i). Permission is required to appeal against a decision not to commit: M v M (Breaches of Orders: Committal) [2005] EWCA Civ 1722, [2006] 1 FLR 1154, [2006] Fam Law 259. See also Wood v Collins [2006] EWCA Civ 743, [2006] All ER (D) 165 (May). As to committal for contempt see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 491 et seq.

5 CPR 52.3(1)(a)(ii). As to habeas corpus see PARA 1531; and ADMINISTRATIVE LAW vol 1(1) (2001 Reissue) PARA 207 et seq.

6 CPR 52.3(1)(a)(iii). The secure accommodation order referred to in the text is an order made under the Children Act 1989 s 25: see CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1037 et seq.

7 CPR 52.3(1)(b). See Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.2; and the text and note 20. Other enactments may provide that permission is required for particular appeals: see CPR 52.3(1).

8 CPR 52.3(2)(a). See, however, Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.6 which uses mandatory language (providing that an application for permission to appeal should, rather than may, be made orally at the hearing at which the decision to be appealed against is made). The lower court may not extend time for permission to appeal after the hearing at which the decision was made: Balmoral Group Ltd v Borealis (UK) Ltd [2006] EWHC 2998 (Comm), [2006] All ER (D) 135 (Aug). Applications for permission to appeal are not to be adjourned for the convenience of counsel: Bracknell Forest Borough v N (2006) Times, 6 November, CA. If there is any doubt as to the judge's reasons, counsel has a responsibility to ask the judge for clarification before filing a notice of appeal: Re A (a child) [2007] EWCA Civ 1058, [2007] Fam Law 113. Where no application for permission to appeal has been made in accordance with CPR 52.3(2)(a) but a party requests further time to make such an application, the court may adjourn the hearing to give that party the opportunity to do so: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.3B.

9 CPR 52.3(2)(b); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.7. For the purposes of CPR Pt 52 (see PARAS 1658, 1662 et seq) 'appeal notice' means an appellant's or respondent's notice: CPR 52.1(2)(f). As to the time limits for filing an appellant's notice at the appeal court see CPR 52.4; and PARA 1663; and as to the time limits for filing a respondent's notice at the appeal court see CPR 52.5; and PARA 1664. As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8.

Where the appellant seeks the appeal court's permission to appeal it must be requested in the appellant's notice: CPR 52.4(1); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.1; and see PARA 1663. Similarly, a respondent must file a respondent's notice for permission to appeal: see CPR 52.5(2); and PARA 1664. CPR 52.13(1) provides that permission is required from the Court of Appeal for all appeals to that court from a decision of a county court or the High Court which was itself made on appeal: see PARA 1682.

10 CPR 52.3(3); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.7.

11 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.11. If permission is granted without a hearing the parties will be notified of that decision; if permission is refused, the parties will be notified, with reasons for the decision: see paras 4.12, 4.13.

Where the appellant is in receipt of services funded by the Legal Services Commission (or legally aided) and permission to appeal has been refused without a hearing, the appellant must send a copy of the reasons the appeal court gave for refusing permission to the relevant office of the Legal Services Commission as soon as it has been received from the court; the court will require confirmation that this has been done if a hearing is requested to reconsider the question of permission: para 4.17.

Where permission is refused, the judge may properly be brief in explaining his conclusion but it is not sufficient simply to state that there had been non-compliance with Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52; that non-compliance must be identified: Hyams v Plender [2001] 2 All ER 179, [2001] 1 WLR 32, CA.

12 CPR 52.3(4); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.14. Where the Court of Appeal refuses permission to appeal without a hearing, it may, if it considers that the application is totally without merit, make an order that the person seeking permission may not request the decision to be reconsidered at a hearing: CPR 52.3(4A). CPR 3.3(5) (see PARA 251) will not apply to an order that the person seeking permission may not request the decision to be reconsidered at a hearing made under CPR 52.3(4A): CPR 52.3(4B).

Where an appellant, who is represented, makes a request for a decision to be reconsidered at an oral hearing, the appellant's advocate must, at least four days before the hearing, in a brief written statement (1) inform the court and the respondent of the points which he proposes to raise at the hearing; (2) set out his reasons why permission should be granted notwithstanding the reasons given for the refusal of permission; and (3) confirm, where applicable, that the requirements of Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.17 (see note 11) have been complied with (appellant in receipt of services funded by the Legal Services Commission): para 4.14A.

13 As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2.

14 CPR 52.3(5); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.14. A copy of the request must be served on the respondent at the same time: para 4.14. Notice of a permission hearing will be given to the respondent but he is not required to attend unless the court requests him to do so: see para 4.15. If the court requests the respondent's attendance at the permission hearing, the appellant must supply the respondent with a copy of the appeal bundle (see para 5.6A; and PARA 1663 note 11) within seven days of being notified of the request, or such other period as the court may direct. The costs of providing that bundle must be borne by the appellant.

initially, but will form part of the costs of the permission application: para 4.16. As to the respondent's entitlement to costs where an application for permission to appeal is successfully resisted, see Jolly v Jay [2002] EWCA Civ 277, [2002] All ER (D) 104 (Mar). As to costs generally see also PARA 1729 et seq.

15 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.8. See also the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(4); and PARA 1659. Under the previous rules it was held that it was an abuse of process for a defendant to seek to raise successive appeals in relation to different issues which had all been before the court on the first application and could have been considered at that time: see Commercial Acceptances Ltd v Townsend Investments Inc [2000] CPLR 421, CA. See Gregory v Turner, R (on the application of Morris) v North Somerset Council [2003] EWCA Civ 183, [2003] 2 All ER 1114 (Court of Appeal refused to hear appeal from appeal court's decision to refuse permission to appeal).

16 CPR 52.3(6)(a). As to the same test in relation to summary judgment applications see CPR 24.2(a); Swain v Hillman [2001] 1 All ER 91, [1999] CPLR 779, CA; Tanfern Ltd v Cameron-MacDonald (Practice Note) [2000] 1 WLR 1311, CA, at para 21; and PARA 524 note 7. Grounds of appeal should set out clearly the reasons why one or other of the rules contained in CPR 52 is said to apply: R (on the application of nine Nepalese asylum seekers) v Immigration Appeal Tribunal [2003] EWCA Civ 1892, [2004] All ER (D) 94 (Jan). See also Convergence Group plc v Chantrey Vellacott (a firm) [2005] EWCA Civ 290, (2005) Times, 25 April (appeal against amendment to pleadings).

17 CPR 52.3(6)(b). Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 contains no guidance as to the applicability of the second limb or its relationship with the first limb. As to the possible rationale of the second limb see Smith v Cosworth Casting Processes Ltd [1997] 4 All ER 840, [1997] 1 WLR 1538, CA, where it was suggested that leave may be granted even though the court is not satisfied that the appeal has any prospect of success if, for example, the issue is one which should, in the public interest, be examined by the Court of Appeal. As to the use of cases decided under the old rules as an aid to interpreting the Civil Procedure Rules see PARA 33 text and note 2.

Where matters have already been litigated but one party was not privy to that litigation, it may be appropriate to grant leave to appeal where there is a possibility that the law may be extended: see Manson v Barclays Bank plc [1999] CPLR 825, CA. For a case where the Court of Appeal expressed the view that permission to appeal should never have been granted see eg Pritchard v Jones [2001] EWCA Civ 1536, [2001] All ER (D) 172 (Oct).

It has been held by the High Court of Australia that while case management is a relevant consideration in considering applications for leave to appeal, it should not be allowed to prevail over the injustice of shutting out an arguable defence: State of Queensland v JL Holdings Pty Ltd [1999] CPLR 1, Aust HC.

18 CPR 52.3(7)(a). Where a court under CPR 52.3(7) gives permission to appeal on some issues only, it will (1) refuse permission on any remaining issues; or (2) reserve the question of permission to appeal on any remaining issues to the court hearing the appeal: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.18. If the court reserves the question of permission under head (2), the appellant must, within 14 days after service of the court's order, inform the appeal court and the respondent in writing whether he intends to pursue the reserved issues; if the appellant does intend to pursue the reserved issues, the parties must include in any time estimate for the appeal hearing, their time estimate for the reserved issues: para 4.19.

If the appeal court refuses permission to appeal on the remaining issues without a hearing and the applicant wishes to have that decision reconsidered at an oral hearing, the time limit in CPR 52.3(5) will apply, and any application for an extension of this time limit should be made promptly: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.20. The court hearing the appeal on the issues for which permission has been granted will not normally grant, at the appeal hearing, an application to extend the time limit in CPR 52.3(5) for the remaining issues: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.20. If the appeal court refuses permission to appeal on remaining issues at or after an oral hearing, the application for permission to appeal on those issues cannot be renewed at the appeal hearing (see the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 54(4)): Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.21. In most cases, applications for permission to appeal will be determined without the court requiring submissions from or, if there is an oral hearing, attendance by the respondent: para 4.22. Where the court does not request submissions from or attendance by the respondent, costs will not normally be allowed to a respondent who volunteers submissions or attendance: para 4.23. Where the court does request (a) submissions from or attendance by the respondent; or (b) attendance by the respondent with the appeal to follow if permission is granted, the court will normally allow the respondent his costs if permission is refused: para 4.24. See Fieldman v Markovitch [2001] All ER (D) 42 (Jul), (2001) Times, 31 July.

19 CPR 52.3(7)(b). CPR 3.1(3) also provides that the court may make an order subject to conditions: see PARA 247. As to the court's power to order security for costs of an appeal see CPR 25.15; and PARA 748.

20 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.2.

1661. Permission to appeal from case management decisions.

Where the application is for permission to appeal from a case management decision¹, the court² dealing with the application may take into account whether (1) the issue is of sufficient significance to justify the costs of an appeal; (2) the procedural consequences of an appeal (such as the loss of a trial date) outweigh the significance of the case management decision; and (3) it would be more convenient to determine the issue at or after trial³.

1 Case management decisions include decisions made under CPR 3.1(2) (general powers of case management: see PARA 247) and decisions about (1) disclosure (see PARAS 111-113, 538 et seq); (2) filing of witness statements (see PARA 981 et seq) or experts' reports (see PARA 838 et seq); (3) directions about the timetable of the claim (see PARA 287 et seq); (4) adding a party to the claim (see PARAS 210-212); and (5) security for costs (see PARAS 745-748): Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.4.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 4.5.

1662. Grounds of appeal.

The appeal court¹ will allow an appeal² where the decision of the lower court³ was (1) wrong⁴; or (2) unjust because of a serious procedural or other irregularity in the proceedings in the lower court⁵.

The grounds of appeal must set out clearly the reasons why head (1) or head (2) above is said to apply⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'appeal court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

2 As to the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1658 note 5. In the absence of consent, the appeal court has no power to make a different type of order from the one originally sought in the lower court: King v Telegraph Group Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 613, [2005] 1 WLR 2282; applied in Henry v British Broadcasting Corp [2005] EWHC 2503 (QB), [2006] 1 All ER 154.

3 As to the meaning of 'lower court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

4 CPR 52.11(3)(a). For consideration of the application of this rule see Tanfern Ltd v Cameron-MacDonald (Practice Note) [2000] 1 WLR 1311, CA, at para 32. See also eg Khan v Merton London Borough Council [2001] All ER (D) 335 (Jun); Re Jacob (a bankrupt) [2001] All ER (D) 349 (Jun). 1663. Appellant's notice.

The appellant¹ must file² an appellant's notice³ at the appeal court⁴ within such period as may be directed by the lower court (which may be longer or shorter than the period applicable where it makes no such direction)⁵ or, where the court⁶ makes no such direction, 21 days after the date of the decision of the lower court that the appellant wishes to appeal⁷. Unless the appeal court orders otherwise⁸, an appellant's notice must be served on each respondent as soon as practicable and in any event not later than seven days after it is filed⁹.

The fee must be paid at the time the notice is presented for filing¹⁰.

The documents which must accompany the appellant's notice are specified by the relevant practice direction¹¹. Particular provision is made with regard to appeals relating to a claim allocated to the small claims track¹², skeleton arguments¹³, suitable records or notes of the judgment¹⁴ and transcripts or notes of evidence¹⁵.

Notice of an application to be made to the appeal court for a remedy incidental to the appeal¹⁶ may be included in the appeal notice¹⁷ or in a notice of application for a court order¹⁸.

Where the appellant seeks the appeal court's permission to appeal it must be requested in the appellant's notice¹⁹.

Where the appellant is seeking to rely on any issue under the Human Rights Act 1998, or seeks a remedy available under that Act, for the first time in an appeal he must include specified information²⁰ in his appeal notice²¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1660 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8.

3 For the form of notice see Form N161 in The Civil Court Practice. Such a notice must be filed and served in all cases: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.1. As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2.

4 As to the meaning of 'appeal court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

5 CPR 52.4(2)(a). The lower court should not normally direct a period which exceeds 35 days: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.19. Where the lower court judge announces his decision and reserves the reasons for his judgment or order until a later date, he must, in exercising his power to fix a period for filing the appellant's notice at the appeal court, take this into account: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.20. As to the meaning of 'lower court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

6 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

7 CPR 52.4(2)(b); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.19. As to the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1658 note 5. As to applications for varying the time limit for filing an appeal notice see PARA 1665. As to the meaning of 'appeal notice' see PARA 1660 note 9. A court should have regard to CPR 3.9 when considering an application, in a case of any complexity, for extension of time by an applicant who has failed to comply with the time limit under CPR 52.4(2): Sayers v Clarke Walker (a firm) [2002] EWCA Civ 645, [2002] 3 All ER 490. As to the application of the principles in CPR 3.9(1) to the filing of a notice of appeal out of time, see R (on the application of Awan) v Immigration Appeal Tribunal [2004] EWCA Civ 922, (2004) Times, 24 June; and PARA 256.

The time limit for filing the appellant's notice is different in the case of a statutory appeal: see PARA 1684.

8 The court may dispense with the requirement for service of the notice on a respondent; any application notice seeking an order under CPR 6.28 (general power of court to dispense with service of a document: see PARA 153) must set out the reasons relied on and be verified by a statement of truth: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.23. As to statements of truth see PARA 613.

9 CPR 52.4(3); and see Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.21. Unless the court otherwise directs a respondent need not take any action when served with an appellant's notice until such time as notification is given to him that permission to appeal has been given: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.22. Copies of the documents which accompany an appellant's notice need not generally be served on the respondent where the appellant's notice is seeking permission to appeal: see note 19.

10 As to fees see PARA 87.

11 The appellant must file the following documents together with an appeal bundle with his appellant's notice in every case except where the appeal relates to a claim allocated to the small claims track (see note 12) and is being heard in a county court or the High Court: (1) two additional copies of the appellant's notice for the appeal court; and (2) one copy of the appellant's notice for each of the respondents; (3) one copy of any skeleton argument (see note 13) for each copy of the appellant's notice that is filed; (4) a sealed copy of the order being appealed; (5) a copy of any order giving or refusing permission to appeal, together with a copy of the judge's reasons for that decision; (6) any witness statements or affidavits in support of any application included in the appellant's notice; and (7) a copy of the order allocating the case to a track (if any): Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.6(1)-(7). An appellant must include in his appeal bundle the following documents: (a) a sealed copy of the appellant's notice; (b) a sealed copy of the order being appealed; (c) a copy of any order giving or refusing permission to appeal, together with a copy of the judge's reasons for allowing or refusing permission to appeal; (d) any affidavit or witness statement filed in support of any application included in the appellant's notice; (e) a copy of his skeleton argument; (f) a transcript or note of judgment (see para 5.12), and in cases where permission to appeal was given by the lower court or is not required those parts of any transcript of evidence which are directly relevant to any question at issue on the appeal; (g) the claim form and statements of case (where relevant to the subject of the appeal); (h) any application notice (or case management documentation) relevant to the subject of the appeal; (i) in cases where the decision appealed was itself made on appeal (eg from district judge to circuit judge), the first order, the reasons given and the appellant's notice used to appeal from that order; (j) in the case of judicial review or a statutory appeal, the original decision which was the subject of the application to the lower court; (k) in cases where the appeal is from a tribunal, a copy of the tribunal's reasons for the decision, a copy of the decision reviewed by the tribunal and the reasons for the original decision and any document filed with the tribunal setting out the grounds of appeal from that decision; (l) any other documents which the appellant reasonably considers necessary to enable the appeal court to reach its decision on the hearing of the application or appeal; and (m) such other documents as the court may direct: para 5.6A(1). Documents which are extraneous to the issues to be considered must be excluded; the appeal bundle may include affidavits, witness statements, summaries, experts' reports and exhibits but only where these are directly relevant to the subject matter of the appeal: para 5.6A(2). Where the appellant is represented, the appeal bundle must contain a certificate signed by his solicitor, counsel or other representative to the effect that he has read and understood para 5.6A(2) and that the composition of the appeal bundle complies with it: para 5(6A)(3).

Where it is not possible to file all the above documents, the appellant must indicate which documents have not yet been filed and the reasons why they are not currently available. The appellant must then provide a reasonable estimate of when the missing document or documents can be filed and file them as soon as reasonably practicable: para 5.7. For further guidance see Harvey Shopfitters Ltd v ADI Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1757, [2004] 2 All ER 982.

12 Where the appeal relates to a claim allocated to the small claims track and the appeal is being heard in a county court or the High Court, an appellant's notice must be filed and served in Form N164, and the appellant must file the following documents with his appellant's notice: (1) a sealed copy of the order being appealed; (2) any order giving or refusing permission to appeal, together with a copy of the reasons for that decision: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.8(1), (1A), (2). The appellant may file any other document listed in para 5.6 or 5.6A (see note 11) in addition to the documents referred to in para 5.8(2): para 5.8(3). The appellant need not file a record of the reasons for judgment of the lower court with his appellant's notice unless sub-para 5.8(5) applies: para 5.8(4). The court may order a suitable record of the reasons for judgment of the lower court (see para 5.12) to be filed to enable it to decide if permission should be granted or if permission is granted to enable it to decide the appeal: para 5.8(5).

13 The appellant's notice must, subject as follows, be accompanied by a skeleton argument. Alternatively the skeleton argument may be included in the appellant's notice; where the skeleton argument is so included it will not form part of the notice for the purposes of CPR 52.8 (amendment of appeal notice: see PARA 1667): Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.9(1). Where it is impracticable for the appellant's skeleton argument to accompany the appellant's notice it must be filed and served on all respondents within 14 days of filing the notice: para 5.9(2). An appellant who is not represented need not file a skeleton argument but is encouraged to do so since this will be helpful to the court: para 5.9(3). A skeleton argument must contain a numbered list of the points which the party wishes to make. These should both define and confine the areas of controversy. Each point should be stated as concisely as the nature of the case allows: para 5.10(1). A numbered point must be followed by a reference to any document on which the party wishes to rely: para 5.10(2). A skeleton argument must state, in respect of each authority cited, the proposition of law that the authority demonstrates and the parts of the authority (identified by page or paragraph references) that support the proposition: para 5.10(3). If more than one authority is cited in support of a given proposition, the skeleton argument must briefly state the reason for taking that course (para 5.10(4)), which should not materially add to the length of the skeleton argument but should be sufficient to demonstrate, in the context of the argument the relevance of the authority or authorities to that argument and that the citation is necessary for a proper presentation of that argument (para 5.10(5)). The cost of preparing a skeleton argument which does not comply with the requirements set out above or which was not filed within the time limits provided by Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 (or any further time granted by the court), will not be allowed on assessment except to the extent that the court otherwise directs: para 5.10(6). A skeleton argument filed in the Court of Appeal, Civil Division on behalf of the appellant should contain in para 1 the advocate's time estimate for the hearing of the appeal: para 5.10(7). The appellant should consider what other information the appeal court will need. This may include a list of persons who feature in the case or glossaries of technical terms. A chronology of relevant events will be necessary in most appeals: para 5.11. As to judicial decisions as authorities see PARA 91 et seq. See the comments made by the Court of Appeal warning against over-lengthy skeleton arguments: Tombstone Ltd v Raja [2008] EWCA Civ 1444 at [122]-[128], [2008] All ER (D) 180 (Dec) at [122]-[128] per Mummery LJ.

14 Where the judgment to be appealed has been officially recorded by the court, an approved transcript of that record must accompany the appellant's notice. Photocopies will not be accepted for this purpose: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.12. However, where there is no officially recorded judgment, the following documents will be acceptable:

- 99 (1) where the judgment was made in writing, a copy of that judgment indorsed with the judge's signature (para 5.12(1));
- 100 (2) when judgment was not officially recorded or made in writing a note of the judgment (agreed between the appellant's and respondent's advocates) should be submitted for approval to the judge whose decision is being appealed. If the parties cannot agree on a single note of the judgment, both versions should be provided to that judge with an explanatory letter. For the purpose of an application for permission to appeal the note need not be approved by the respondent or the lower court judge (para 5.12(2));
- 101 (3) when the appellant was unrepresented in the lower court it is the duty of any advocate for the respondent to make his/her note of judgment promptly available, free of charge to the appellant where there is no officially recorded judgment or if the court so directs. Where the appellant was represented in the lower court it is the duty of his/her own former advocate to make his/her note available in these circumstances. The appellant must submit the note of judgment to the appeal court (para 5.12(3));
- 102 (4) a sealed copy of the tribunal's reasons for the decision, in tribunal cases (para 5.12(4)).

An appellant may not be able to obtain an official transcript or other suitable record of the lower court's decision within the time within which the appellant's notice must be filed. In such cases the appellant's notice must still be completed to the best of the appellant's ability on the basis of the documentation available. However it may be amended subsequently with the permission of the appeal court: para 5.13.

An advocate's brief (or, where appropriate, refresher) fee includes (a) remuneration for taking a note of the judgment of the court; (b) having the note transcribed accurately; (c) attempting to agree the note with the other side if represented; (d) submitting the note to the judge for approval where appropriate; (e) revising it if so requested by the judge; (f) providing any copies required for the appeal court, instructing solicitors and lay client; and (g) providing a copy of his note to an unrepresented appellant: para 5.14.

15 When the evidence is relevant to the appeal an official transcript of the relevant evidence must be obtained. Transcripts or notes of evidence are generally not needed for the purpose of determining an application for permission to appeal: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.15. If evidence relevant to the appeal was not officially recorded, a typed version of the judge's notes of evidence must be obtained: para 5.16. Where the lower court or the appeal court is satisfied that an unrepresented appellant or an appellant whose legal representation is provided free of charge to the appellant and not funded by the Community Legal Service is in such poor financial circumstances that the cost of a transcript would be an excessive burden the court may certify that the cost of obtaining one official transcript should be borne at public expense: para 5.17. In the case of a request for an official transcript of evidence or proceedings to be paid for at public expense, the court must also be satisfied that there are reasonable grounds for appeal. Whenever possible a request for a transcript at public expense should be made to the lower court when asking for permission to appeal: para 5.18. See Hyams v Plender [2001] 2 All ER 179, [2001] 1 WLR 32, CA. A litigant in person who seeks to appeal but who has provided no grounds of appeal is not entitled to demand as of right a transcript of the relevant judgment at public expense: Perotti v City of Westminster [2005] EWCA Civ 581, [2005] RVR 321. As to grounds for appeal see PARA 1662.

16 Eg an interim remedy under CPR 25.1 (see PARA 315) or an order for security for costs. As to security for costs of an appeal see CPR 25.15; and PARA 748.

17 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.5. Note that 'appeal notice' means either an appellant's or a respondent's notice: see PARA 1660 note 9. As to a respondent's notice see PARA 1664.

18 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.5. Such applications are made under CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq) and referred to as 'Part 23 applications'. Where a party to an appeal makes an application whether in an appeal notice or by Part 23 application notice, the provisions of CPR Pt 23 will apply: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 11.1. The applicant must file the following documents with the notice: (1) one additional copy of the application notice for the appeal court and one copy for each of the respondents; (2) where applicable a sealed copy of the order which is the subject of the main appeal; (3) a bundle of documents in support which should include the Part 23 application notice and any witness statements and affidavits filed in support of the application notice: para 11.2.

19 CPR 52.4(1); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.1. Where the appellant is applying for permission to appeal in his appellant's notice, there is no requirement at this stage for copies of the documents referred to in Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.6 (see note 11) to be served on the respondents; however, if permission has been given by the lower court or permission is not required, copies of all the documents must be served on the respondents with the appellant's notice: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.24.

20 Ie the information required by Practice Direction--Statements of Case PD16 para 15.1: see PARA 596. Practice Direction--Statements of Case PD 16 para 15.2 also applies as if references to the statement of case were to the appeal notice: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.1A. CPR 19.4A and its supplementary practice direction (addition and substitution of parties in claims involving issues under the Human Rights Act 1998: see PARA 596) apply as if references to the case management conference were to the application for permission to appeal: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.1B.

1664. Respondent's notice.

A respondent¹ may file² and serve³ a respondent's notice⁴ and must do so if he is seeking permission to appeal⁵ from the appeal court⁶ or if he wishes to ask the appeal court to uphold the order of the lower court⁷ for reasons different from or additional to those given by the lower court⁸.

A respondent who wishes to ask the appeal court to vary the order of the lower court in any way must appeal and permission will be required on the same basis as for an appellant⁹. A respondent who wishes only to request that the appeal court upholds the judgment or order of the lower court, whether for the reasons given in the lower court or otherwise, does not make an appeal and does not therefore require permission to appeal¹⁰.

Where the respondent is seeking to rely on any issue under the Human Rights Act 1998, or seeks a remedy available under that Act, for the first time in an appeal he must include specified information in his respondent's notice¹¹.

Where the respondent seeks permission from the appeal court it must be requested in the respondent's notice¹².

A respondent's notice must be filed within such period as may be directed by the lower court¹³ or, where the court¹⁴ makes no such direction, 14 days after the date the respondent is served:

- 1227 (1) with the appellant's notice¹⁵, where permission to appeal was given by the lower court or permission to appeal is not required¹⁶;
- 1228 (2) with notification that the appeal court has given the appellant permission to appeal¹⁷; or
- 1229 (3) with notification that the application for permission to appeal and the appeal itself are to be heard together¹⁸.

Where an extension of time is required the extension must be requested in the respondent's notice and the reasons why the respondent failed to act within the specified time must be included¹⁹.

Unless the appeal court orders otherwise a respondent's notice must be served on the appellant and any other respondent as soon as practicable and in any event not later than seven days after it is filed²⁰.

The documents which must accompany the respondent's notice are specified by the relevant practice direction²¹. Where the appeal relates to a claim allocated to the small claims track and is being heard in a county court or the High Court the respondent may provide a skeleton argument but is not required to do so²².

Notice of an application to be made to the appeal court for a remedy incidental to the appeal²³ may be included in the respondent's notice²⁴ or in a notice of application for a court order²⁵.

21 Except where Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 7.7A applies (see the text and note 22), the respondent must provide a skeleton argument for the court where he proposes to address arguments to the court. The respondent's skeleton argument may be included within a respondent's notice. Where a skeleton argument is included within a respondent's notice it will not form part of the notice for the purposes of CPR 52.8 (amendment of appeal notice: see PARA 1667); Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 7.6. A respondent who files a respondent's notice but does not include his skeleton argument within that notice, must file and serve his skeleton argument within 14 days of filing the notice: para 7.7(1). A respondent who does not file a respondent's notice but who files a skeleton argument must file and serve that skeleton argument at least seven days before the appeal hearing: para 7.7(2). The respondent must serve his skeleton argument on the appellant and any other respondent at the same time as he files it at the court, and file a certificate of service: para 7.7B. A respondent's skeleton argument must conform to the directions at paras 5.10, 5.11 (see PARA 1663 note 13) with any necessary modifications. It should, where appropriate, answer the arguments set out in the appellant's skeleton argument: para 7.8. The respondent must lodge the following documents with his respondent's notice in every case: (1) two additional copies of the respondent's notice for the appeal court; (2) one copy each for the appellant and any other respondents; and (3) two copies of any skeleton arguments: para 7.10. If the respondent wishes to rely on any documents in addition to those filed by the appellant he must prepare a supplemental bundle and lodge it at the appeal court with his respondent's notice. He must serve a copy of the supplemental bundle at the same time as serving the respondent's notice on the persons required to be served in accordance with CPR 52.5(6): Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 7.12. The respondent's notice and any skeleton argument must be served in accordance with the time limits set out in CPR 52.5(6) except where this requirement is modified by Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 7.7: para 7.13.

22 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 7.7A(1). A respondent who is not represented need not file a skeleton argument but is encouraged to do so in order to assist the court: para 7.7A(2). As to the small claims track see PARAS 267, 274 et seq.

23 Eg an interim remedy under CPR 25.1 (see PARA 315) or an order for security for costs: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 7.9, applying para 5.5 (see PARA 1663 note 18). As to security for costs of an appeal see CPR 25.15; and PARA 748.

1665. Extension of time for appeal.

An application to vary the time limit for filing¹ an appeal notice² must be made to the appeal court³. The parties may not agree to extend any date or time limit set by the Civil Procedure Rules⁴, the relevant practice direction⁵ or an order of the appeal court or the lower court⁶.

Where the time for filing an appellant's notice⁷ has expired, the appellant must file the appellant's notice and include in that appellant's notice an application for an extension of time⁸. The appellant's notice should state the reason for the delay and the steps taken prior to the application being made⁹.

Where the appellant's notice includes an application for an extension of time and permission to appeal has been given or is not required, the respondent¹⁰ has the right to be heard on that application and must be served with a copy of the appeal bundle¹¹; however, a respondent who unreasonably opposes an extension of time runs the risk of being ordered to pay the appellant's costs of that application¹².

2 As to the meaning of 'appeal notice' see PARA 1660 note 9.

As to the time limit for filing an appellant's notice see PARA 1663 the text and notes 1-7; and as to the time limit for filing a respondent's notice see PARA 1664 the text and notes 13-18. As to time limits generally see PARA 88 et seq.

Under the appellate regime provided by the Access to Justice Act 1999 and the Civil Procedure Rules, if both a lower court and an appeal court at a lower level of the judicial hierarchy have decided (or, indeed, if just an appeal court has decided) that a proposed appeal has no real prospect of success, and there is no other compelling reason why the appeal should be heard, that is the end of the matter, and the issue cannot be re-litigated higher up the judicial chain. That principle does not, however, apply to an order refusing permission to extend time for an appeal, which can, with permission, be appealed against in the Court of Appeal as can any other order made by a High Court judge. If a circuit judge or a High Court judge sitting in an appeal court has the choice of disposing of a belated and unmeritorious appeal either by refusing to extend time for appealing or by refusing permission to appeal, he or she should bear in mind that taking the latter course will bring the appellate proceedings to an end. The adoption of the former course, on the other hand, may entail further expense and delay while a challenge is launched at a higher appeal court against the decision not to extend time for appealing: see Foender v Bond Lewis & Co [2001] EWCA Civ 759, [2001] 2 All ER 1019, [2001] All ER (D) 286 (May).

6 CPR 52.6(2)(c). As to the meaning of 'lower court' see PARA 1660 note 2. The court may extend or shorten the time for compliance with any rule, practice direction or court order (even if an application for extension is made after the time for compliance has expired) and may adjourn or bring forward a hearing: see CPR 3.1(2)(a), (b); and PARA 247.

7 As to appellants' notices see PARA 1663. As to the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1660 note 1.

8 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 5.2. When considering an application for an extension of time made after the expiry of the time limit, the court must have regard to the checklist in CPR 3.9 (see PARA 256): Sayers v Clarke Walker (a firm) [2002] EWCA Civ 645, [2002] 3 All ER 490. However, where the application for an extension of time is made before the period for appeal has expired, then CPR 3.9 does not apply: see Robert v Momentum Services Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 299, [2003] 2 All ER 74. 1666. Initial procedure after permission is obtained.

Where permission to appeal is given by the appeal court¹, or the appellant's notice² is filed³ in the appeal court and either permission was given by the lower court⁴ or permission is not required⁵, the appeal court will send the parties:

- 1230 (1) notification of the date of the hearing or the period of time (the 'listing window') during which the appeal is likely to be heard, and, in the Court of Appeal, the date by which the appeal will be heard (the 'hear-by date')⁶;
- 1231 (2) where permission is granted by the appeal court, a copy of the order giving permission to appeal⁷; and
- 1232 (3) any other directions given by the court⁸.

The Court of Appeal will send an appeal questionnaire to the appellant when it notifies him of the matters referred to in heads (1) to (3) above⁹.

6 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 6.1, 6.3(1). In the case of all appeals to the Court of Appeal filed on or after 1 October 2001, the longest hear-by date will be ten months: see Practice Note [2001] 3 All ER 479, CA, para 1. As to listing in the Court of Appeal see further PARA 1709.

7 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 6.1, 6.3(2). If the appeal court gives permission to appeal, the appeal bundle (see PARA 1663 note 11) must be served on each of the respondents within seven days of receiving the order giving permission to appeal: para 6.2. Where the appeal court grants permission to appeal, the appellant must add the following documents to the appeal bundle (1) the respondent's notice and skeleton argument (if any); (2) those parts of the transcripts of evidence which are directly relevant to any question at issue on the appeal; (3) the order granting permission to appeal and, where permission to appeal was granted at an oral hearing, the transcript (or note) of any judgment which was given; and (4) any document which the appellant and respondent have agreed to add to the appeal bundle in accordance with para 7.11: para 6.3A(1). Where permission to appeal has been refused on a particular issue, the appellant must remove from the appeal bundle all documents that are relevant only to that issue: para 6.3A(2). If the respondent wishes to rely on any documents which he reasonably considers necessary to enable the appeal court to reach its decision on the appeal in addition to those filed by the appellant, he must make every effort to agree amendments to the appeal bundle with the appellant: para 7.11.

8 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 6.1, 6.3(3).

9 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 6.4. The questionnaire must be completed and returned within 14 days of the date of the letter of notification of the matters in para 6.3 (see heads (1)-(3) in the text): para 6.5. The appeal questionnaire must contain (1) if the appellant is legally represented, the advocate's time estimate for the hearing of the appeal; (2) where a transcript of evidence is relevant to the appeal, confirmation as to what parts of a transcript of evidence have been ordered where this is not already in the bundle of documents; (3) confirmation that copies of the appeal bundle are being prepared and will be held ready for the use of the Court of Appeal and an undertaking that they will be supplied to the court on request; for the purpose of these bundles photocopies of the transcripts will be accepted; (4) confirmation that copies of the appeal questionnaire and the appeal bundle have been served on the respondents and the date of that service: para 6.5. The time estimate included in an appeal questionnaire must be that of the advocate who will argue the appeal. It should exclude the time required by the court to give judgment. If the respondent disagrees with the time estimate, the respondent must inform the court within seven days of receipt of the appeal questionnaire. In the absence of such notification the respondent will be deemed to have accepted the estimate proposed on behalf of the appellant: para 6.6.

1667. Amendment of appeal notice.

An appeal notice¹ may not be amended without the permission of the appeal court².

Such an application to amend, and any application in opposition, will normally be dealt with at the hearing unless that course would cause unnecessary expense or delay in which case a request should be made for the application to amend to be heard in advance³.

1668. Striking out appeal notices and setting aside or imposing conditions on permission to appeal.

The appeal court¹ may strike out² the whole or part of an appeal notice³. It may also set aside⁴ permission to appeal⁵ in whole or in part⁶ and impose or vary conditions upon which an appeal may be brought⁷. The court⁸ will only exercise these powers, however, where there is a compelling reason for doing so⁹.

Where a party was present at the hearing at which permission was given he may not subsequently apply for an order that the court exercise its powers under these provisions to set aside permission or to impose or vary conditions¹⁰.

1670. Disposing of applications and appeals by consent.

Where an appellant¹ does not wish to pursue an application or an appeal, he may request the appeal court² for an order that his application or appeal be dismissed³. If such a request is granted it will usually be on the basis that the appellant pays the costs of the application or appeal⁴. If the appellant wishes to have the application or appeal dismissed without costs, his request must be accompanied by a consent signed by the respondent or his legal representative stating that the respondent is not a child or protected party and consents to the dismissal of the application or appeal without costs⁵.

Where a settlement has been reached disposing of the application or appeal, the parties may make a joint request to the court stating that none of them is a child or protected party and that the appeal or application is not from a decision of the Court of Protection, and asking that the application or appeal be dismissed by consent. If the request is granted the application or appeal will be dismissed⁶.

The appeal court will not normally make an order allowing an application or appeal unless satisfied that the decision of the lower court was wrong⁷. Where the appeal court is requested by all parties to allow an application or an appeal the court may consider the request on the papers⁸.

Specific provision is made regarding the procedure for periodical payments for future pecuniary loss⁹ and consent orders involving children¹⁰ or protected parties¹¹. Such settlements which are agreed upon at the appeal stage require the court's approval¹².

1 As to the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1660 note 1.

3 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 12.2. This does not apply where any party to the proceedings is a child or protected party or the appeal or application is to the Court of Appeal from a decision of the Court of Protection, and the request must contain a statement that the appellant is not a child or protected party: paras 12.1, 12.2. 7 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.1.

8 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.1. The request should state that none of the parties is a child or protected party and that the application or appeal is not from a decision of the Court of Protection, and set out the relevant history of the proceedings and the matters relied on as justifying the proposed order and be accompanied by a copy of the proposed order: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.1.

9 Where periodical payments for future pecuniary loss have been negotiated in a personal injury case which is under appeal, the documents filed should include those which would be required in the case of a personal injury claim for damages for future pecuniary loss dealt with at first instance. Details can be found in Practice Direction-- Children and Protected Parties PD 21 which supplements CPR Pt 21: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.5. As to periodical payments see PARA 1222.

10 In cases involving a child a copy of the proposed order signed by the parties' solicitors must be sent to the appeal court, together with an opinion from the advocate acting on behalf of the child: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.3.

11 Where a party is a protected party the same procedure will be adopted as in cases involving a child (see note 10), but the documents filed must also include any relevant reports prepared for the Court of Protection: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.4.

12 See Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 13.2. Where one of the parties is a child or protected party or the application or appeal is to the Court of Appeal from a decision of the Court of Protection, (1) a settlement relating to an appeal or application; (2) in a personal injury claim for damages for future pecuniary loss, an agreement reached at the appeal stage to pay periodical payments; or (3) a request by an appellant for an order that his application or appeal be dismissed with or without the consent of the respondent, requires the court's approval: para 13.2.

1671. Appeal court's powers.

In relation to an appeal¹ the appeal court² has all the powers of the lower court³. The appeal court has power to:

- 1233 (1) affirm, set aside⁴ or vary any order or judgment made or given by the lower court⁵;
- 1234 (2) refer any claim or issue for determination by the lower court⁶;
- 1235 (3) order a new trial or hearing⁷;
- 1236 (4) make orders for the payment of interest⁸;
- 1237 (5) make a costs order⁹.

In an appeal from a claim tried with a jury¹⁰ the Court of Appeal may, instead of ordering a new trial, make an order for damages¹¹ or vary an award of damages made by the jury¹².

The appeal court may exercise its powers in relation to the whole or part of an order of the lower court¹³.

If the appeal court refuses an application for permission to appeal, strikes out an appellant's notice or dismisses an appeal, and it considers that the application, the appellant's notice or the appeal is totally without merit, the following provisions must be complied with¹⁴. In such a case, (a) the court's order must record the fact that it considers the application, the appellant's notice or the appeal to be totally without merit; and (b) the court must at the same time consider whether it is appropriate to make a civil restraint order¹⁵.

1672. Hearing of appeals.

An appeal¹ is generally limited to a review of the decision of the lower court².

Unless it orders otherwise³, the appeal court⁴ will not receive oral evidence⁵ or evidence which was not before the lower court⁶.

The appeal court may draw any inference of fact which it considers justified on the evidence⁷.

At the hearing of the appeal a party may not rely on a matter not contained in his appeal notice⁸ unless the appeal court gives permission⁹.

Costs are likely to be assessed by way of summary assessment in respect of contested directions hearings, applications for permission to appeal at which the respondent is present, dismissal list hearings in the Court of Appeal at which the respondent is present, appeals from case management decisions and appeals listed for one day or less¹⁰.

The grounds on which the appeal court will allow an appeal have already been set out¹¹.

1673. Appeal generally by way of a review not a re-hearing.

Under the Civil Procedure Rules, every appeal¹ is limited to a review of the decision of the lower court² unless a practice direction makes different provision for a particular category of appeal³ or the court⁴ considers that in the circumstances of an individual appeal it would be in the interests of justice to hold a re-hearing⁵. Where there is a re-hearing, the appeal court forms its own judgment on the issues rather than simply reviewing the decision of the lower court⁶, but such appeals are now in the minority.

Thus the decision of the lower court has acquired greater significance⁷, since, in an appeal by way of review, the appeal court cannot disturb the lower court's decision unless the decision can be shown to be wrong or involved a serious procedural irregularity⁸. A decision based on the exercise of discretion is not wrong simply because the appellate court would have reached a different decision⁹, and generally an appeal court will not interfere with a lower court's findings of facts¹⁰ unless no reasonable judge could have reached the same conclusion or crucial factors were not taken into account¹¹; while for a decision to be disturbed on the ground of irregularity, the irregularity must not only be serious but must also render the decision unjust¹².

1 As to the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1658 note 5.

2 CPR 52.11(1). As to the meaning of 'lower court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

3 CPR 52.11(1)(a). The hearing of an appeal will be a re-hearing (as opposed to a review of the decision of the lower court) if the appeal is from the decision of a minister, person or other body and the minister, person or other body (1) did not hold a hearing to come to that decision; or (2) held a hearing to come to that decision, but the procedure adopted did not provide for the consideration of evidence: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 9.1.

4 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

5 CPR 52.11(1)(b). Whether or not it is in the interests of justice to hold a re-hearing depends on the circumstances of the particular case: a re-hearing might be necessary, for example, if the lower court failed to take proper account of the evidence before it, or if there is fresh evidence, or if the lower court failed to give reasons for its decision.

As to procedure on a re-hearing see eg Hertfordshire Investments Ltd v Bubb [2000] All ER (D) 1052, [2000] 1 WLR 2318, CA. Where evidence is not re-heard, the court's approach should be the same whether conducting a review or re-hearing, as described in CPR 52.11: Assicurazioni Generali SpA v Arab Insurance Group (BSC) [2002] EWCA Civ 1642, [2003] 1 All ER (Comm) 140. See Yorkshire Water Services Ltd v Taylor Woodrow Construction Northern Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 894, [2005] BLR 395 (in general, the more complicated and technical the facts, the harder it would be for appellant to persuade appellate court to review of findings of fact); Ansari v Wilof [2002] EWHC 1243 (QB), [2002] CPLR 257 (re-hearing ordered notwithstanding that sole ground for appeal was that earlier court failed to give reasons for decision). 1674. Re-opening of final appeals.

Provision is made in relation to the re-opening of appeals by the Court of Appeal and the High Court¹. The rule does not, however, apply to appeals to a county court². The Court of Appeal or the High Court may re-open a final determination of any appeal, including an application for permission to appeal³, if (1) it is necessary to do so in order to avoid real injustice; (2) the circumstances are exceptional and make it appropriate to re-open the appeal; and (3) there is no alternative effective remedy⁴. Permission is needed to make an application to re-open a final determination of an appeal even in cases where permission was not needed for the original appeal⁵. There is no right to an oral hearing of an application for permission unless, exceptionally, the judge so directs⁶. The judge will not grant permission without directing the application to be served on the other party to the original appeal and giving him an opportunity to make representations⁷. The application for permission, and any written statements supporting or opposing it, will be considered on paper by a single judge, and will be allowed to proceed only if the judge so directs⁸. There is no right of appeal or review from the decision of the judge on the application for permission, which is final⁹.

⁵ CPR 52.17(4). As to cases where permission is not needed for the original appeal, see CPR 52.3(1); and PARA 1660. Permission must be sought from the court whose decision the applicant wishes to re-open and must be made by application notice and supported by written evidence, verified by a statement of truth: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 25.3, 25.4. As to statements of truth see PARA 613.

See also Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 25.5, which provides that a copy of the application for permission must not be served on any other party to the original appeal unless the court so directs. Where the court directs that the application for permission is to be served on another party, that party may within 14 days of the service on him of the copy of the application file and serve a written statement either supporting or opposing the application: para 25.6.

1675. Non-disclosure of Part 36 offers and payments.

The fact that a Part 36 offer¹ or payment into court has been made must not be disclosed to any judge² of the appeal court³ who is to hear or determine an application for permission to appeal or an appeal⁴ until all questions (other than costs) have been determined⁵. This provision does not, however, apply if the Part 36 offer or payment into court is relevant to the substance of the appeal⁶. Nor does it prevent disclosure in any application in the appeal proceedings if disclosure of the fact that a Part 36 offer or payment into court has been made is properly relevant to the matter to be decided⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'Part 36 offer' see PARA 730. CPR 36.3 (see PARA 729) has the effect that a Part 36 offer made in proceedings at first instance will not have consequences in any appeal proceedings. Therefore, a fresh Part 36 offer needs to be made in appeal proceedings. However, CPR 52.12 applies to a Part 36 offer whether made in the original proceedings or in the appeal.

(2) ADMISSION OF FRESH EVIDENCE ON APPEAL

1676. Civil appeals to the Court of Appeal, the High Court and county courts.

Unless it orders otherwise¹, the appeal court² will not receive oral evidence³ or evidence which was not before the lower court⁴. For the court to allow further evidence to be adduced in support of an appeal against a decision of fact the evidence must be (1) evidence which could not have been obtained with reasonable diligence for use at the trial; (2) such that, if given, it would probably have an important influence on the result of the case, although it need not be decisive; and (3) such as is presumably to be believed⁵. These criteria need to be applied as guidelines rather than rules and subject to the overriding objective⁶ of dealing with cases justly⁷. In addition the consequence of admitting the fresh evidence has to be taken into account. The critical question is whether the fresh evidence could have been obtained with reasonable diligence for use at the trial and if it could have been then permission to adduce it in evidence should be refused⁸.

In family cases, fresh evidence will be admitted by the Court of Appeal in the exercise of the court's discretion if it is necessary to inform the court of new facts and matters which have arisen since the decision under appeal; where the interests of a child are engaged, the court is not likely to refuse to admit that fresh evidence. The approach of the Court of Appeal is to consider first whether or not the appeal should be allowed on the facts as they appeared to the judge. If so, there is no need to take the fresh evidence into account. If, however, the appeal would otherwise be dismissed, then the court must assess whether the fresh evidence should lead to the appeal being allowed⁹.

The appeal court may draw any inference of fact which it considers justified on the evidence¹⁰.

At the hearing of the appeal a party may not rely on a matter not contained in his appeal notice¹¹ unless the appeal court gives permission¹².

1 The circumstances in which further evidence will be received are not specified under CPR 52.11 (see the text and notes 2-12); cf RSC Ord 59 r 10(2) (revoked), which provided, in general, that no further evidence would be admitted except on special grounds. The rules in CPR Pt 52 (appeals: see PARA 1657 et seq) apply to appeals to (1) the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal; (2) the High Court; and (3) a county court; but do not apply to an appeal in detailed assessment proceedings against a decision of an authorised court officer (as to which see PARAS 1800-1802): CPR 52.1(1), (2). As to the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1658 note 5. It has been held that the court's power to admit further evidence in an appeal from a decision of the Trade Marks Registry under the Trade Marks Act 1938 (repealed and replaced by the Trade Marks Act 1994) is not governed by CPR 52.11: see El Du Pont de Nemours & Co v ST Dupont [2002] All ER (D) 54 (Nov), (2002) Times, 7 November.

Where an issue has been determined by a decision of the court, that decision should definitively determine the issue as between those who were party to the litigation. Furthermore, parties who are involved in litigation are expected to put before the court all the issues relevant to that litigation'. 1 Application for leave must be made either in the case or by lodging a petition for leave to adduce the fresh evidence: HL Practice Directions and Standing Orders applicable to Civil Appeals (June 2001) direction 15.3. When the time for appeal has expired, the onus on the appellant of satisfying the House that the case is a proper one to re-open on fresh evidence is higher than when he makes the application to admit fresh evidence within the time for bringing an appeal: Murphy v Stone Wallwork (Charlton) Ltd [1969] 2 All ER 949, [1969] 1 WLR 1023, HL. UPDATE

1677 Appeals to the [Supreme Court]

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(2) ADMISSION OF FRESH EVIDENCE ON APPEAL/1678. Appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

1678. Appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

The Judicial Committee of the Privy Council has power to take evidence¹, although the power is rarely used in appeals from Commonwealth courts². Evidence is usually by affidavit³, but may be given orally. If a party wishes to tender fresh evidence an application to the Committee by petition for leave to adduce the evidence must be made and the granting of the application lies at the discretion of the Committee. That discretion will, however, be exercised in accordance with established principles, namely that the fresh evidence may not be adduced unless it was not available to the party seeking to use it in the court appealed from, reasonable diligence would not have made it so available, and, if true, the fresh evidence would have had or would have been likely to have had a determining influence on the court appealed from⁴.

The practice and procedure before the Committee is discussed elsewhere in this work⁵.

1 See the Judicial Committee Act 1833 s 7 (evidence by word of mouth or on written depositions), s 8 (re-examination of witnesses) (both amended by the Statute Law Revision (No 2) Act 1888). As to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 401 et seq.

2 As to Commonwealth appeals see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 404-408, 416 et seq.

3 The practice of the Committee is, where necessary, to accept an official translation of a document: Rajendra Prasad Bose v Gopal Prasad Sen (1930) LR 57 Ind App 296, PC.

4 Shedden v Patrick and A-G (1869) LR 1 Sc & Div 470; Leeder v Ellis [1953] AC 52, [1952] 2 All ER 814, PC; Corbett v Corbett [1953] P 205, [1953] 2 All ER 69, CA; Andrew v Andrew [1953] 1 WLR 1453, PC. These principles are those enunciated in Ladd v Marshall [1954] 3 All ER 745, [1954] 1 WLR 1489, CA, which also remain relevant to the exercise of an appeal court's discretion under CPR 52.11: see PARA 1676.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(3) COUNTY COURT AND HIGH COURT APPEALS/1679. Appeals from a decision of a county court; general provisions.

(3) COUNTY COURT AND HIGH COURT APPEALS

1679. Appeals from a decision of a county court; general provisions.

It is provided by the County Courts Act 1984 that, subject to the relevant provisions of that Act¹ and to any order made by the Lord Chancellor under the Access to Justice Act 1999 prescribing an alternative destination of appeals², if any party to any proceedings in a county court is dissatisfied with the determination of the judge or jury, he may appeal from it to the Court of Appeal in such manner and subject to such conditions as may be provided by Civil Procedure Rules³. Where an appeal is brought under this provision in any action (now known as a 'claim')⁴, an appeal may be brought thereunder in respect of any claim or counterclaim in the action notwithstanding that there could have been no such appeal if that claim had been the subject of a separate action⁵. However, in proceedings in which either the plaintiff (now known as the 'claimant')⁶ or the defendant⁷ is claiming possession of any premises this provision does not confer any right of appeal on any question of fact if, by virtue of certain specified statutory provisions⁸ or of any other enactment⁹, the court can only grant possession on being satisfied that it is reasonable to do so¹⁰.

The County Courts Act 1984 further provides that without prejudice to the generality of the power to make rules of court¹¹, such rules may make provision for any appeal from the exercise by a district judge, assistant district judge or deputy district judge of any power given to him by virtue of any enactment to be to a judge of a county court¹².

The provisions set out above do not confer any right of appeal from any judgment or order where a right of appeal is conferred by some other enactment or take away any right of appeal from any judgment or order where a right of appeal is so conferred, and have effect subject to any enactment other than the 1984 Act¹³.

By virtue of the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, where the decision to be appealed is a decision¹⁴ of a county court, an appeal lies to the High Court, subject to certain exceptions¹⁵. Appeal from a decision of a district judge or deputy district judge of a county court lies to a judge of a county court¹⁶ and appeal from a final decision¹⁷ in certain claims allocated to the multi-track¹⁸ or made in specialised proceedings¹⁹ lies to the Court of Appeal²⁰, subject to obtaining any necessary permission²¹.

The procedure for appeals from a decision of a county court is governed by Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules²² and permission to appeal is required²³, save in specific circumstances²⁴. Every appeal will be limited to a review, rather than a re-hearing, of the decision of the lower court, save in specified circumstances²⁵.

The designated civil judge in consultation with his presiding judges has responsibility for allocating appeals from decisions of district judges to circuit judges²⁶.

Where an appeal which is to be heard by a county court would raise an important point of principle or practice or there is some other compelling reason for the Court of Appeal to hear it, the county court may order the appeal to be transferred to the Court of Appeal²⁷. Where an appeal is so transferred, the Court of Appeal may give such additional directions as are considered appropriate²⁸.

An application for permission to appeal from a decision of a county court which was itself made on appeal must be made to the Court of Appeal²⁹. If permission is granted the appeal will be heard by the Court of Appeal³⁰.

No appeal lies from any judgment, direction, decision or order of a judge of county courts if, before the judgment, direction, decision or order is given or made, the parties agree, in writing signed by themselves or their legal representatives or agents, that it shall be final³¹.

At the hearing of any proceedings in a county court in which there is a right of appeal or from which an appeal may be brought with leave, the judge must, at the request of any party, make a note of any question of law raised at the hearing and of the facts in evidence in relation to any such question and of his decision on any such question and of his determination of the proceedings³². Where such a note has been taken, then on the application of any party to the proceedings, and on payment by that party of any prescribed fee, the judge must, whether notice of appeal has been served or not, furnish that party with a signed copy of the note, which is to be used at the hearing of the appeal³³.

Particular provision is made in relation to statutory appeals to the county court and the High Court³⁴.

1680. Appeals to a judge of the High Court.

Subject to the provisions of the Supreme Court Act 1981 and to rules of court, the High Court has jurisdiction¹ to hear and determine any application, or any appeal, whether by way of case stated² or otherwise, which it has power to hear and determine under or by virtue of that or any other Act, and all such other appeals as it has jurisdiction to hear and determine immediately before 1 January 1982³. In addition to appeals from county court decisions, an appeal lies to a judge of the High Court where the decision⁴ to be appealed is made by a master or other person holding a specified office⁵, by a district judge of the High Court or by a person appointed to act as a deputy for such a person or to act as a temporary additional officer in any such office⁶.

The procedure for appeals is governed by Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁷ and permission to appeal is required⁸, save in specific circumstances⁹. Every appeal will be limited to a review, rather than a re-hearing, of the decision of the lower court, save in specified circumstances¹⁰.

Where, however, the decision to be appealed is a final decision¹¹ in a claim allocated by a court to the multi-track under certain specified provisions¹² or is a final decision made in specialist proceedings¹³, the appeal is to be made to the Court of Appeal¹⁴, subject to obtaining any necessary permission¹⁵.

Where an appeal which is to be heard by the High Court would raise an important point of principle or practice or there is some other compelling reason for the Court of Appeal to hear it, the High Court may order the appeal to be transferred to the Court of Appeal¹⁶.

The circumstances in which statutory appeals and appeals by way of case stated lie to the High Court are considered subsequently¹⁷.

Articles 2-6 do not apply to an appeal in family proceedings: see PARA 1658 text and note 10. Separate provision has now been made for the destination of appeals in cases involving adoption and related matters: see the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) (Family Proceedings) Order 2005, SI 2005/3276. As to the procedure on appeals to the Queen's Bench see The Queen's Bench Guide (2007 Edn) Ch 11; and as to the procedure on appeals to the Chancery Division see The Chancery Guide (2005 Edn) Ch 10. Contrast with pre-CPR practice where no appeal lay from a determination of a Chancery master, but the matter could be adjourned to the judge under RSC Ord 32 r 14(1) (revoked).

Prior to May 2000 appeals from district judges or masters to a judge in chambers were by way of a complete re-hearing, rather than a review; previous case law in relation to such appeals should therefore be approached with caution: see Tanfern Ltd v Cameron-MacDonald (Practice Note) [2000] 2 All ER 801, [2000] 1 WLR 1311, CA.

1681. Where an appeal to the High Court is heard.

Where an appeal lies to a High Court judge from the decision of a county court or a district judge of the High Court¹, the appellant's notice² must be filed (1) where the lower court³ is situated on a circuit other than the South Eastern Circuit, at an appeal centre⁴ on the circuit in which the lower court is situated; the appeal will be managed and heard at that appeal centre unless the appeal court⁵ orders otherwise⁶; (2) where the lower court is situated on the South Eastern Circuit, at an appeal centre on the South Eastern Circuit; the appeal will be managed and heard at the Royal Courts of Justice unless the appeal court orders otherwise⁷.

The appeal court may transfer an appeal to another appeal centre⁸ (whether or not on the same circuit)⁹ either on application by a party or of its own initiative. Where an appeal is so transferred, notice of transfer must be served on every person on whom the appellant's notice has been served¹⁰.

Directions may be given for an appeal to be heard at a hearing only centre¹¹ or for an application in an appeal to be heard at any other venue, instead of at the appeal centre managing the appeal¹². Unless such a direction has been made, any application in the appeal must be made at the appeal centre where the appeal is being managed¹³.

A respondent's notice¹⁴ must be filed at the appeal centre where the appellant's notice was filed, or at the Royal Courts of Justice, as appropriate, unless the appeal has been transferred to another appeal centre, in which case it must be filed at that appeal centre¹⁵.

Where the lower court is a county court, appeals and applications for permission to appeal will be heard by a High Court judge or by a person authorised¹⁶ to act as a judge of the High Court¹⁷. Other applications in the appeal may be heard and directions in the appeal may be given either by a High Court judge or by any person authorised¹⁸ to act as a judge of the High Court¹⁹. In the case of appeals from masters or district judges of the High Court, such appeals, applications for permission and any other applications in the appeal may be heard and directions in the appeal may be given by a High Court judge or by any person authorised²⁰ to act as a judge of the High Court, including a circuit judge or a recorder²¹.

The appeal court may send an appeal questionnaire to the appellant²².

1 See Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 8.1. Paragraph 8.1 states that para 8 (see the text and notes 3-22) applies in respect of appeals from a decision of a county court or district judge of the High Court; however para 8.14 also refers to appeals from masters and district judges: see the text and notes 20-21.

2 As to appellants' notices see PARA 1663.

3 As to the meaning of 'lower court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

4 An 'appeal centre' is a court centre where appeals to which Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 8 applies (see the text and note 1) may be managed and heard: para 8.2(a). The appeal centres for each circuit are as follows: (1) Midland Circuit: Birmingham and Nottingham; (2) North Eastern Circuit: Leeds, Newcastle and Sheffield; (3) Northern Circuit: Manchester, Liverpool, Preston and Chester; (4) Wales Circuit: Cardiff and Swansea; (5) Western Circuit: Bristol, Exeter and Winchester; (6) South Eastern Circuit: Royal Courts of Justice (for Central London), Lewes, Luton, Norwich, Reading, Chelmsford, St Albans, Maidstone and Oxford: see para 8.2, Table.

6 As to the meaning of 'appeal court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

8 In deciding whether to do so the court will have regard to the criteria in CPR 30.3 (criteria for a transfer order: see PARA 66): Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 8.9.

9 An appeal may not be transferred to an appeal centre on another circuit, either for management or hearing, unless the consent of a presiding judge of that circuit has been obtained: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 8.9.

10 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 8.9. As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2.

11 A 'hearing only centre' is a court centre where appeals to which Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 8 applies (see the text and note 1) may be heard by order made at an appeal centre: para 8.2(b). The hearing only centres for each circuit are as follows: (1) Midland Circuit: Lincoln, Leicester, Northampton and Stafford; (2) North Eastern Circuit: Teesside; (3) Northern Circuit: Carlisle; (4) Wales Circuit: Caernarfon; (5) Western Circuit: Truro and Plymouth; (6) South Eastern Circuit: none specified: see para 8.2, Table.

1682. Second appeals from appeals in county courts and High Court.

Where an appeal is made to a county court or the High Court in relation to any matter¹ and on hearing the appeal the court makes a decision in relation to that matter, a second appeal lies from that decision to the Court of Appeal and not to any other court². No appeal may be made to the Court of Appeal from such a decision³ unless the Court of Appeal considers that the appeal would raise an important point of principle or practice⁴ or there is some other compelling reason for the Court of Appeal to hear it⁵.

An application for permission to appeal from a decision of the High Court or a county court which was itself made on appeal must be made to the Court of Appeal⁶. If permission to appeal is granted the appeal will be heard by the Court of Appeal⁷.

1 The save in relation to a decision of an officer of the court authorised to assess costs by the Lord Chancellor: see the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 5; and PARA 1658 text and note 23. Article 5 does not apply to an appeal in family proceedings: see PARA 1658 note 10. As to costs generally see also PARA 1729 et seq.

2 See the Access to Justice Act 1999 (Destination of Appeals) Order 2000, SI 2000/1071, art 5; and PARA 1658 text and note 23. Permission is required from the Court of Appeal for any appeal to that court from a decision of a county court or the High Court which was itself made on appeal: CPR 52.13(1). As to the appropriate route for second appeals following an order for committal for contempt of court see Barnet London Borough Council v Hurst [2002] EWCA Civ 1009, [2002] 4 All ER 457. As to applications made for permission to appeal from a decision of a social security commissioner see Cooke v Secretary of State for Social Security [2001] EWCA Civ 734, [2002] 3 All ER 279 (since social security law is highly specialised branch of law, an appropriate degree of caution is to be exercised by court when hearing such appeals).

3 This provision does not apply in relation to an appeal in a criminal cause or matter: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 55(2). As to the meaning and effect of s 55 generally see Tanfern Ltd v Cameron-MacDonald (Practice Note) [2000] 2 All ER 801, [2000] 1 WLR 1311, CA and Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v Perks [2000] 4 All ER 1, [2001] 1 WLR 17, CA, particularly in relation to certain categories of appeal, including appeals by way of case stated and appeals from tribunals, which are to be treated as appeals to a county court or the High Court for the purposes of the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 55. See further PARA 1684 et seq.

4 Access to Justice Act 1999 s 55(1)(a); CPR 52.13(2)(a). The point of principle or practice must be a new one rather than one whose meaning and scope has already been determined: Uphill v BRB (Residuary) Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 60, [2005] 3 All ER 264, [2005] 1 WLR 2070. It is unlikely that a court will find that there is a compelling reason unless the prospects of success are very high; an exception is where there is a procedural irregularity in the first appeal: Uphill v BRB (Residuary) Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 60, [2005] 3 All ER 264, [2005] 1 WLR 2070. See also Convergence Group plc v Chantrey Vellacott (a firm) [2005] EWCA Civ 290, (2005) Times, 25 April (appeal against amendment to pleadings; decision that appeal would be allowed would constitute compelling reason). Whilst the judgment in Uphill v BRB (Residuary) Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 60, [2005] 1 WLR 2070 contained helpful guidance for the majority of cases, it was not intended to be exhaustive, and the Court of Appeal has some flexibility in the interpretation of the rules on second appeals in CPR 52.13(2): Cramp v Hastings Borough Council [2005] EWCA Civ 1005, [2005] 4 All ER 1014n; and see also Strickson v Preston County Court [2006] EWHC 3300 (Admin), [2006] All ER (D) 354 (Dec).

Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹ applies to statutory appeals (that is to say, where under any enactment an appeal, other than by way of case stated², lies to the court from a minister of state, government department, tribunal or other person³), with the following amendments⁴:

- 1240 (1) the appellant⁵ must file the appellant's notice⁶ at the appeal court⁷ within 28 days after the date of the decision of the lower court⁸ he wishes to appeal⁹;
- 1241 (2) where a statement of the reasons for a decision is given later than the notice of that decision, the period for filing the appellant's notice is calculated from the date on which the statement is received by the appellant¹⁰;
- 1242 (3) in addition to the respondents¹¹ to the appeal, the appellant must serve the appellant's notice¹² on the chairman of the tribunal, minister of state, government department or other person from whose decision the appeal is brought¹³;
- 1243 (4) where the appeal is from an order or decision of a minister of state or government department, the minister or department, as the case may be, is entitled to attend the hearing and to make representations to the court¹⁴.

1685. Statutory rights of appeal.

Specific provision is made in Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules as to various appeals provided for by statute¹. An appeal against a decision of the Secretary of State as to a dispute concerning perpetually renewable leases and underleases² lies to the High Court³.

A person who was a party to proceedings before a tribunal⁴ and is dissatisfied in point of law with the decision of the tribunal may appeal to the High Court⁵. The tribunal may, of its own initiative or at the request of a party to the proceedings before it, state, in the form of a special case for the decision of the High Court, a question of law arising in the course of the proceedings⁶.

Where the Secretary of State has given a decision in proceedings on an appeal under Part VII of the Town and Country Planning Act 1990⁷ against an enforcement notice, the appellant, the local planning authority or another person having an interest in the land to which the notice relates may appeal to the High Court against the decision on a point of law⁸. Where the Secretary of State has given a decision in proceedings on an appeal under Part VIII of that Act⁹ against a notice of requiring the planting of trees¹⁰, the appellant, the local planning authority or any person (other than the appellant) on whom the notice was served may appeal to the High Court against the decision on a point of law¹¹.

Where the Secretary of State has given a decision in proceedings on an appeal¹² against a listed building enforcement notice, the appellant, the local planning authority or any other person having an interest in the land to which the notice relates may appeal to the High Court against the decision on a point of law¹³.

In addition, requirements for appeals under other statutes are set out in the relevant practice direction¹⁴.

1687. Appeal from the Lands Tribunal.

A decision of the Lands Tribunal is final, except that any person who is aggrieved¹ by a decision of the tribunal as being erroneous in point of law may, in England and Wales, appeal² to the Court of Appeal³.

Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules applies to these appeals⁴ subject to the rule that the appellant's notice⁵ must be filed with the Court of Appeal within 28 days after the date of the decision of the tribunal⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'person aggrieved' see JUDICIAL REVIEW vol 61 (2010) PARA 664. (5) APPEALS BY WAY OF CASE STATED

1688. Appeal by case stated from the Crown Court; in principle.

With certain exceptions¹ any order, judgment or decision of the Crown Court may be questioned by any party to the proceedings, on the ground that it is wrong in law or is in excess of jurisdiction, by applying² to the Crown Court to have a case stated for the opinion of the High Court³. If the Crown Court considers that the application is frivolous, it may refuse to state a case⁴, in which event the High Court may by mandatory order require it to do so⁵. Where a case is stated for the opinion of the High Court, the High Court may, if it thinks fit, cause the case to be sent back for amendment and, where it does so, the case must be amended accordingly⁶.

The High Court must hear and determine the question arising on the case (or the case as amended)⁷ and must:

1248 (1) reverse, affirm or amend the determination in respect of which the case has been stated⁸; or

1249 (2) remit the matter to the Crown Court, with the opinion of the High Court⁹, and may make such other order in relation to the matter (including as to costs) as it thinks fit¹⁰. With one exception¹¹, a decision of the High Court under these provisions is final¹².

1 This provision does not apply to a judgment or other decision of the Crown Court relating to trial on indictment: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(2)(a). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. The reference to a decision of the Crown Court relating to trial on indictment does not include a decision relating to an order under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 17 (order requiring a person whose representation in respect of criminal proceedings in any court other than a magistrates' court is funded by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Criminal Defence Service to pay some or all of the cost of such representation: see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 174): Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(4) (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 24, Sch 4 paras 21, 22). Nor does it apply to any decision of that court under the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 which, by any provision of any of that Act, is to be final: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 28(2)(b) (amended by the Local Government (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1982 s 2, Sch 3 para 27(6); the Licensing Act 2003 s 199, Sch 7; and the Gambling Act 2005 s 356(4), Sch 17).

2 The procedure for applying to have a case stated by the Crown Court is laid out in the Crown Court Rules 1982, SI 1982/1109, r 26; and the Criminal Procedure Rules 2005, SI 2005/384, r 64.7: see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(4) (2006 Reissue) PARA 2005 et seq.

As to the choice between case stated and judicial review see R v Crown Court at Ipswich, ex p Baldwin[1981] 1 All ER 596n, DC, where it was said that in a case involving factual difficulties the convenient and proper course is to appeal by way of case stated and not to apply for judicial review.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(5) APPEALS BY WAY OF CASE STATED/1691. Appeal to the High Court by case stated from a minister, government department or tribunal.

1691. Appeal to the High Court by case stated from a minister, government department or tribunal.

Enactments may provide for an application to a minister, government department, tribunal or other person to have a case stated for the opinion of the court. The procedure may be set out in the enactment which provides for the right of appeal, or any rules of procedure relating to the minister or tribunal, department or other person¹. A case stated by a tribunal must be signed by the chairman or president of the tribunal; a case stated by any other person must be signed by that person or by a person authorised to do so². The minister or tribunal, department or other person must serve the stated case on the party who requests the case to be stated, or the party as a result of whose application to the court the case was stated³.

Where an enactment provides that a minister or tribunal, department or other person may state a case or refer a question of law to the court by way of case stated without a request being made, the minister or tribunal etc must serve the stated case on those parties that the minister or tribunal etc considers appropriate, and give notice to every other party to the proceedings that the stated case has been served on the party named and on the date specified in the notice⁴.

The party on whom the stated case was served must file the appellant's notice⁵ and the stated case at the appeal court⁶ and serve copies of the notice and stated case on the minister or tribunal etc who stated the case and on every party to the proceedings to which the stated case relates, within 14 days after the stated case was served on him⁷.

The court may amend the stated case or order it to be returned to the minister or tribunal etc for amendment and may draw inferences of fact from the facts stated in the case⁸.

Where the case is stated by a minister or government department, that minister or department, as the case may be, is entitled to appear on the appeal and to make representations to the court⁹.

An application to the court for an order requiring a minister or tribunal etc to state a case for the decision of the court, or to refer a question of law to the court by way of case stated, must be made to the court which would be the appeal court if the case were stated¹⁰.

The application notice must contain:

- 1256 (1) the grounds of the application¹¹;
- 1257 (2) the question of law on which it is sought to have the case stated¹²; and
- 1258 (3) any reasons given by the minister or tribunal etc for his or its refusal to state a case¹³.

It must be filed at the appeal court and served on the minister, department, secretary of the tribunal or other person as the case may be¹⁴ and on every party to the proceedings to which the application relates¹⁵, within 14 after the appellant receives notice of the refusal of his request to state a case¹⁶.

The jurisdiction of the High Court under any enactment to hear and determine a case stated or a question of law referred by way of case stated by a minister of the Crown, government department, tribunal or other person is to be exercised by a single judge of the Queen's Bench Division except where it is otherwise provided by statute or the Civil Procedure Rules¹⁷.

1 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 18.7. The High Court has statutory jurisdiction to hear and determine a question of law on a case stated on a wide variety of subjects, including, inter alia a determination (1) as to the title to registered land (see the Land Registration Act 2002; and LAND REGISTRATION vol 26 (2004 Reissue) PARA 1208); (2) of a tribunal of inquiry under the London Building Acts (Amendment) Act 1939 s 116, the case being heard and determined as if stated by magistrates (s 116(6)); (3) of a pensions appeal tribunal under the Pensions Appeal Tribunals Act 1943 ss 1-6 (see ARMED FORCES); (4) on an election petition (see the Representation of the People Act 1983 s 146(1)-(4); and ELECTIONS AND REFERENDUMS vol 15(4) (2007 Reissue) PARA 814); (5) of an agricultural land tribunal (see the Agriculture (Miscellaneous Provisions) Act 1954 s 6(1); and AGRICULTURAL LAND vol 1 (2008) PARA 673); (6) of a mental health review tribunal (see the Mental Health Act 1983 s 78(8); and MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 575); (7) of a Commons Commissioner (see the Commons Registration Act 1965 s 18(1), (2); and COMMONS vol 13 (2009) PARA 425); (8) of commissioners relating to income or corporation tax (see the Taxes Management Act 1970 s 56; the Income and Corporation Taxes Act 1988 s 705A; the General Commissioners (Jurisdiction and Procedure) Regulations 1994, SI 1994/1812, reg 22; and INCOME TAXATION); and (9) of any tribunal mentioned in the Tribunals and Inquiries Act 1992 s 11(1).

The tribunals mentioned in head (9) include registered homes tribunals, independent schools tribunals, employment tribunals, financial services tribunals and VAT and duties tribunals.

Examples of enactments under which a minister or other person may state a case for the opinion of the High Court are the Water Industry Act 1991 s 137 (discharge of trade effluent: see ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 46 (2010) PARA 1048); and the Town and Country Planning Act 1990 s 289 (various planning appeals: see TOWN AND COUNTRY PLANNING vol 46(2) (Reissue) PARAS 648-649.

2 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 18.8.

3 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 18.9. As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2.

Where a stated case has been served by the minister or tribunal etc in accordance with this provision, and the party on whom the stated case was served does not file an appellant's notice (see the text and notes 5-7), any other party may file an appellant's notice with the stated case at the appeal court and serve a copy of the notice and the case on the persons listed in heads (1) and (2) in the text, within 14 days from the last day on which the party on whom the stated case was served may file an appellant's notice: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 18.13, 18.14. (6) DIVISIONAL COURT APPEALS

1692. Appeal from a Divisional Court to the Court of Appeal.

Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules applies to appeals from a Divisional Court of the High Court to the Court of Appeal¹. Any appeal from the Divisional Court to which Part 52 applies can only be made with permission and it is submitted that this rule applies whether the Divisional Court acted under an original statutory or common law jurisdiction or not². Where the Divisional Court has dealt with a matter on appeal from another court, permission to appeal to the Court of Appeal is required³ as the appeal will be dealt with as a second appeal and this will be the case notwithstanding that the case was dealt with by way of case stated⁴.

Part 52 will not apply where the Divisional Court's order is final and no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal⁵.

1 CPR 52.1(1). No appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from any judgment of the High Court in any criminal cause or manner except where provided for under Administration of Justice Act 1960 (in matters concerning contempt of court: see CONTEMPT OF COURT vol 9(1) (Reissue) PARA 513); Supreme Court Act 1981 s 18(1)(a). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

2 CPR 52.3 (requirement for permission) applies to all appeals from the High Court to the Court of Appeal unless other provisions of the CPR or another enactment state to the contrary: see PARA 1661. Permission to appeal should, in general, be sought, from the trial judge at the time of judgment: Re T (A Child: Contact)[2002] EWCA Civ 1736, [2003] 1 FCR 303.

(7) ASSIGNMENT OF MISCELLANEOUS APPLICATIONS AND APPEALS TO THE HIGH COURT

1693. Introduction.

In a few specialist areas of practice many of the sometimes complex rules which applied prior to introduction of the Civil Procedure Rules have been preserved in the Schedules by Part 50 of the rules¹. Additional guidance can now be found in The Chancery Guide and *The Queen's Bench Guide*². The procedure on such appeals, however, is now generally governed by Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules³.

The following paragraphs set out the various matters in which applications and appeals are assigned to the Chancery Division⁴ and Queen's Bench Division⁵ of the High Court. They do not, however, purport to offer an exhaustive list.

1700. Procedure on appeals to the High Court.

Statutory appeals to the High Court are now dealt with by Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules and the general provisions of that Part apply to such appeals unless there is express provision to the contrary¹. Some additional general provisions for statutory appeals are made by Section II of the practice direction which is supplementary to Part 52 of the rules². Appellants' notices must normally be lodged with the High Court within 28 days of the date of the decision to be appealed³.

In addition to the general provisions for statutory appeals there are detailed provisions made relating to certain specific appeals, which must be consulted as they vary the general requirements in relation to time limits and documentation⁴.

(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL

1701. In general.

The Court of Appeal, which forms part of the Supreme Court of England and Wales¹, has two divisions, namely the Criminal Division and the Civil Division². It consists of ex-officio judges³ and not more than 38 ordinary judges⁴.

The Civil Division of the Court of Appeal is bound by its own decisions⁵, except (1) where there are conflicting decisions of the Court of Appeal; (2) where the earlier decision or decisions cannot stand with a decision of the House of Lords; or (3) where the court is satisfied that the previous decision was given per incuriam⁶.

The sittings of the Court of Appeal may be held, and any other business of the court may be conducted, at any place in England or Wales⁷.

Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules makes provision for procedure on appeals to the Court of Appeal⁸. The particular application of these rules to the Court of Appeal is discussed in the following paragraphs⁹.

1 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 1(1) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 4 para 26(1), (2) to substitute a reference to the Senior Courts for the reference to the Supreme Court; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court of England and Wales is renamed the Senior Courts of England and Wales: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

2 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 3(1). The President of the Criminal Division is the Lord Chief Justice and the President of the Civil Division is the Master of the Rolls: s 3(2). The Lord Chief Justice may, after consulting the Lord Chancellor, appoint one of the ordinary judges of the Court of Appeal to be vice-president of both divisions or he may appoint a vice-president of each division (s 3(3) (amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 15(1), Sch 4 Pt 1 paras 114, 116(1), (2)) who, in the absence of any ex-officio judge of the Court of Appeal, will preside at a sitting of the court (Supreme Court Act 1981 s 3(4)). Any number of courts of either division of the Court of Appeal may sit at the same time: s 3(5). The Lord Chief Justice may nominate a judicial office holder (as defined in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 109(4)) to exercise his functions under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 3(3): s 3(6) (added by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 116(3)).

3 The ex-officio judges are (1) any person who was Lord Chancellor before 12 June 2003; (2) any Lord of Appeal in Ordinary who at the date of his appointment was or was qualified for appointment as an ordinary judge of the Court of Appeal or who has held office under heads (3)-(6); (3) the Lord Chief Justice; (4) the Master of the Rolls; (5) the President of the Queen's Bench Division; (6) the President of the Family Division; and (7) the Chancellor of the High Court: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(2)(b)-(g) (amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 115(1), (2)(b)). A former Lord Chancellor or a Lord of Appeal in Ordinary need not sit and act in the Court of Appeal unless he consents to do so at the request of the Lord Chief Justice: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(2) (amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 115(2)(d)). The Lord Chief Justice may nominate a judicial office holder (as defined in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 109(4)) to exercise his function under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(2) of making such requests: s 2(2A) (added by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 115(3)). The Court of Appeal is to be taken as duly constituted notwithstanding any vacancy in any of the offices named above: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(6). For 'Lord of Appeal in Ordinary' there is prospectively substituted 'judge of the Supreme Court': s 2(2)(c) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 145, Sch 17 Pt 2 para 22(1), (2); at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

4 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(1) (amended by SI 2008/1777). An ordinary judge of the Court of Appeal (including the vice-president, if any, of either division) is styled 'Lord Justice of Appeal' or 'Lady Justice of Appeal': Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(3) (substituted by the Courts Act 2003 s 63(1)). Their number may be increased or further increased by Order in Council (Supreme Court Act 1981 s 2(4)) which must be laid before Parliament and approved by resolution of each House (s 2(5)). It is for the Lord Chancellor to recommend to Her Majesty the making of an Order under s 2(4): s 2(4A) (added by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 115(4)). The present order is the Maximum Number of Judges Order 2008, SI 2008/1777. The Civil Division of the Court of Appeal also has masters and deputy masters of the Civil Appeals Office: see CPR 52.16; and PARA 1711.

5 A different rule prevails in the Criminal Division, which is not so bound: see R v Gould[1968] 2 QB 65, [1968] 1 All ER 849, CA; and PARA 96.

6 Young v Bristol Aeroplane Co Ltd[1944] KB 718, [1944] 2 All ER 293, CA (affd [1946] AC 163, [1946] 1 All ER 98, HL); Morelle Ltd v Wakeling[1955] 2 QB 379, [1955] 1 All ER 708, CA; Gallie v Lee[1969] 2 Ch 17, [1969] 1 All ER 1062, CA (affd sub nom Saunders (Executrix of the Will of Gallie) v Anglia Building Society[1971] AC 1004, [1970] 3 All ER 961, HL). See also Davis v Johnson[1979] AC 264, [1978] 1 All ER 1132, HL. It is not settled whether the full Court of Appeal is bound by a decision on an interlocutory appeal made by a court consisting of two Lords Justices: see Boys v Chaplin[1968] 2 QB 1, [1968] 1 All ER 283, CA (affd [1971] AC 356, [1969] 2 All ER 1085, HL; and PARA 96); but see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 54(2)-(4A) (substituted and added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 59), under which a Court of Appeal consisting of one or more judges, as directed by the Master of the Rolls, is duly constituted for the purpose of exercising any of its jurisdiction; and PARA 1707. It should also be noted that where the House of Lords overturns a decision of the Court of Appeal but states that certain parts of its decision did not fall to be decided by the House of Lords then the reasoning of the Court of Appeal remains of a powerful persuasive influence on later Court of Appeal cases but is not binding: see Al-Mehdawi v Secretary of State for the Home Department [1990] 1 AC 876, [1989] 3 All ER 843, HL. The Court of Appeal is also free but not bound to depart from the ratio decidendi of its own earlier decision if it is satisfied that the European Patent Office Boards of Appeal have formed a settled view of European patent law which is inconsistent with that earlier decision: Actavis UK Ltd v Merck & Co Inc[2008] EWCA Civ 444, [2009] 1 All ER 196, [2008] IP & T 806. As to judgments of the Court of Appeal see further PARA 96. As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed.

7 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 57(1). Subject to rules of court, the places and the days and times at which the Court of Appeal may sit outside the Royal Courts of Justice must be determined in accordance with directions given by the Lord Chancellor after consulting the Lord Chief Justice: s 57(2) (amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 128(1), (2)). The Lord Chief Justice may nominate a judicial office holder (as defined in the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 109(4)) to exercise his functions under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 57: s 57(5) (added by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 4 Pt 1 para 128(3)). Vacations of the Court of Appeal and its offices are regulated by rules of court (see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 57(3); and PARA 65), which may also provide for such sittings of the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal during vacation as the Master of the Rolls with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor may determine (s 57(4)(a)), and they are required to provide for the transaction during vacation by judges of the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal of all such business as may require to be immediately or promptly transacted (s 57(4)(b)).

8 See CPR Pt 52; Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52; and PARA 1658 et seq.

9 Particular provision in relation to the Court of Appeal is made by CPR 52.13-52.16 (see PARAS 1682, 1702-1711); and by Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 paras 6.4-6.6 (appeal questionnaire: see PARA 1666); para 10.1 (appeals transferred to the Court of Appeal: see PARA 1679); and paras 15.1-15.14 (see PARA 1710 et seq).

UPDATE

1701 In general

NOTES 1, 3, 6--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/1702. Jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal.

1702. Jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal.

Subject to the provisions of the Supreme Court Act 1981¹, the Court of Appeal, which is a superior court of record², may exercise (1) all such jurisdiction, whether civil or criminal, as is conferred on it by the 1981 Act or any other Act³; and (2) all such other jurisdiction, whether civil or criminal, as was exercisable by it immediately before the commencement of the 1981 Act⁴. For all purposes of or incidental to the hearing and determination of any appeal to the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal and the amendment, execution and enforcement of any judgment or order made on such an appeal, the Court of Appeal has all the authority and jurisdiction of the court or tribunal from which the appeal was brought⁵. Moreover, any provision in the Supreme Court Act 1981 or any other Act which authorises or requires the taking of any steps for the execution or enforcement of a judgment or order of the High Court applies in relation to a judgment or order of the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal as it applies in relation to a judgment or order of the High Court⁶.

Part 52 of the Civil Procedure Rules makes general provision as to the powers of an appeal court⁷. Particular provision is made with regard to judicial review appeals⁸.

The Civil Division of the Court of Appeal exercises the whole jurisdiction of that court which is not exercisable by the Criminal Division⁹. This jurisdiction must be exercised so as to secure that, as far as possible, all matters in dispute between the parties are completely and finally determined, and all multiplicity of legal proceedings with respect to any of those matters is avoided¹⁰.

1 See eg the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 18, which imposes certain restrictions on appeals to the Court of Appeal; and PARA 1705. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

10 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 49(2). The court must also take into account the overriding objective of the new civil procedure, which is expressed in similar terms: see PARA 33. The jurisdiction of the Court of Appeal extends to the re-opening of an appeal hearing which it has already determined and given judgment on, where justice requires it and where no alternative effective remedy exists: Taylor v Lawrence [2002] EWCA Civ 90, [2003] QB 528, [2002] 2 All ER 353. Similarly, the Court of Appeal is not precluded from dealing with similar ancillary orders, especially where a party is not seeking to reverse any points already decided: KR v Bryn Alyn

Community (Holdings) Ltd (in liquidation) [2003] EWCA Civ 783, [2003] QB 1441. See also CPR 52.17 (PARA 1674), which now provides the procedure for re-opening an appeal or application for permission to appeal.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/1703. Who may appeal.

1703. Who may appeal.

Any of the parties to a claim or matter and any person served with notice of the judgment or order may appeal, by permission where permission is necessary¹. The Court of Appeal has jurisdiction to entertain an appeal where a party has had judgment given against him through his failure to attend the hearing, although the proper course is to apply first to the court below to restore the case². Where the claimant in a representative claim³ obtains an order, a member of the class represented cannot appeal from it⁴. One of two or more co-plaintiffs (now known as claimants) have been permitted to appeal, even though the others refused to join in the appeal⁵. If a defendant in a test case refuses to appeal, a defendant in one of the other cases may be given leave to prosecute the appeal on his own behalf⁶. A third party has been permitted to appeal provided an order was made that he should be bound by the result of the proceedings between the plaintiff and the defendant⁷.

The Civil Procedure Rules (CPR) provide that a person who is not a party but is directly affected by an order may apply to have it varied or set aside⁸ but do not deal with the situation where a non-party wishes to bring an appeal. However, it has been held that an interested person may obtain leave to appeal even if he was not a party to the proceedings in the lower court⁹. Leave is obtained by without notice (formerly known as ex parte) application to the Court of Appeal¹⁰ made within the time limited for appealing¹¹. A person who was not a party to the proceedings below may be added as a defendant to the action by the Court of Appeal in order to pursue the appeal by the original defendant, who may be granted leave to withdraw from the appeal¹². A person who could have been made a party, and who might have appealed, cannot afterwards bring proceedings for a declaration that the judgment or order is not binding on him¹³.

Where the case has not been heard, but merely struck out for non-attendance, the court below may restore and hear it, even after the order dismissing it has been drawn up (Rackham v Tabrum (1923) 129 LT 24), but if there has been a hearing (eg of an application to a Divisional Court in the respondent's absence), that court may not reinstate the case after judgment has been passed and entered (Hession v Jones [1914] 2 KB 421), and the remedy is by appeal (Re Grove (1888) 4 TLR 272, CA). 1706. Other restrictions on appeals.

An appeal will not lie where the parties have agreed not to appeal, where such agreement is embodied in an order¹, although a child will not be so bound where the agreement is not for his benefit². A party may be estopped from appealing by his conduct after the judgment or award, or may by that conduct have released the right of appeal at law or in equity³.

An appeal does not lie when the judge acts as arbitrator, not as a judge⁴, nor where his decision is not given in a judicial capacity⁵, or is given by way of an administrative decision⁶.

An appeal does not lie where the question or issue raised for the determination of the appellate court, whether it be the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords, has ceased to be a live issue, or where the parties have no longer any real interest in the result of the appeal, because of an agreement that the decision of the appellate court is not to affect their proprietary interest⁷ or for any other reasons, except in exceptional circumstances⁸. Nor does an appeal lie where the question or issue raised is or where the facts are hypothetical⁹.

The Court of Appeal may refuse to entertain an appeal where the amount or issue at stake is trifling¹⁰.

1707. Composition of the Court of Appeal.

The Civil Division of the Court of Appeal is duly constituted for the purpose of exercising any of its jurisdiction if it consists of one or more judges¹. The Master of the Rolls may, with the concurrence of the Lord Chancellor, give (or vary or revoke) directions about the minimum number of judges of which a court must consist if it is to be duly constituted for the purpose of any description of proceedings². The Master of the Rolls, or any Lord Justice of Appeal designated by him, may determine the number of judges of which a court is to consist for the purpose of any particular proceedings³. The Master of the Rolls may also give directions as to what is to happen in any particular case where one or more members of a court which has partly heard proceedings are unable to continue⁴.

Assessors⁵ may be called in to assist the Court of Appeal⁶, and scientific advisers⁷ may be called in to assist it in proceedings on appeal from the Patents Court⁸.

Where an appeal has been heard by a court consisting of an even number of judges and the members of the court are equally divided, then, on the application of any party to the appeal, the case must be reargued before and determined by an uneven number of judges not less than three, before any appeal to the House of Lords⁹.

No judge may sit as a member of the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal on the hearing of, or may determine any application in proceedings incidental or preliminary to, an appeal from a judgment or order made in any case by himself or by any court of which he was a member¹⁰.

NOTE 9--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/1708. Assignment of appeals to the Court of Appeal.

1708. Assignment of appeals to the Court of Appeal.

Where in any proceedings in a county court or the High Court a person appeals, or seeks permission to appeal, to a court other than the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords, then either the Master of the Rolls, or the court from which or to which the appeal is made, or from which permission to appeal is sought, may direct that the appeal is to be heard instead by the Court of Appeal¹.

Where the court² from or to which an appeal³ is made or from which permission to appeal is sought (the 'relevant court') considers that:

- 1285 (1) an appeal which is to be heard by a county court or the High Court would raise an important point of principle or practice; or
- 1286 (2) there is some other compelling reason for the Court of Appeal to hear it, the relevant court may order the appeal to be transferred to the Court of Appeal⁴.

The Master of the Rolls or the Court of Appeal may remit an appeal to the court in which the original appeal was or would have been brought⁵.

1 Access to Justice Act 1999 s 57(1) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 para 68(1), (2), to substitute 'Supreme Court' for 'House of Lords'; at the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed). The power conferred on the court mentioned in the text is subject to rules of court: see the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 57(2).

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 As to the meaning of 'appeal' see PARA 1658 note 5.

4 CPR 52.14(1). Where an appeal is transferred to the Court of Appeal under CPR 52.14 the Court of Appeal may give such additional directions as are considered appropriate: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 10.1. A case cannot be transferred under CPR 52.14 unless permission to appeal has been granted: see 7E Communications Ltd v Vertex Antennentechnik GmbH [2007] EWCA Civ 140, [2007] 2 All ER (Comm) 798.

5 CPR 52.14(2). The exceptional power created by CPR 52.14 whereby a court lower than the Court of Appeal may transfer an appeal to the Court of Appeal on the ground that it satisfies one of the tests set out in that rule should be sparingly used and in any case of doubt the matter should be referred to the Master of the Rolls for consideration, since the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 57 confers an identical power on him: Clark (Inspector of Taxes) v Perks [2000] 4 All ER 1, [2001] 1 WLR 17, CA.

1708 Assignment of appeals to the Court of Appeal

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/1709. Listing.

1709. Listing.

The management of the Civil Appeals List of the Court of Appeal is dealt with by the listing officer under the direction of the master¹. The list is divided as follows²:

- 1287 (1) the applications list: applications for permission to appeal and other applications;
- 1288 (2) the appeals list: appeals where permission to appeal has been given or where an appeal lies without permission being required;
- 1289 (3) the expedited list: appeals or applications where the Court of Appeal has directed an expedited hearing³;
- 1290 (4) the stand-out list: appeals or applications which, for good reason, are not at present ready to proceed and have been stood out by judicial direction;
- 1291 (5) the fixtures list: where a hearing date for the appeal is fixed in advance;
- 1292 (6) the second fixtures list: if an appeal is designated as a 'second fixture' it means that a hearing date is arranged in advance on the express basis that the list is fully booked for the period in question and therefore the case will be heard only if a suitable gap occurs in the list;
- 1293 (7) the short-warned list: appeals which the court considers may be prepared for the hearing by an advocate other than the one originally instructed with a half day's notice or such other period as the court may direct⁴;
- 1294 (8) the special fixtures list: for cases needing particular arrangements, such as the need to list a number of cases before the same constitution, in a particular order, during a particular period or at a given location⁵.

1 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 15.7. As to lists see also PARA 116. Where the Civil Appeals Listing Office has failed to ascertain that leading counsel is prebooked, the fixture for hearing of an appeal need not be vacated: Newport City Council v Chares (2008) Times, 29 July, CA.

4 Once an appeal is listed for hearing from the short warned list it becomes the immediate professional duty of the advocate instructed in the appeal, if he is unable to appear at the hearing, to take all practicable measures to ensure that his lay client is represented at the hearing by an advocate who is fully instructed and able to argue the appeal: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 15.9(6). NOTE 4--See President's Guidance (Family Division) (listing in London) [2009] 1 FLR 374.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/1710. Documentation etc.

1710. Documentation etc.

The documents relevant to proceedings in the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal must be filed in the Civil Appeals Office Registry¹. The Civil Appeals Office will not serve documents and where service is required² it must be effected by the parties³.

To ensure that all requests for directions are centrally monitored and correctly allocated, all requests for directions or rulings (whether relating to listing or any other matters) should be made to the Civil Appeals Office. Those seeking directions or rulings must not approach the supervising Lord Justice either directly, or via his clerk⁴.

Once the parties have been notified of the date fixed for hearing the appellant's⁵ advocate must, after consulting his opponent, file one bundle containing photocopies of the authorities upon which each side will rely at the hearing, with the relevant passages marked. There will in general be no need to include authorities for propositions not in dispute. This bundle must be filed at least seven days before the hearing or, where the period of notice of the hearing is less than seven days, immediately⁶.

In cases where the appeal bundle comprises more than 500 pages, exclusive of transcripts, the appellant's solicitors must, after consultation with the respondent's solicitors, also prepare and file with the court, in addition to copies of the appeal bundle⁷ the requisite number of copies of a core bundle⁸.

1 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 15.1(1). The registry is situated at Room E307, Royal Courts of Justice, Strand, London, WC2A 2LL: para 15.1(1). As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8. A party to an appeal in the Court of Appeal, Civil Division may, where permitted to do so by the relevant guidelines, file an appellant's notice, a respondent's notice or an application notice by e-mail or electronically using the online forms service on the Court of Appeal, Civil Division website at www.civilappeals.gov.uk: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52: paras 15.1A(1), (2), 15.1B(1), (2). 5 As to the meaning of 'appellant' see PARA 1660 note 1.

6 Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 15.11(1)-(3). Such bundles should not normally contain more than ten authorities unless the scale of the appeal warrants more extensive citation: para 15.11(2)(c). If, through some oversight, a party intends, during the hearing, to refer to other authorities, the parties may agree a second agreed bundle to be filed by the appellant's advocate at least 48 hours before the hearing commences: para 15.11(4). A bundle of authorities must bear a certification by the advocates responsible for arguing the case that the requirements of sub-para 5.10(3)-(5) as to authorities in skeleton arguments (see PARA 1663 note 13) have been complied with in respect of each authority included: para 15.11(5). Only in the most exceptional circumstances can the papers for an appeal hearing be filed with the court less than seven days before the hearing, and even then both the court and the other parties must be told the reasons for any default: Mlauzi v Secretary of State for the Home Department [2005] EWCA Civ 128, (2005) Times, 7 February. - 1296 (2) any other matter where there is no substantial dispute between the parties⁴; and
- 1297 (3) the dismissal of an appeal⁵ or application where a party has failed to comply with any order, rule or practice direction⁶.

A court officer may not, however, decide an application for permission to appeal⁷, bail pending an appeal⁸, an injunction⁹ or a stay¹⁰ of any proceedings, other than a temporary stay of any order or decision of the lower court¹¹ over a period when the Court of Appeal is not sitting or cannot conveniently be convened¹².

Decisions of a court officer may be made without a hearing¹³.

Rules of court may provide that decisions of the Court of Appeal which are taken by a single judge or any officer or member of staff of that court in proceedings incidental to any cause or matter pending before the Civil Division of that court and which do not involve the determination of an appeal, or of an application for permission to appeal, may be called into question in such manner as may be prescribed¹⁴. No appeal lies to the House of Lords from a decision which may be called into question pursuant to rules so made¹⁵.

A party may request any decision of a court officer to be reviewed by the Court of Appeal¹⁶. At the request of a party, a hearing will be held to reconsider a decision of a single judge¹⁷ or a court officer, made without a hearing¹⁸. A single judge may refer any matter for a decision by a court consisting of two or more judges¹⁹.

1711 Who may exercise the powers of the Court of Appeal

1712. Reserved judgments of the Court of Appeal.

Although previously special provision was made as to the availability of reserved judgments of the Court of Appeal before hand down, the procedure is now the same for all reserved judgments which the court intends to hand down in writing¹.

¹ Practice Direction--Reserved Judgments PD 40E para 1. That practice direction contains provisions relating to reserved judgments: Practice Direction--Appeals PD 52 para 15.12. See PARA 1138. Where any consequential orders are agreed in advance, the parties' advocates need not attend the handing down of reserved judgments of the Court of Appeal; if the parties' advocates do attend in circumstances which the Court of Appeal regard as not requiring such attendance, the costs of the attendance may be disallowed: see Practice Note [2002] 1 All ER 160.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(8) APPEALS TO THE COURT OF APPEAL/1713. The Court of Appeal's power to order a new trial by reason of course taken by judge.

1713. The Court of Appeal's power to order a new trial by reason of course taken by judge.

The Court of Appeal will grant an appeal if the decision of the lower court was wrong or if it was unjust because of serious procedural or other irregularity in the proceedings in the lower court¹. In the latter instance a new trial may be ordered² if some substantial wrong or miscarriage³ has been occasioned at the trial by the judge misdirecting the jury⁴, or improperly admitting or rejecting evidence⁵, or intervening in the proceedings so excessively as to affect the fairness of the trial⁶, or not leaving to the jury a question which he was asked to leave to them and which he ought to have left to them⁷, or giving judgment for the defendant upon the claimant's opening, without the claimant's consent and without allowing him to call evidence⁸, or improperly withdrawing the case from the jury⁹, or improperly attempting to coerce the jury¹⁰, or improperly allowing or refusing to allow an amendment, postponement or adjournment¹¹. A summing up by a judge may amount to a misdirection if, after having correctly stated the relevant law, he persistently violates that law in his examination of the evidence¹². A new trial may be ordered where on a claim and counterclaim the judge, having found that one of two conflicting stories must be true, has failed to decide between them¹³.

1 See CPR 52.11(3); and PARA 1662. See also Vogon International Ltd v Serious Fraud Office [2004] EWCA Civ 104, [2004] All ER (D) 58 (Feb) (judge should not have made adverse findings as to honesty of claimant when claimant had not had an opportunity to defend itself). As to the meaning of 'lower court' see PARA 1660 note 2.

2 See CPR 52.10(2)(c); and PARA 1671. A new trial will not generally be ordered upon grounds not raised in the court below and not included in the notice of appeal: Wilson v United Counties Bank Ltd [1920] AC 102, 139, HL. See also Blewitt v Tritton [1892] 2 QB 327, CA. In Automatic Woodturning Co Ltd v Stringer [1957] AC 544, [1957] 1 All ER 90, HL, it was held that there was no justification for a new trial since the trial judge had dealt with the issue in question and all relevant evidence had been before him. As to the use of cases decided under the old rules as an aid to interpreting the Civil Procedure Rules see PARA 33 text and note 2.

3 A new trial cannot be ordered on the ground of misdirection or the improper admission or rejection of evidence unless substantial wrong or miscarriage has been occasioned: see PARA 1716.

1714. New trial by reason of verdict or misconduct of jury.

A new trial may be ordered if the jury gave a verdict which was against the weight of evidence, and such that a jury reviewing the whole of the evidence reasonably could not properly find¹, or if the jury arrived at its verdict by improper means² or during a trial was guilty of misconduct which was of a nature to affect its verdict³. However, the Court of Appeal can revoke the jury's verdict without then ordering a re-trial⁴.

1715. Other grounds for a new trial.

A new trial may be ordered if a substantially wrong verdict has been given owing to one party having been taken by surprise¹, or to the misconduct of a party or his solicitor², or to the absence of a party or his solicitor or counsel³, or to the discovery of fresh evidence which could not with reasonable diligence have been discovered before the trial⁴, or to the confession of a witness that his evidence was false⁵, or to some inadvertence, mistake or slip in the proceedings⁶.

1716. When a new trial will not be granted.

The Court of Appeal is not bound to order a new trial on the ground of misdirection¹, or of the improper admission or rejection of evidence, or because the jury's verdict was not taken upon a question which the trial judge was not asked to leave to it, unless in the opinion of the Court of Appeal some substantial wrong or miscarriage has been thereby occasioned². If it appears to the Court of Appeal that any such wrong or miscarriage affects part only of the matter in controversy, or one or some only of the parties, it may order a new trial as to that part only, or as to that party or those parties only, and give final judgment as to the remainder. A new trial will not generally be granted on a point which was not taken at the trial or was not taken until after the case on both sides was closed³.

1 The charge to the jury must be taken as a whole (Jones v Canadian Pacific Rly Co (1913) 83 LJPC 13), and each case depends on its own circumstances (Bray v Ford [1896] AC 44, HL). However, if there is a misdirection and the jury, properly directed, might have returned a different verdict, there is a miscarriage of justice: Bray v Ford [1896] AC 44, HL; Hobbs v CT Tinling & Co Ltd, Hobbs v Nottingham Journal Ltd [1929] 2 KB 1, CA. See, however, Jefferson v Paskell [1916] 1 KB 57, CA; Burvill v Vickers Ltd [1916] 1 KB 180, CA; Thomas v Moore [1918] 1 KB 555, CA; Sutherland v Stopes [1925] AC 47, HL; Poliakoff v News Chronicle Ltd [1939] 1 All ER 390, CA. The fact that a litigant cannot secure the production of a document withheld without just excuse by a third person is not a ground for directing a new trial: Rowell v Pratt [1938] AC 101, [1937] 3 All ER 660, HL. For an example of a substantial misdirection see Braddock v Bevins [1948] 1 KB 580, [1948] 1 All ER 450, CA; and LIBEL AND SLANDER vol 28 (Reissue) PARA 244. An erroneous direction as to the onus of proof is a ground for a new trial if it led to substantial injustice: see Letchumanan Chettier v Sadayappa Chettier [1953] 1 WLR 269, PC. As to the use of cases decided under the old rules as an aid to interpreting the Civil Procedure Rules see PARA 33 text and note 2. As to jury trial in civil cases see PARA 1132.

1716 When a new trial will not be granted

NOTE 2--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(9) APPEALS TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS/1717. Appeal from the Court of Appeal.

(9) APPEALS TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS

1717. Appeal from the Court of Appeal.

Subject to certain restrictions¹, an appeal lies to the House of Lords from any order or judgment made or given by the Court of Appeal², but only with leave of that court or of the House of Lords³. The application for leave to appeal must first be made to the Court of Appeal⁴, and, if refused, may be made by petition for leave to appeal⁵ to be heard and determined by a committee of the House of Lords⁶, which sits in public. The appeal itself is by way of petition⁷. Presentation of an appeal does not entitle a respondent to present a cross-appeal and any respondent who wishes to reverse or vary the order appealed from must first obtain leave⁸. A petition for leave to appeal must be lodged in the Judicial Office of the House of Lords within one month of the date on which an order appealed was made⁹.

An appeal does not lie from any of the courts from which an appeal to the House of Lords is given by the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 (see the text and notes 2-7), except in the manner provided by that Act, and subject to such conditions as to the value of the subject matter in dispute, and as to giving security for costs, and as to the time within which the appeal is to be brought, and generally as to all matters of practice and procedure, or otherwise, as may be imposed by orders of the House of Lords: s 11 (amended by the Statute Law Revision Act 1894). Certain Scottish cases are excluded: see the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 12; and COURTS. The Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 is repealed by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 ss 145, 146, Sch 17 Pt 2 para 9, Sch 18 Pt 5 as from a day to be appointed. As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed.

No appeal lies from a decision of the Court of Appeal as to whether a judgment or order is interlocutory or final (see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 60(2)); or from the decision of the Court of Appeal on any appeal from a county court in probate proceedings (see the County Courts Act 1984 s 82). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. As to the House of Lords directions and other provisions restricting appeals see Practice Directions and Standing Orders applicable to Civil Appeals (2007); the text and notes 4-9; PARA 1719; and COURTS. As to appeals to the House of Lords from Divisional Courts see PARA 1718.

Dismissal by the Court of Appeal of an appeal against refusal of leave to apply for judicial review is not an order or judgment of the Court of Appeal: Re Poh [1983] 1 All ER 287, HL, doubted in Kemper Reinsurance Co v Minister of Finance (Bermuda) [2000] 1 AC 1, [1998] 3 WLR 630, PC. The House of Lords has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from the Court of Appeal against a refusal to grant permission to apply for judicial review: R v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry, ex p Eastaway [2001] 1 All ER 27, [2000] 1 WLR 2222, HL. A right of appeal to the House of Lords against the Court of Appeal's refusal to grant leave to apply for judicial review does exist, particularly where the Court of Appeal has granted permission for an appeal against a first instance refusal: R (on the application of Burkett) v Hammersmith and Fulham London Borough Council [2002] UKHL 23, [2002] 3 All ER 97, [2002] 1 WLR 1593.

2 Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 3(1) (prospectively repealed: see note 1).

Nothing in the Administration of Justice (Appeals) Act 1934 s 1 affects any restriction otherwise existing on the bringing of appeals from the Court of Appeal to the House of Lords: s 1(3) (as so prospectively repealed).

4 See Practice Directions and Standing Orders applicable to Civil Appeals (2007) direction 1.6.

5 Petitions for leave to appeal are not admissible in the circumstances set out in Practice Directions and Standing Orders applicable to Civil Appeals (2007) directions 1.14-1.16.

6 See the Administration of Justice (Appeals) Act 1934 s 1(2); and COURTS. The Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 5 (amended by SI 2006/1016) (attendance of certain number of Lords of Appeal required at hearing and determination of appeals) applies to the hearing and determination of any such petition by a committee of the House as it applies to the hearing and determination of an appeal by the House: Administration of Justice (Appeals) Act 1934 s 1(2). As to the appeal committee and the hearing of the petition see PARA 1719; and COURTS.

7 See the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 s 4 (prospectively repealed: see note 1); and COURTS.

8 See Practice Directions and Standing Orders applicable to Civil Appeals (2007) direction 30.1. A petition for leave to cross-appeal may only be lodged after leave to appeal has been granted to the original petitioner for leave to appeal: direction 30.2.

1717 Appeal from the Court of Appeal

NOTES 1, 3--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(9) APPEALS TO THE HOUSE OF LORDS/1718. Appeals direct from the High Court.

1718. Appeals direct from the High Court.

Subject to specified conditions¹, an appeal may be brought direct to the House of Lords from a decision of the High Court² in any civil proceedings³ before a single judge⁴ or a Divisional Court⁵. The initial condition which must be satisfied is that, on the application of a party to the proceedings⁶, either the judge or the Divisional Court, as the case may be, must grant a certificate to the effect that the relevant conditions⁷ in relation to the decision are fulfilled⁸, that a sufficient case for a direct appeal to the House of Lords has been made out to justify an application to bring such an appeal⁹ and that all the parties consent to the grant of the certificate¹⁰. No appeal lies against the grant or refusal of such a certificate¹¹, the grant being discretionary¹².

Within one month¹³ of the grant of the certificate, any party may apply to the House of Lords by petition¹⁴ for leave for the appeal to be brought directly to the House¹⁵, the application being determined by a committee of the House¹⁶ without a hearing¹⁷. If on such an application it appears to the House to be expedient to do so, it may grant leave for the appeal to be brought directly to it, whereupon no appeal from the decision of the High Court will lie to the Court of Appeal¹⁸, but an appeal from that decision will lie instead to the House of Lords¹⁹. Without prejudice to this provision, no appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the decision of the court below in respect of which a certificate has been granted until (1) the time for applying for leave to the House of Lords has expired²⁰; and (2) where such an application is made, the application has been determined by the House²¹.

Application may be made²² for an order to make an order of the House of Lords an order of the High Court²³.

1 See the Administration of Justice Act 1969 ss 12-15; the text and notes 3-21; and COURTS.

2 This mode of direct appeal, popularly called a 'leapfrog appeal', bypasses the Court of Appeal.

3 'Civil proceedings' means any proceedings other than proceedings in a criminal cause or matter: Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 12(8). No certificate under s 12 (see the text and notes 4-11) may, however, be granted in respect of a decision of the judge in any proceedings where by virtue of any enactment, apart from the provisions of Pt II (ss 12-16), (1) no appeal would lie from that decision to the Court of Appeal, with or without the leave of the judge or of the Court of Appeal; or (2) no appeal would (with or without the leave of the Court of Appeal or of the House of Lords) lie from any decision of the Court of Appeal on an appeal from the decision of the judge: s 15(1), (2)(b) (s 15(2)(b) amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 40(4), Sch 9 Pt 1 para 20(1), (6), to substitute a reference to the Supreme Court for the reference to the House of Lords; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed). Where by virtue of any enactment, apart from the provisions of Pt II, no appeal would lie to the Court of Appeal from the decision of the judge except with the leave of the judge or of the Court of Appeal, no certificate may be granted under s 12 in respect of that decision unless it appears to the judge that apart from the provisions of that Part it would be a proper case for granting such leave: Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 15(3). Further, no certificate may be granted under s 12 where the decision of the judge, or any order made by him in pursuance of that decision, is made in the exercise of jurisdiction to punish for contempt of court: s 15(4).

4 Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 12(2)(a) (amended by the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 152(4), Sch 7).

5 Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 12(2)(c).

6 The application must be made immediately after judgment is given (Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 12(4)), although a later application may be entertained (see s 12(4) proviso).

7 These are that a point of law of general public importance is involved and that that point either relates wholly or mainly to the construction of an enactment or of a statutory instrument and has been fully argued and has been considered in the judgment of the judge in the proceedings (see the Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 12(3)(a)), or is one in respect of which the court below is bound by a previous decision of the Court of Appeal or the House of Lords and was fully considered in the judgments given in those previous proceedings (see s 12(3)(b) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 9 Pt 1 para 20(3), to substitute references to the Supreme Court for the references to the House of Lords; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed)).

Where a party obtains a certificate under the Administration of Justice Act 1969 s 12 to apply for leave to appeal on two issues directly to the House of Lords and the House grants permission to appeal in respect of only one of the issues, the party can appeal to the Court of Appeal on the other issue: R (on the application of Jones) v Ceredigion County Council [2007] UKHL 24, [2007] 3 All ER 781, [2007] 1 WLR 1400. 1719 Procedure

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(10) REFERENCES TO THE EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE/1720. In general.

(10) REFERENCES TO THE EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE

1720. In general.

In order to ensure the uniform interpretation and application of Community law, the Treaties¹ provide a mechanism for the courts and tribunals of member states to seek the guidance of the European Court of Justice (the 'European Court') on matters of law². The request for guidance by the national court is known as a preliminary reference, and the answer is known as a preliminary ruling.

The European Court³ has jurisdiction to give preliminary rulings on (1) the interpretation of the Treaties⁴; (2) the validity and interpretation of acts of the institutions of the Community⁵; and (3) the interpretation of the statutes of bodies established by an act of the Council of Ministers of the Community where those statutes so provide⁶.

Where such a question is raised before any court or tribunal of a member state, that court or tribunal may, if it considers that a decision on the question is necessary⁷ to enable it to give judgment, request the European Court to give a ruling on it⁸. Where any such question is raised before a court or tribunal against whose decision there is no judicial remedy under national law⁹, that court or tribunal must bring the matter before the European Court¹⁰, unless the European Court has already ruled on the point or unless the correct application of Community law is obvious¹¹.

The decision to refer a question to the European Court is made by the national court having regard to the views of the parties in the case. Questions referred for a preliminary ruling must be limited to the interpretation or validity of a provision of Community law, since the European Court does not have jurisdiction to interpret national law or assess its validity. On receipt of a preliminary ruling, it is for the referring court to apply the relevant rule of Community law to the facts of the specific case before it¹².

A preliminary reference will generally involve a stay of the national proceedings. The national court retains overall control of the case and can withdraw the reference at any time before a ruling is given¹³. If a case settles the referring court is under a duty to withdraw a reference¹⁴. The ruling of the European Court is preliminary in that it precedes the judgment of the referring court¹⁵. To the extent that it cannot be disturbed other than by a subsequent decision of the European Court, it is final. It binds all national courts in the European Union¹⁶.

Questions relating to the interpretation of the Brussels Convention on Jurisdiction and the Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters (the 'Brussels Convention')¹⁷ and the Rome Convention on the Law Applicable to Contractual Obligations can also be addressed to the European Court¹⁸.

In cases concerning the interpretation of the competition rules of the EC Treaty¹⁹, an alternative reference procedure to the European Commission is available²⁰.

1721. Which bodies can refer.

The question whether a referring body is a 'court or tribunal' is a matter of Community law¹. If a body enjoys official status² and exercises a judicial function³ it will usually be a 'court or tribunal'⁴. The class of 'courts or tribunals' from which the European Court will accept references is very wide. References have been made from statutory tribunals such as employment tribunals⁵, social security appeal tribunals⁶, and National Insurance Commissioners⁷. Government officials or departments which make administrative decisions are not 'courts or tribunals'⁸. Professional associations may, depending on the precise nature of their functions, be 'courts or tribunals'⁹, but privately appointed arbitrators are not¹⁰.

The Brussels and Rome Conventions only permit preliminary references to be made by appellate courts¹¹.

On receipt of a reference, the European Court is entitled to confirm whether it has emanated from a 'court or tribunal' but may not inquire whether the decision to refer was made in accordance with the national law of the referring body: Case 65/81: Reina v Landeskreditbank Baden-Württemberg [1982] ECR 33, [1982] 1 CMLR 744, ECJ.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(10) REFERENCES TO THE EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE/1722. Jurisdiction to refer.

1722. Jurisdiction to refer.

Four jurisdictional requirements must be satisfied before a reference can be made to the European Court of Justice: (1) the question(s) must relate to provisions of Community law upon which the European Court has jurisdiction to give a ruling; (2) the questions(s) must relate to the interpretation and/or validity of those provisions; (3) the question(s) must have been raised before the national court or tribunal; (4) a decision on the question(s) must be necessary to enable the national court or tribunal to give judgment¹.

As well as ruling on the interpretation of the founding treaties and secondary legislation, the European Court has interpreted international agreements concluded by the European Community² and the 'general principles of law' derived from the laws of the member states³. The European Court has no jurisdiction to interpret the national laws of the member states⁴, even when those laws were introduced in order to give effect to Community law obligations⁵.

The European Court alone has the power to declare a Community act void. National courts may not declare provisions of Community law to be invalid without first having referred the matter to the European Court for a preliminary ruling⁶.

Community law does not stipulate at what stage in proceedings a question for reference must be raised⁷. A question is not 'raised' simply because one party has asserted it. If the court determines there to be no arguable point of Community law it will not have been raised⁸.

The requirement that a decision on Community law be 'necessary' is a test of relevance. The question referred must be at least potentially capable of resolving the case or substantially determinative of it⁹.

In principle the European Court is bound to give a ruling on the interpretation of a provision of Community law where it is sought¹⁰. However the European Court may disagree with the national court's assessment of necessity and refuse a reference on the grounds, inter alia, that the question is not relevant to the dispute. It may also decline jurisdiction if there is no real dispute between the parties¹¹.

The European Court has only limited jurisdiction over the provisions contained in the Treaty on European Union¹².

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(10) REFERENCES TO THE EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE/1723. Discretion to refer.

1723. Discretion to refer.

Most courts and tribunals have a broad discretion in deciding whether or not to refer a question to the European Court of Justice¹. The European Court has refrained from offering guidance to the national courts on the exercise of this discretion². The most important factor in determining whether to make a preliminary reference will be the difficulty of the Community law point in issue³. Other factors include which court is 'best fitted to decide the question'⁴, the importance of the point⁵, delay⁶, the expense⁷, whether a similar question is pending before the European Court⁸ and the wishes of the parties⁹.

Even courts and tribunals which generally have a discretion to refer may find their discretion constrained if the validity of a Community act is challenged. Where the validity of a Community act is challenged before a national court, the power to declare the act invalid is reserved to the European Court¹⁰. A national court may reject a plea challenging the validity of such an act. Where the national court intends to question the validity of a Community act, the matter must be referred to the European Court¹¹. In certain circumstances, a national court is empowered to suspend the application of a Community act on an interim basis¹².

Just as the national court has a discretion in deciding whether to refer, it has an unfettered discretion to determine when to refer¹³. The European Court appears to favour references from lower courts but will not interfere with an appellate court's decision to quash the decision of a lower court to make a reference¹⁴. Both the European Court and national courts advise that reference should be made after the facts have been found, or identified, by the national court or agreed by the parties¹⁵. References are frequently made on the basis of statements of agreed facts.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(10) REFERENCES TO THE EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE/1724. Courts of last instance.

1724. Courts of last instance.

Courts or tribunals against whose decisions there is no judicial remedy in national law¹ do not enjoy the discretion granted to other courts to decide whether to refer to the European Court of Justice or not. A court of last instance must refer an appropriate question². It is not obliged to refer a question to the European Court if it does not require a ruling on the question in order to give judgment³.

The mandatory requirement that such courts or tribunals refer appropriate questions applies not only to courts whose decisions are always final but also to those against whose decision there is no judicial remedy in the case at issue⁴. The House of Lords is not the only English court which may be bound to refer a question to the European Court⁵. When determining an issue in respect of which there is no appeal to the House of Lords, the Court of Appeal will be a court of last instance⁶. The High Court will also fall within these provisions when there is no possibility of an appeal to the Court of Appeal. Even if the Court of Appeal refuses leave to appeal, it will not be a court of last instance if the right to petition the House of Lords for permission to appeal still exists⁷.

According to the doctrine of 'acte éclairé'⁸, where previous decisions of the European Court have already dealt with the point of law in question, a court of last instance will be relieved of the obligation to refer⁹. According to the related and better known doctrine of 'acte clair', even if there is no decision of the European Court directly on point, a court of last instance is not required to refer a question where the correct application of Community law is so obvious as to leave no scope for reasonable doubt¹⁰. The national court must be convinced that the matter is equally obvious to the courts of other member states and the European Court¹¹. It must also take account of the difficulties in interpreting Community law including the need to compare different language versions, the use of terminology distinct to Community law, and the need to view provisions of Community law in the context of the broad objectives of the Community law¹².

The Rome Convention makes no provision for mandatory references¹³.

1 Known variously as 'courts of last instance', 'courts of last resort' or 'courts falling within article 234(3)'.

2 See Note on references from national courts for a preliminary ruling (2005/C143/01) para 12 (Practice Direction--References to the European Court PD 68 para 3, Annex). An appropriate question is a question concerning the interpretation or validity of Community law raised before that court where a decision upon it is considered necessary in order that judgment can be given. 1724 Courts of last instance

NOTE 5--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/25. APPEALS AND REFERENCES/(10) REFERENCES TO THE EUROPEAN COURT OF JUSTICE/1725. Order of reference to the European Court.

1725. Order of reference to the European Court.

An order referring a question to the European Court for a preliminary ruling¹ to the European Court² may be made at any stage of the proceedings either by the court³ of its own initiative or on an application by a party⁴. An order may not be made, in the High Court, by a master or district judge or, in a county court, by a district judge⁵. The request to the European Court for a preliminary ruling must be set out in a schedule to the order, and the court may give directions on the preparation of the schedule⁶.

The order containing the reference, and the document scheduled to it, should be sent to the Senior Master⁷, who will send a copy of the order to the Registrar of the European Court⁸. Where an order is made by a county court, the proper officer will send a copy of it to the Senior Master for onward transmission to the European Court⁹. Unless the court orders otherwise, the Senior Master will not send a copy of the order to the European Court until (1) the time for appealing against the order has expired; or (2) any application for permission to appeal has been refused, or any appeal has been determined¹⁰.

Where an order is made, unless the court orders otherwise the proceedings will be stayed¹¹ until the European Court has given a preliminary ruling on the question referred to it¹².

The Crown Court may make a reference on its own motion or on application by any party¹³. The Criminal Division of the Court of Appeal may do so at any stage before an appeal or application for leave to appeal has been determined¹⁴. Specific provision may be made in relation to references from tribunals¹⁵ but there are no specific rules governing references from magistrates' courts.

1 See under (1) the EC Treaty (Treaty establishing the European Community (Rome, 25 March 1957; TS 1 (1973); Cmnd 5179)) art 234; (2) the Euratom Treaty art 150; (3) the ECSC Treaty art 41; (4) the Protocol of 3 June 1971 on the interpretation by the European Court of the Convention of 27 September 1968 on Jurisdiction and the Enforcement of Judgments in Civil and Commercial Matters; or (5) the Protocol of 19 December 1988 on the interpretation by the European Court of the Convention of 19 June 1980 on the Law applicable to Contractual Obligations: CPR 68.1(c). In relation to references under the EC Treaty art 234 see European Court information note on references from national courts for a preliminary ruling (2005/C143/01), annexed to Practice Direction--References to the European Court PD 68 (see para 3, Annex).

2 As to the meaning of 'the European Court' see PARA 1720 note 3.

3 'Court' means the court making the order: CPR 68.1(a).

4 CPR 68.2(1). Application must be in accordance with CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq): CPR 68.2(1). Where the court intends to refer a question to the European Court it will welcome suggestions from the parties for the wording of the reference. However the responsibility for settling the terms of the reference lies with the English court and not with the parties: see Practice Direction--References to the European Court PD 68 para 1.1. The reference should identify as clearly and succinctly as possible the question on which the court seeks the ruling of the European Court. In choosing the wording of the reference, it should be remembered that it will need to be translated into many other languages: para 1.2.

5 CPR 68.2(2). As to masters see PARA 49; and as to district judges see PARA 55.

6 CPR 68.2(3). The schedule should (1) give the full name of the referring court; (2) identify the parties; (3) summarise the nature and history of the proceedings, including the salient facts, indicating whether these are proved or admitted or assumed; (4) set out the relevant rules of national law; (5) summarise the relevant contentions of the parties; (6) explain why a ruling of the European Court is sought; and (7) identify the provisions of Community law which it is being requested to interpret: Practice Direction--References to the European Court PD 68 para 1.3. Where, as will often be convenient, some of these matters are in the form of a judgment, passages of the judgment not relevant to the reference should be omitted: para 1.4.

7 Practice Direction--References to the European Court PD 68 para 2.1. As to the Senior Master see PARA 51. The relevant court file should also be sent to the Senior Master: para 2.2.

1726. Costs and funding.

The preliminary reference is a step in the national proceedings¹. Costs of the procedure before the European Court of Justice are for the national referring court to determine². When a reference is made, costs to date are normally reserved, to be decided once the preliminary ruling has been received.

Funding by the Community Legal Service (formerly legal aid) granted in national proceedings generally covers the costs of the reference in both civil and criminal proceedings³. In 'special circumstances' funding may be available from the European Court if it is not available in the national court⁴.

2 Proceedings for a preliminary ruling before the European Court are free of charge and the court does not rule on the costs of the parties to the main proceedings; it is for the national court to rule on those costs: see European Court information note para 27 (Practice Direction 68--References to the European Court t: see para 3, Annex).

1727. Interim relief.

No interim relief is available from the European Court of Justice. However, any court seised of a dispute governed by Community law must have the jurisdiction to grant interim relief¹. It is for the national court to determine the criteria for the grant of interim relief. In the English courts the grant of interim relief is governed by the established guidelines, the first consideration being whether damages would be an adequate remedy².

However if a preliminary reference puts in issue the validity of a provision of secondary Community legislation, the referring court may only suspend the application or enforcement of that legislation (or that of a national measure based on it) in limited circumstances³. Suspension may only be granted if (1) the national court entertains serious doubts about the validity of the measure and the matter has been or is being referred; (2) there is urgency and a threat of serious and irreparable damage to the applicant; (3) the court takes due account of the Community interest; and (4) the court respects the European Court's ruling on the lawfulness of the measure or any similar application for interim relief at Community level⁴.

1728. Appeal against the making or refusal of a reference.

An appeal from the High Court against a decision to refer lies to the Court of Appeal¹. An appeal is subject to the ordinary 21-day time limit². An appeal against a decision of the Court of Appeal to refer or not to refer lies to the House of Lords³. An appeal against the decision of a county court judge lies to the Court of Appeal provided permission is granted either by the county court or Court of Appeal⁴. A refusal by a magistrates' court to refer may be appealed to the Crown Court after conviction. The Crown Court's decision in this context might be challenged by way of judicial review in the Divisional Court⁵.

2 See PARA 1663.

3 As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. 26. COSTS

(1) INTRODUCTION

(i) In general

1729. Scope of this part of the title.

This part of the title is concerned with the costs of civil litigation in the Court of Appeal, the High Court and county courts. Costs in criminal proceedings are dealt with elsewhere in this work¹.

The details of court fees payable² and of the prescribed rates of remuneration for legal aid work and services funded by the Legal Services Commission³ fall outside the scope of this title, as do the professional obligations of barristers, solicitors and other legally qualified persons with regard to the fees charged to their clients⁴.

1 See CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(4) (2006 Reissue) PARA 2058 et seq.

2 As to court fees see PARA 87; and The Civil Court Practice.

3 See generally LEGAL AID.

4 See generally LEGAL PROFESSIONS.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(i) In general/1730. Meaning of 'costs'.

1730. Meaning of 'costs'.

There is no general statutory definition of costs. For the purposes of the Civil Procedure Rules¹, unless the context otherwise requires 'costs' includes fees, charges, disbursements, expenses, remuneration, reimbursement allowed to a litigant in person², any additional liability incurred under a funding arrangement³ and any fee or reward charged by a lay representative⁴ for acting on behalf of a party in proceedings allocated to the small claims track⁵. 'Fixed costs' means the amounts which are to be allowed in respect of solicitors' charges in the prescribed⁶ circumstances⁷.

1 As to the Civil Procedure Rules see PARA 1734 et seq.

2 Ie under CPR 48.6: see PARA 1809.

3 As to funding arrangements see PARA 1830.

4 As to the rights of audience of lay representatives in county courts see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 706.

5 CPR 43.2(1)(a). As to allocation to the small claims track see PARAS 267, 274 et seq.

Where a costs order is made against a defendant as part of a 'Tomlin' order, it has been held that 'the costs of the action' include the fees reasonably incurred in reaching settlement, but not disbursements such as the hire of experts: Wallace v Gale & Associates [1998] 1 FLR 1091, CA. As to Tomlin orders see PARA 1141 note 11. It has also been held that costs do not include the expense incurred in making funds available to finance the action (now known as a 'claim': see PARA 18): Hunt v RM Douglas (Roofing) Ltd (1987) 132 Sol Jo 935, CA. However, any premium paid for an insurance policy against the risk of incurring liability for costs may now be recovered: see the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 29; and PARA 1830.

(ii) Costs Jurisdiction

1731. The House of Lords and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council.

In civil proceedings the jurisdiction of the House of Lords with regard to costs, including costs in the courts below, is inherent in the House and does not depend on any statute¹. In the absence of submissions on questions of costs² the House will normally award costs to the successful party³, but this is not an invariable rule⁴. In all civil appeals, appellants must give security for costs by payment into the House of Lords Security Fund Account⁵ of the appropriate sum⁶ within one week of the presentation of an appeal. Failure to do so will result in the appeal being dismissed⁷. However, this requirement does not apply to certain classes of appellants⁸ and it may be waived with the agreement of the parties⁹.

The costs of appeals to the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council are in the discretion of the Judicial Committee¹⁰. Delay in setting down an appeal, for which no reasonable explanation is given, may result in a successful appellant not being allowed costs¹¹. It is the usual practice to make no order on costs in appeals involving constitutional questions between a central government and a province or state¹². The practice of the committee is against giving costs to the successful appellant in a criminal appeal, save in very special circumstances¹³. The Judicial Committee also has power to order an appellant to lodge security for costs¹⁴.

The practice and procedure in the House of Lords and in the Judicial Committee when costs are awarded is discussed elsewhere in this work¹⁵. The Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR') do not apply and the process of assessment of the costs to be allowed is still known as 'taxation', which was the terminology employed in the Court of Appeal, High Court and county courts before the introduction of the CPR¹⁶.

As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. 3 Before 1876 it was the practice never to give costs against a respondent: see A-G v London Corpn (1850) 2 H & Tw 1 at 31, HL, per Lord Cottenham LC. The practice was changed after the Appellate Jurisdiction Act 1876 came into force.

4 See eg Cassell & Co Ltd v Broome (No 2) [1972] AC 1136, [1972] 2 All ER 849, HL, where the successful respondent was awarded only one half of his costs.

UPDATE

1731 The House of Lords and the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council

NOTE 1--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

NOTE 10--See Seaga v Harper (No 2) [2009] UKPC 26, [2010] 1 WLR 312 (conditional fee agreement and insurance regime should not be introduced into taxation of costs incurred in appeals without any prior attempt to ascertain wishes of parts of Commonwealth involved).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(ii) Costs Jurisdiction/1732. The Court of Appeal, the High Court and county courts.

1732. The Court of Appeal, the High Court and county courts.

Subject to the provisions of the Supreme Court Act 1981¹ or any other enactment², and to rules of court³, the costs⁴ of and incidental to⁵ all proceedings⁶ in the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal⁷, the High Court⁸ and any county court⁹ are in the discretion of the court¹⁰, and the court has full power to determine by whom¹¹ and to what extent the costs are to be paid¹². The court may disallow, or (as the case may be) order the legal or other representative¹³ concerned to meet, the whole of any wasted costs¹⁴ or such part of them as may be determined in accordance with rules of court¹⁵.

Costs may be dealt with by the court at any stage of the proceedings or after their conclusion. The general rule is that the costs of any proceedings or any part of the proceedings are not to be assessed by the detailed assessment procedure until the conclusion of the proceedings but the court may order them to be assessed immediately¹⁶.

In civil proceedings to which the Crown is a party the costs are in the discretion of the court to be exercised generally in the same manner and on the same principles as in cases between subjects¹⁷.

1 See the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51 (substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 4(1); and amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 31). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

2 ie including an Act passed after the Supreme Court Act 1981: see s 151(1). See eg the Access to Justice Act 1999. The provisions of special statutes as to particular cases are unaffected by the general provisions as to costs: Hasker v Wood (1885) 54 LJQB 419, CA; Reeve v Gibson [1891] 1 QB 652, CA; Re Butler's Will, ex p Metropolitan Board of Works (1912) 106 LT 673.

3 Without prejudice to any general power to make rules of court, such rules may make provision for regulating matters relating to the costs of those proceedings including, in particular, prescribing scales of costs to be paid to legal or other representatives or for securing that the amount awarded to a party in respect of the costs to be paid by him to such representatives is not limited to what would have been payable by him to them if he had not been awarded costs: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(2) (as substituted: see note 1; amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 31). See CPR Pts 43-48; and PARAS 1734, 1737 et seq. The court's powers and discretion under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51 must be exercised subject to and in accordance with CPR 44.3: see PARAS 1738-1741. As to the meaning of 'legal or other representative' for these purposes see note 13; and as to the meaning of 'proceedings' see note 6.

4 'Costs' is not defined in the Supreme Court Act 1981. For the meaning of the term see CPR 43.2(1)(a); and PARA 1730.

5 Whereas the costs of and incidental to negotiations leading up to an order are confined to the costs consequent on the negotiations (Re Fahy's Will Trusts [1962] 1 All ER 73, [1962] 1 WLR 17), the words 'and incidental to' are words of extension rather than restriction, and 'costs of and incidental to the proceedings' include more than 'costs of the proceedings' (Re Gibson's Settlement Trusts, Mellors v Gibson [1981] Ch 179, [1981] 1 All ER 233, where costs incurred before the proceedings began were allowed). They embrace not only the costs, charges and expenses which directly and necessarily arise out of the subject matter but also those incurred casually or incidentally out of it (Re Llewellyn, Llewellyn v Williams (1887) 37 ChD 317) or which occur in subordinate conjunction with it (Department of Health and Social Security v Envoy Farmers Ltd [1976] 2 All ER 173, [1976] 1 WLR 1018), but the subject to which the costs are incidental must be defined in the order (Wright v Bennett [1948] 1 KB 601, [1948] 1 All ER 410, CA). As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARAS 33 text and note 2, 1736. Reasonable costs of a claimant's expert employees in investigating, formulating and presenting claims against the defendants from the time that the claimant formed its suspicions of the wrongs that became the subject of the claim may be payable under an order for costs 'of and incidental to the proceedings': Admiral Management Services Ltd v Para-Protect Europe Ltd [2002] EWHC 233 (Ch), [2003] 2 All ER 1017. Costs incurred by a defendant in responding to a claim brought in a pre-action protocol may be recoverable as costs 'incidental to' any subsequent proceedings: McGlenn v Waltham Contractors Ltd [2005] EWHC 1419 (TCC), [2005] 3 All ER 1126. See also Sisu Capital Fund Ltd v Tucker [2005] EWHC 2321 (Ch), [2006] 1 All ER 167 (no recovery for expenditure of time by officeholders other than solicitors (such as professional consultants), even where possible to calculate financial cost of time spent). A failure to comply with the pre-action protocol will lead to an early adverse costs order: Charles Church Developments Ltd v Stent Foundations Ltd [2007] EWHC 955 (TCC), [2007] All ER (D) 104 (May).

6 For these purposes, 'proceedings' includes the administration of estates and trusts: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(4) (as substituted: see note 1). Nothing in s 51(1) (as so substituted) alters the practice in any criminal cause or matter, or in bankruptcy: s 51(5) (as so substituted). For the distinction between civil and criminal proceedings see PARA 2. As to the proceedings to which CPR Pts 43-48 apply see PARA 1734. As to costs in particular proceedings see eg BANKRUPTCY AND INDIVIDUAL INSOLVENCY; COMPANIES; COMPANY AND PARTNERSHIP INSOLVENCY; CROWN PROCEEDINGS AND CROWN PRACTICE; DAMAGES; EXECUTORS AND ADMINISTRATORS; LEGAL PROFESSIONALS; MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW; MENTAL HEALTH vol 30(2) (Reissue) PARA 740 (Court of Protection); PATENTS AND REGISTERED DESIGNS vol 79 (2008) PARAS 553, 689; SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW; TRUSTS.

8 As to the High Court see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 602 et seq. Rules of court may make provision for a right of appeal to the High Court in relation to certain decisions regarding Crown Court costs: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 52(1)(d) (amended by SI 2004/2035).

9 As to county courts see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 701 et seq. As to the statutory restrictions on persons who may recover any fee or reward for acting on behalf of a party in proceedings in a county court see the County Courts Act 1984 s 143(1) (substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 125(3), Sch 18 para 48); and COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 706.

10 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(1) (as substituted: see note 1). As to the exercise of the court's discretion see PARAS 1738-1741. As to the meaning of 'court' in the CPR see PARA 22. The use of the term 'the High Court' or 'the court' or 'the court or a judge' in any enactment requires the court's jurisdiction under the statute to be exercised only by a single judge of the High Court unless (1) by or by virtue of rules of court or any other statutory provision that jurisdiction is required to be exercised by a Divisional Court (see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 605); or (2) by rules of court that jurisdiction is made exercisable by a master, district judge or other officer of the court, or by any other person: see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 19(3).

Such an order may only be made in exceptional circumstances: Locabail (UK) Ltd v Bayfield Properties Ltd (No 3) (2000) Times, 29 February; Gardiner v FX Music Ltd [2000] All ER (D) 144; Cormack v Washbourne (formerly t/a Washbourne & Co (a firm)) [2000] All ER (D) 353, (2000) Times, 30 March, CA. A costs order may be made against a non-party if in all the circumstances it is just to do so: Globe Equities Ltd v Globe Legal Services Ltd [1999] BLR 232, [1999] All ER (D) 226, CA; Re Aurum Marketing Ltd (in liquidation) [2000] 2 BCLC 645, sub nom Secretary of State for Trade and Industry v Aurum Marketing Ltd [2000] All ER (D) 1009, CA. The power to award costs against a non-party will generally only be exercised against a person who has some connection with the proceedings: Murphy v Young & Co's Brewery plc and Sun Alliance and London Insurance plc [1997] 1 All ER 518, [1997] 1 WLR 1591, CA; applied in Holden v Oyston [2002] EWHC 819 (QB), [2002] All ER (D) 296 (Apr). Where the third party has a direct interest in the result of the litigation as, for instance, an insurer, an order can be made: TGA Chapman Ltd v Christopher [1998] 2 All ER 873, [1998] 1 WLR 12, CA. A non-party who plays a role in the management of litigation is at greater risk but it is usually necessary to show that the third party who brought the proceedings did so in bad faith or with an ulterior motive: Metalloy Supplies Ltd (in liquidation) v MA (UK) Ltd [1997] 1 All ER 418, [1997] 1 WLR 1613, CA. The power to make an order against a director will not normally be exercised (Taylor v Pace Developments Co Ltd [1991] BCC 406, CA); but where a director had substantially financed the litigation and improperly caused the company to defend the claim and to prosecute a concocted counterclaim an order was made (H Leverton Ltd v Crawford Offshore (Exploration) Services Ltd (in liquidation) (1996) Times, 22 November). A conditional fee agreement (see PARA 1830) is not by itself enough to expose the solicitors for one party for the other's costs: Hodgson v Imperial Tobacco Ltd [1998] 2 All ER 673, [1998] 1 WLR 1056, CA. As to the liability of a solicitor see Tolstoy-Miloslavsky v Lord Aldington [1996] 2 All ER 556, [1996] 1 WLR 736, CA. See also CIBC Mellon Trust Co v Stolzenberg [2005] EWCA Civ 628, [2005] 2 BCLC 618 (order for costs against shareholder who had funded and controlled litigation by the company); and BE Studios Ltd v Smith & Williamson Ltd [2005] EWHC 2730 (Ch), [2006] 2 All ER 811 (no impropriety on part of director need be shown for non-party costs order to be made against him).

A non-existent person cannot receive or be ordered to pay costs: Russian Commercial and Industrial Bank v Comptoir d'Escompte de Mulhouse [1923] 2 KB 630; revsd on the ground that the plaintiff bank still existed [1925] AC 112, HL.

A tribunal making itself a party to an appeal puts itself at risk as to an order for costs: see Moore's (Wallisdown) Ltd v Pensions Ombudsman, Royal and Sun Alliance Life and Pensions Ltd v Pensions Ombudsman [2002] 1 All ER 737, [2001] All ER (D) 372 (Dec); and PARA 1756.

12 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(3) (as substituted: see note 1). As to when a respondent who has successfully resisted an application for permission to appeal may be awarded costs see eg Jolly v Jay [2002] EWCA Civ 277, [2002] All ER (D) 104 (Mar).

13 For these purposes, 'legal or other representative', in relation to a party to proceedings, means any person exercising a right of audience or right to conduct litigation on his behalf: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(13) (as substituted: see note 1). As to rights of audience and rights to conduct litigation see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 331-332, 706; and LEGAL PROFESSIONS.

14 'Wasted costs' means any costs incurred by a party (1) as a result of any improper, unreasonable or negligent act or omission on the part of any legal or other representative or any employee of such a representative; or (2) which, in the light of any such act or omission occurring after they were incurred, the court considers it is unreasonable to expect that party to pay: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(7) (as substituted: see note 1). See eg Abbassi v Secretary of State for the Home Department [1992] Imm AR 349, sub nom R v Secretary of State for the Home Department, ex p Abbassi (1992) Times, 6 April, CA (counsel and solicitors personally liable for costs thrown away in frivolous appeal); Fozal v Gofur (1993) Times, 9 July, CA (a wasted costs order under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(6), (7) can only be made against counsel in respect of acts done after 1 October 1991 when substitution came into force); Re a Company (No 006798 of 1995) [1996] 2 All ER 417, [1996] 1 WLR 491 (wasted costs order against a solicitor who supported a winding-up petition when he ought to have known it was bound to fail); Re G (children) (care proceedings: wasted costs) [2000] Fam 104, [1999] 4 All ER 371 (wasted costs order against counsel who failed to keep expert up to date). In exercising the power to award costs against a barrister personally, the court ought to have regard to errors of duty to the court, not errors of judgment: Harley v McDonald, Glasgow Harley (a firm) v McDonald [2001] UKPC 18, [2001] 2 AC 678, [2001] 5 LRC 82. An application for a wasted costs order is a summary procedure, which ought only to be used in simple and obvious cases, and which will generally be inappropriate for claims involving dishonesty, or breach of a solicitors' professional duty, where it is necessary to make detailed investigations of fact, resulting in complex proceedings: Turner Page Music v Torres Design Associates Ltd (1998) Times, 3 August, CA. The application is to be heard by the judge who heard the substantive proceedings; and the applicant ought to bear in mind the principle of proportionality to guard against longer being spent on the application than on the substantive proceedings: Re Merc Property Ltd [1999] 2 BCLC 286. As to the procedure on a wasted costs application see CPR 48.7; and PARA 1811.

15 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(6) (as substituted: see note 1). For the relevant rules see CPR 48.7; and PARA 1811. The Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(6) applies in relation to any civil proceedings in the Crown Court as it applies to proceedings under s 51(1): s 52(2A) (added by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 4(2)). As to the civil jurisdiction of the Crown Court see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 626, 628-630.

16 See CPR 47.1; and PARA 1779. A costs judge or a district judge may make an order allowing detailed assessment proceedings to be commenced where there is no realistic prospect of the claim continuing: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 28.1(5).

(iii) Costs under the Civil Procedure Rules

1734. General rules as to costs.

The costs rules now applying in the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal, the High Court and county courts are set out in Parts 43 to 48 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')¹ and the costs practice direction supplementary thereto². These Parts deal with the main provisions as to costs and the way in which the court will award and assess costs³. They do not provide a complete self-contained code as to costs in the High Court and the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal, unlike the former Order 62 of the Rules of the Supreme Court⁴, but for the first time there is a common set of rules governing costs in most civil proceedings in the courts⁵, which apply from 26 April 1999, both as to the procedure to be adopted and the way in which costs are to be assessed⁶.

Part 43 of the CPR contains definitions and interpretation of certain matters set out in the rules about costs⁷. The costs to which Parts 44 to 48 apply include:

- 1298 (1) the following costs where those costs may be assessed by the court⁸:
39
 - 102. (a) costs of proceedings before an arbitrator or umpire;
 - 103. (b) costs of proceedings before a tribunal or other statutory body; and
 - 104. (c) costs payable by a client to his solicitor⁹; and
- 40
1299 (2) costs which are payable by one party to another party under the terms of a contract, where the court makes an order for an assessment of those costs¹⁰.

Where advocacy or litigation services are provided to a client under a conditional fee agreement¹¹, costs are recoverable under Parts 44 to 48 notwithstanding that the client is liable to pay his legal representative's fees and expenses only to the extent that sums are recovered in respect of the proceedings, whether by way of costs or otherwise¹².

Parts 43, 44, 47 and 48 (but not Parts 45 and 46) of the CPR apply, with certain modifications¹³, to costs in family proceedings and in the Family Division assessed on or after 26 April 1999¹⁴, despite the fact that other Parts of the CPR do not apply to family proceedings¹⁵.

There are two methods by which costs may be assessed by the court: 'summary assessment' which means the procedure by which the court, when making an order about costs, orders payment of a sum of money instead of fixed costs or detailed assessment¹⁶; and 'detailed assessment' which means the procedure by which the amount of costs is decided by a costs officer¹⁷.

13 CPR 44.9-44.12 do not apply; in CPR 43.2(1)(c)(ii) (definition of 'costs officer': see note 17), 'district judge' includes a district judge of the Principal Registry of the Family Division; CPR 44.3(2) (costs follow the event: see PARA 1738) does not apply; and CPR 44.3(1), (3)-(5) does not apply to an application to which the Family Proceedings Rules 1991, SI 1991/1247, r 2.71 (ancillary relief: costs: see MATRIMONIAL AND CIVIL PARTNERSHIP LAW vol 73 (2009) PARA 1037 et seq) applies: see r 10.27(1) (added by SI 2003/184; and amended by SI 2006/352). 14 See the Family Proceedings Rules 1991 SI 1991/1247, r 10.27(1) (as added and amended: see note 13). As a general rule, no costs for work done before 26 April 1999 are to be disallowed if they would have been allowed on taxation (now known as 'assessment') before that date: Family Proceedings (Miscellaneous Amendments) Rules 1999, SI 1999/1012, r 4(3). 17 CPR 43.4. As to detailed assessment of costs see PARA 1779 et seq. Detailed assessment is carried out under CPR Pt 47: see note 7. UPDATE

1734 General rules as to costs

NOTE 17--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604. CPR 43.2(1)(b), (d) amended: SI 2009/2092.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(1) INTRODUCTION/(iii) Costs under the Civil Procedure Rules/1735. Other rules making specific provision about costs.

1735. Other rules making specific provision about costs.

In addition to the general rules about costs contained in Parts 43 to 48 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')¹, specific provision as to costs is made in other Parts of the CPR, including those dealing with: the court's² general management powers³; the court's power to strike out a statement of case⁴; judgment without trial after striking out⁵; sanctions for non payment of fees⁶; default provisions in relation to sanctions⁷; default judgments⁸; admissions⁹; litigation friends¹⁰; security for costs¹¹; costs on the small claims track¹²; fast track provisions¹³; expert evidence¹⁴; enforcing the attendance of witnesses¹⁵; fees and expenses of examiners of the court¹⁶; offers to settle and payments into court¹⁷; and discontinuance¹⁸.

Small claims and fast track trial costs are discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁹.

1 See PARA 1734. As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 Eg when exercising its power under CPR 3.1(5) (court's power to order a party to pay money into court) the court must have regard to the costs which the parties have incurred or which they may incur: see CPR 3.1(6); and PARA 247.

4 Eg when the court strikes out a statement of case it may make any consequential order it considers appropriate: see CPR 3.4(3); and PARA 520. Where the court has struck out a claimant's statement of case, the claimant has been ordered to pay costs to the defendant and before the claimant pays those costs he starts another claim against the same defendant, arising out of facts which are the same or substantially the same as those relating to the claim in which the statement of case was struck out, the court may stay the second claim on the application of the defendant until the costs of the first claim have been paid: see CPR 3.4(4); and PARA 520.

5 Eg where the court makes an order which includes a term that the statement of case of a party must be struck out if the party does not comply with the order and the party against whom the order was made does not comply with it, any other party may obtain judgment with costs: see CPR 3.5(1); and PARA 521.

6 In circumstances where a claimant has not paid a court fee by a specified date and has not applied for exemption from or remission of such fee by that date, the claim will be struck out automatically without further notice of the court and the claimant will be liable for the costs which the defendant has incurred unless the court orders otherwise: see CPR 3.7(4); and PARA 523.

7 Eg where the sanction for a failure to comply with a rule, practice direction or court order is the payment of costs, the party in default may only obtain relief by appealing against the order for costs: see CPR 3.8(2); and PARA 255.

8 Eg default judgment on a claim for a specified amount of money obtained on the filing of a request will be judgment for the amount of the claim (less payments made) and costs: see CPR 12.5(2); and PARA 509.

9 Eg where judgment is entered on an admission of the whole of a claim where the remedy sought is for a specified amount of money only, the judgment will be for the amount of the claim (less payments made) and costs: see CPR 14.4(6); and PARA 191.

10 The liability of a litigation friend for costs continues until the person in respect of whom his appointment to act has ceased serves the notice that his appointment to act has ceased or the litigation friend serves notice on the parties that his appointment to act has ceased: see CPR 21.9(6); and PARA 222; CHILDREN AND YOUNG PERSONS vol 5(4) (2008 Reissue) PARA 1411 et seq.

11 As to security for costs see CPR 25.12; and PARAS 745-748.

12 In any case which has been allocated to the small claims track (see PARAS 267, 274 et seq) costs will be limited to fixed costs (see PARA 1730 text and notes 6-7) unless the paying party has behaved unreasonably; but this rule does not apply where the claim is allocated to the small claims track by consent and the value of the claim exceeds the limit for the small claims track. In such cases the claim is to be treated for the purposes of costs as if it were proceeding on the fast track: see CPR 27.14(2), (5); PARAS 1773-1774; and PARA 285.

13 In the case where the court's power to award costs is limited in accordance with CPR Pt 46 (see PARAS 1775-1778): see CPR 28.2(5); and PARA 292.

14 The court has the power to limit the amount of an expert's fees and expenses that the party who wishes to rely on the expert may recover from any other party: see CPR 35.4(4); and PARA 838. Unless the court otherwise directs, the instructing parties are jointly and severally liable for the payment of an expert's fees and expenses: CPR 35.8(5). Before a single joint expert is instructed the court may limit the amount that can be paid by way of fees and expenses to the expert: see CPR 35.8(4)(a); and PARA 847.

15 A person who fails to attend before an examiner or who refuses to be sworn for the purposes of the examination or to answer any lawful question or produce any document at the examination may be ordered to pay any costs resulting from his failure or refusal: see CPR 34.10(4); and PARA 996.

16 See PARA 994.

17 CPR 36.10, 36.11 set out the costs consequences of acceptance of a defendant's Part 36 offer: see PARAS 736-737. CPR 36.14 sets out the costs consequences where a claimant obtains a judgment more advantageous than a defendant's Part 36 offer or judgment against the defendant is at least as advantageous to the claimant as the proposals contained in a claimant's Part 36 offer: see PARA 740. As to the meaning of 'Part 36 offer' see PARA 730.

18 Unless the court otherwise orders (and excluding claims allocated to the small claims track), a claimant who discontinues is liable for the costs which a defendant against whom he discontinues incurred on or before the date on which notice of discontinuance was served on him: CPR 38.6(1). If the proceedings are only partly discontinued the claimant is liable for costs relating only to the parts of the proceedings which he is discontinuing: CPR 38.6(2). 1736. Relevance of previous case law.

The Civil Procedure Rules¹ ('CPR') are a new procedural code with the overriding objective of enabling the court to deal with cases justly². Being a new procedural code, the CPR are not to be taken as embodying or taking on board the case law which developed under the former regime of the costs rules contained in Order 62 of the Rules of the Supreme Court³ or Order 38 of the County Court Rules⁴. Generally speaking, although there will undoubtedly be some exceptions, most of the procedural cases decided under the Rules of the Supreme Court or the County Court Rules will not be applied, but are, at most, only persuasive in interpreting and giving effect to the new provisions⁵. Caution therefore needs to be exercised when seeking to apply the old case law to the new costs rules.

5 In determining whether or not it was appropriate to award costs on the indemnity basis rather than the standard basis (see PARA 1747) the court is not constrained by the pre-CPR case law: Reid Minty (a firm) v Taylor [2001] EWCA Civ 1723, [2002] 2 All ER 150, [2001] All ER (D) 427 (Oct); explained in Kiam v MGN Ltd (No 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 66, [2002] 2 All ER 242, [2002] All ER (D) 65 (Feb) (although conduct, falling short of misconduct deserving of moral condemnation, can be so unreasonable as to justify an order for indemnity costs, such conduct needs to be unreasonable to a high degree, not merely wrong or misguided in hindsight. It is not to be understood that under the CPR it is now generally appropriate to condemn in indemnity costs those who decline reasonable settlement offers). In the context of the application of the 'costs follow the event' principle the courts have tended to pay some regard to but not apply the rigidity of the former case law embodied in cases such as Re Elgindata Ltd (No 2) [1993] 1 All ER 232, [1992] 1 WLR 1207, CA, with a view to encouraging greater flexibility in the exercise of the court's discretion than was the case pre-CPR: Phonographic Performance Ltd v AEI Rediffusion Music Ltd [1999] 2 All ER 299, sub nom AEI Rediffusion Music Ltd v Phonographic Performance Ltd [1999] 1 WLR 1507, CA; Harrison v Bloom Camillin (a firm) (No 2) (4 February 2000, unreported on this point) per Neuberger J (subsequent proceedings [2000] All ER (D) 168); DEG-Deutsche Investitions und Entwicklungsgesellschaft mbH v Koshy [2001] EWCA Civ 79, [2001] 3 All ER 878. (2) GENERAL RULES ABOUT COSTS

(i) Introduction

1737. Scope of Part 44 of the Civil Procedure Rules.

Part 44 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹ contains general rules about costs², entitlement to costs and orders in respect of pro bono representation³. The rules are supplemented by a practice direction⁴.

Part 44 does not apply to the assessment of costs in proceedings to the extent that the Access to Justice Act 1999⁵ and provisions made under that Act, or regulations made under the Legal Aid Act 1988⁶, make different provision⁷.

1 Ie CPR Pt 44: see PARA 1737 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

3 CPR 44.1. As to the meaning of 'pro bono representation' see PARA 611 note 20.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(2) GENERAL RULES ABOUT COSTS/(i) Introduction/1738. Court's discretion; in general.

1738. Court's discretion; in general.

The court¹ has discretion as to whether costs² are payable by one party to another³, the amount of those costs⁴ and when they are to be paid⁵. Where costs are in the discretion of the court, a party has no right to costs unless and until the court awards them to him⁶, and the court has an absolute and unfettered discretion to award or not to award them⁷. This discretion must be exercised judicially⁸; it must not be exercised arbitrarily but in accordance with reason and justice⁹.

If the court decides to make an order about costs the general rule is that the unsuccessful party will be ordered to pay the costs of the successful party¹⁰; but the court may make a different order¹¹. The general rule does not apply to (1) family proceedings and proceedings in the Family Division¹²; (2) proceedings in the Court of Appeal on an application or appeal made in connection with proceedings in the Family Division¹³; or (3) proceedings in the Court of Appeal from a judgment, direction, decision or order given or made in probate proceedings or family proceedings¹⁴.

The court may make an order about costs at any stage in a case¹⁵. In particular, it may make an order about costs when it deals with any application, makes any order or holds any hearing and that order about costs may relate to the costs of that application, order or hearing¹⁶. The court may also make an order for an estimate of base costs to be filed and served¹⁷.

In exceptional circumstances, the court has power to review a costs order it has made before the order is sealed¹⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

2 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

3 CPR 44.3(1)(a).

4 CPR 44.3(1)(b). Where the court orders a party to pay costs to another party other than fixed costs it may either make a summary assessment of the costs or order a detailed assessment of the costs: see CPR 44.7; and PARA 1751. As to the meaning of 'fixed costs' see PARA 1730 text and notes 6-7; and as to the meaning of 'summary assessment' and 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734; as to summary assessment see PARA 1752; and as to detailed assessment see PARA 1779 et seq.

5 CPR 44.3(1)(c). On an appeal as to costs, the court is generally very reluctant to interfere with the judge's discretion, particularly if to do so would result in satellite litigation at the interlocutory stage: Morgan v Hinton Organics (Wessex) Ltd [2009] EWCA Civ 107, [2009] All ER (D) 14 (Mar).

Unless otherwise ordered costs become payable within 14 days of the date of judgment or order if it states the amount of those costs: see CPR 44.8; and PARA 1758. The general rule is that the costs of any proceedings or any part of the proceedings are not to be assessed by the detailed assessment procedure until the conclusion of the proceedings but the court may order them to be assessed immediately: see CPR 47.1; and PARA 1779. Where costs are subject to an order for detailed assessment the court may order a payment on account of costs pending the detailed assessment: see CPR 44.3(8); and PARA 1741 text and note 11. As to the court's discretion see also the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(1); and PARA 1732. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. In earlier days, before the Supreme Court of Judicature Act 1873 (repealed), the rule as to costs differed between the courts of equity, where the costs were in the discretion of the judge, and the common law courts, where, with complicated statutory exceptions, the costs followed the event: see Garnett v Bradley (1878) 3 App Cas 944, HL.

6 The parties may enter into a binding agreement beforehand as to costs: Mansfield v Robinson [1928] 2 KB 353. The right of a party to apply for an order for costs which the judge may or may not make is not a thing in action within the meaning of the Law of Property Act 1925 s 136(1): see Re Marly Laboratory Ltd's Application [1952] 1 All ER 1057, (1952) 96 Sol Jo 261, CA; and CHOSÉS IN ACTION vol 13 (2009) PARA 75.

7 Donald Campbell & Co Ltd v Pollak [1927] AC 732, HL; Jones v McKie and Mersey Docks and Harbour Board [1964] 2 All ER 842, [1964] 1 WLR 960, CA.

8 Donald Campbell & Co Ltd v Pollak [1927] AC 732, HL; Jones v McKie and Mersey Docks and Harbour Board [1964] 2 All ER 842, [1964] 1 WLR 960, CA. The discretion is not exercised judicially where costs are ordered against a party who has been completely successful and is guiltless of any misconduct (Kierson v Joseph L Thompson & Sons Ltd [1913] 1 KB 587, CA; Higgins v L Higgins & Co [1916] 1 KB 640, CA) or where the exercise of the discretion is based on considerations wholly irrelevant to the determination of the question as to the incidence of costs (Baylis Baxter Ltd v Sabath [1958] 2 All ER 209, [1958] 1 WLR 529, CA; Jones v McKie and Mersey Docks and Harbour Board [1964] 2 All ER 842, [1964] 1 WLR 960, CA). The fact that the exercise of the discretion in a particular way would relieve the taxpayer as against the person in whose favour the order for costs was made is an irrelevant consideration: Howell v Howell [1953] 2 All ER 628, [1953] 1 WLR 1024, CA. As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARAS 33 text and note 2, 1736.

9 Ottway v Jones [1955] 2 All ER 585, [1955] 1 WLR 706, CA; Bourne v Stanbridge [1965] 1 All ER 241, [1965] 1 WLR 189, CA (overruled on other grounds by Hobbs v Marlowe [1978] AC 16, [1977] 2 All ER 241, HL). The principles of reason and justice clearly demand that a claimant who embarks on a piece of fruitless litigation should not be entitled to his costs as of right: see Bourne v Stanbridge [1965] 1 All ER 241 at 247, [1965] 1 WLR 189 at 198, CA, per Salmon LJ, approved in Hobbs v Marlowe [1978] AC 16, [1977] 2 All ER 241, HL, per Lord Elwyn-Jones LC. In SCT Finance Ltd v John Bolton [2002] EWCA Civ 56, [2002] All ER (D) 75 (Jan), it was held that the judge at first instance had erred in the exercise of his discretion when placing a cap on the claimant's costs to be assessed on the standard basis. Judges must ensure that their reasons for costs orders are clear: Lavelle v Lavelle [2004] EWCA Civ 223, [2004] 2 FCR 418. See also Re B (indemnity) (costs) [2007] EWCA Civ 921, [2008] 2 FCR 327 (order inappropriate where judge had not received medical certificate and letter explaining person's absence from court in family proceedings).

10 CPR 44.3(2)(a). This rule preserves the general rule that the unsuccessful party will be ordered to pay the costs of the successful party. However, generality of the rule enables flexibility in the approach to the determination of liabilities for costs: Phonographic Performance Ltd v AEI Rediffusion Music Ltd [1999] 2 All ER 299, sub nom AEI Rediffusion Music Ltd v Phonographic Performance Ltd [1999] 1 WLR 1507, CA. The rule in Re Elgindata Ltd (No 2) [1993] 1 All ER 232, [1992] 1 WLR 1207, CA, that a successful party should not be deprived of the costs of pursuing unsuccessful issues provided that they were reasonably and properly brought is to be applied with great caution: Harrison v Bloom Camillin (a firm) (No 2) (4 February 2000, unreported on this point), per Neuberger J (subsequent proceedings [2000] All ER (D) 168). As a consequence of authorities since the decision of Re Elgindata Ltd (No 2) [1993] 1 All ER 232, [1992] 1 WLR 1207, CA, it is no longer necessary for the court to be satisfied that a successful party had acted unreasonably or improperly by raising an issue in order to deprive it of its costs and order it to pay the unsuccessful party's costs of that particular issue: Summit Property Ltd v Pitmans (a firm) [2001] EWCA Civ 2020, [2002] CPLR 97; Johnsey Estates (1990) Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions [2001] EWCA Civ 535, [2001] 2 EGLR 128, [2001] All ER (D) 135 (Apr). Where a claimant and defendant both succeeded on their claim and counterclaim though the claimant was the overall winner, a judge could award the successful claimant his costs or a proportion thereof to reflect the issues involved: Universal Cycles plc v Grangebriar Ltd (9 February 2000, unreported), CA, per Lord Woolf MR. The provisions of CPR 44.3 enable the court to do greater justice in a case where a successful party has caused an unsuccessful party to incur costs on an issue which later fails: Winter v Winter [2000] All ER (D) 1791, CA. There is a distinction between cases brought for injunctive relief for its own sake and cases which concern a true commercial issue: Tameres (Vincent Square) Ltd v Fairpoint Properties (Vincent Square) Ltd [2007] All ER (D) 257 (Nov), CA. In a probate claim where a defendant has in his defence given notice that he requires the will to be proved in solemn form, the court will not make an order for costs against the defendant unless it appears that there was no reasonable ground for opposing the will: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 8.2.

The starting point is the same in judicial review proceedings as in other types of cases: R (on the application of Smeaton) v Secretary of State for Health (No 2) [2002] 2 FLR 146, [2002] All ER (D) 147 (May) per Munby J.

1739. Circumstances to be taken into account when exercising court's discretion.

In deciding what order (if any) to make about costs¹, the court² must have regard to all the circumstances, including:

- 1300 (1) the conduct of all the parties³;
- 1301 (2) whether a party has succeeded on part of his case, even if he has not been wholly successful⁴; and
- 1302 (3) any payment into court or admissible offer to settle made by a party which is drawn to the court's attention and which is not an offer to which costs consequences under Part 36⁵ apply⁶.

The conduct of the parties includes: (a) conduct before, as well as during, the proceedings and in particular the extent to which the parties followed the Practice Direction on Pre-Action Conduct or any relevant pre-action protocol⁷; (b) whether it was reasonable for a party to raise, pursue or contest a particular allegation or issue⁸; (c) the manner in which a party has pursued or defended his case or a particular allegation or issue⁹; and (d) whether a claimant¹⁰ who has succeeded in his claim, in whole or in part, exaggerated his claim¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

2 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

3 CPR 44.3(4)(a); and see heads (a)-(d) in the text. Where a party succeeds on some issues, fails on others and abandoned others, it is open to the court to award that party a proportion of the costs but in respect of the abandoned issues these are to be left to the costs judge to reduce on assessment: Shirley v Caswell [2000] Lloyd's Rep PN 955, [2000] All ER (D) 807, CA. Parties and their lawyers must ensure that they are aware that it is one of their duties to fully consider alternative dispute resolution ('ADR'), especially when the court has suggested it, and not merely to turn it down flatly which may place the party doing so at risk of adverse consequences in costs: Dunnett v Railtrack plc (in railway administration) [2002] EWCA Civ 302, [2002] All ER (D) 314 (Feb). See also Hurst v Leeming [2002] EWHC 1051 (Ch), [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep 379, [2002] All ER (D) 135 (May) (professional negligence claim; critical factor was whether the defendant had taken an objective view that mediation had no reasonable prospect of success, as a party could refuse mediation on those grounds).

Refusal of a settlement offer will rarely attract an order for costs on an indemnity basis: Kiam v MGN Ltd (No 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 66, [2002] 2 All ER 242. When a court is considering depriving a successful litigant of some or all of his costs on the basis that he has failed to participate in alternative dispute resolution, it has to be borne in mind that this is an exception to the general rule that costs follow the event: Halsey v Milton Keynes General NHS Trust, Steel v Joy [2004] EWCA Civ 576, [2004] 4 All ER 920 (see also Seventh Earl of Malmesbury v Strutt and Parker [2008] EWHC 424 (QB), (2008) 118 ConLR 68 (party who agreed to mediation, but caused mediation to fail because of his unreasonable position was in the same position as a party who refused to mediate)). The court may not order the disclosure of without prejudice negotiations even though in the absence of such disclosure the court may be unable to determine whether one party unreasonably refused mediation: Reed Executive plc v Reed Business Information Ltd (No 2) [2004] EWCA Civ 887, [2004] 4 All ER 942. A judge is not obliged to make an issue-based costs order where parties provide imprecise information on an issue and a percentage-based order is practicable: Budgen v Andrew Gardner Partnership [2002] EWCA Civ 1125, (2002) Times, 9 September. A party wishing to raise the conduct of the other party must do so before the judge making the costs order rather than at the detailed assessment: Aaron v Shelton [2004] EWHC 1162 (QB), [2004] 3 All ER 561. There is no general rule that a losing party who can establish dishonesty has to receive all his costs of establishing such dishonesty, however disproportionate those costs may be: Ultraframe (UK) Ltd v Fielding [2006] EWCA Civ 1660, [2007] 2 All ER 983, [2006] All ER (D) 81 (Dec).

Misconduct that was part of a transaction giving rise to the litigation is irrelevant to the issue of costs: Hall v Rover Financial Services (GB) Ltd (t/a Land Rover Financial Services) [2002] EWCA Civ 1514, [2002] All ER (D) 129 (Oct).

4 CPR 44.3(4)(b). Under this rule the reasonableness of the party taking a particular point is not necessarily relevant; the rule is distinct from the provisions relating to conduct under CPR 44.3(5): Stocznia Gdanska SA v Latvian Shipping Co (2001) Times, 25 May, Thomas J, disagreeing with Rimer J in DEG-Deutsche Investitions und Entwicklungsgesellschaft MBH v Koshy (2001) Times, 20 February (revsd [2001] EWCA Civ 79, [2001] 3 All ER 878). The surest indication of success and failure in commercial litigation is which party has to pay money to the other: see AL Barnes Ltd v Time Talk (UK) Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 402, [2003] BLR 331. An issue-by-issue approach to the case should not be applied rigorously; a judge should stand back from the mathematical result of such an approach and ask himself whether, in all the circumstances of the case, it is the right result: Kastor Navigation Co Ltd v AGF MAT [2004] EWCA Civ 277, [2005] 2 All ER (Comm) 720. See also West (t/a Eastenders) v Fuller Smith & Turner plc [2003] EWCA Civ 429, [2004] FSR 692 (case raised distinct issues; appropriate to apportion costs on issue-by-issue basis); followed in Kavanagh Balloons Pty Ltd v Cameron Balloons Ltd [2003] EWCA Civ 1952, [2004] FSR 698. See also Smithkline Beecham plc v Apotex Europe Ltd (No 2) [2004] EWCA Civ 1703, [2005] FSR 559 (general rules as to costs applied as much to patent actions as to any other action); Devon County Council v Clarke [2005] EWCA Civ 266, [2005] 1 FCR 752, sub nom Clark v Devon County Council [2005] 2 FLR 747 (claimant alleged duty of care owed by five of defendant's employees, but claim succeeded only in respect of one; order for full costs not appropriate); and Rambus Inc v Hynix Semiconductor UK Ltd [2004] EWHC 2313 (Pat), [2005] FSR 417 (court should be slow to deprive successful party of costs of an issue because nature of defeat went to some fundamental element which could be related only to some issues).

5 As to the costs consequences under CPR Pt 36 see PARAS 736-737, 740.

6 CPR 44.3(4)(c). There are compelling reasons why offers of monetary settlement should be made by way of Part 36 payments rather than by written offers (Amber v Stacey [2001] 2 All ER 88, [2001] 1 WLR 1225, CA) but see note 5; and see eg Neave v Neave (No 2) [2002] EWHC 966 (QB), [2002] All ER (D) 211 (May). The refusal of a settlement offer will rarely attract an adverse order for costs on an indemnity basis rather than a standard basis: Kiam v MGN Ltd (No 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 66, [2002] 2 All ER 242, [2002] All ER (D) 65 (Feb). There is no general principle that a claimant would be the successful party in terms of costs where he accepted a Part 36 payment after the expiry of the time limit for acceptance following a significant amendment to the defence case based on information always known to the defendant: Factortame Ltd v Secretary of State for the Environment, Transport and the Regions [2002] EWCA Civ 22, [2002] 2 All ER 838. The court is entitled to take into account non-disclosure or lack of proper disclosure which prevented a party from properly assessing whether to make or accept a Part 36 offer: Ford v GKR Construction Ltd [2000] 1 All ER 802, [2000] 1 WLR 1397, CA. CPR Pt 36 contains further provisions about how the court's discretion is to be exercised where a payment into court or an offer to settle is made under that Part: see PARA 730 et seq. In deciding what order to make about costs the court is required to have regard to all the circumstances including any payment into court or admissible offer to settle made by a party which is drawn to the court's attention, and which is not an offer to which costs consequences under CPR Pt 36 apply: see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 8.4.

Although waiting until expert evidence has been exchanged or until the experts have met and discussed the matters upon which they are agreed or remain in disagreement may be understandable from a claimant's point of view because the strengths and weaknesses of the respective cases of the parties may be much clearer than when a Part 36 payment into court was made, it is only in a very exceptional case that the judge will be justified in not making the usual order for costs in favour of the defendant on an application by the claimant for permission to take out money paid in court after the 21-day period for acceptance under CPR 36 (see PARA 729 et seq): Plymouth and Torbay Health Authority v Glanfield [2002] All ER (D) 313 (Mar). Even though a claimant beats a payment in, the court is still required to consider the conduct of all the parties, including whether the claimant exaggerated his claim: Painting v University of Oxford [2005] EWCA Civ 161, [2005] PIQR Q77. Until the court knows how generous or otherwise a payment in is, it will not normally be fair to exercise a discretion in relation to costs: HSS Hire Services Group plc v BMB Builders Merchants Ltd [2005] EWCA Civ 636, [2005] 3 All ER 486, [2005] 1 WLR 3158.

7 CPR 44.3(5)(a). As to the meaning of 'pre-action protocol' see PARA 13. Where a successful defendant is a substantial public body, and has unreasonably refused to negotiate a settlement, the court can make a costs order partly in favour of an unsuccessful claimant: Daniels v Metropolitan Police Comr [2005] All ER (D) 225 (Oct), (2005) Times, 28 October.

8 CPR 44.3(5)(b). See Cantor Gaming Ltd v Gameaccount Global Ltd [2007] EWHC 1914 (Ch), [2008] FSR 83 (infringement of copyright admitted; copyright owner entitled to reasonable and proportionate costs of verifying no further infringement took place).

9 CPR 44.3(5)(c).

10 As to the meaning of 'claimant' see PARA 18.

11 CPR 44.3(5)(d). In a claim for damages for personal injury where a claimant had deceived the court by exaggerating the extent of his injuries the court awarded the defendant the whole of its costs: Molloy v Shell UK Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 1272, [2002] PIQR P7, [2001] All ER (D) 79 (Jul). The court will examine the circumstances of each case when determining whether a claim has been exaggerated: Quorum A/S v Schramm (No 2) [2002] 2 All ER (Comm) 179. See also Painting v University of Oxford [2005] EWCA Civ 161, [2005] PIQR Q77. See Business Environment Bow Lane v Deanwater Estates Ltd [2008] EWHC 2003 (TCC), [2008] All ER (D) 78 (Oct) (claimant ordered to pay defendant's costs after finding claimant made exaggerated dilapidation claim for works which were never carried out).

UPDATE

1739 Circumstances to be taken into account when exercising court's discretion

NOTE 8--A party successfully resisting a claim of fraud cannot automatically expect to recover all of its costs; the judge must take into account all the circumstances, including the conduct of the parties: Cheltenham BC v Laird [2010] All ER (D) 50 (Feb), CA.

1740. Costs estimates.

The court¹ may, at any stage in a case, order any party to file² an estimate of base costs³ and to serve⁴ copies of the estimate on all other parties⁵. The court may direct that the estimate be prepared in such a way as to demonstrate the likely effects of giving or not giving a particular case management direction which the court is considering, for example a direction for a split trial or for the trial of a preliminary issue. The court may specify a time limit for filing and serving the estimate; if no time limit is specified the estimate must be filed and served within 28 days of the date of the order⁶. An estimate of base costs must also be filed and a copy served on every other party (1) when a party to a claim which is outside the financial scope of the small claims track⁷ files an allocation questionnaire⁸; and (2) where a party to a claim which is being dealt with on the fast track⁹ or on the multi-track¹⁰, or under the alternative procedure for claims under Part 8 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹¹, files a pre-trial checklist (listing questionnaire)¹², unless the court otherwise directs¹³ or unless the party in question is a litigant in person¹⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

2 As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8.

3 'Estimate of costs' means: (1) an estimate of costs of (a) base costs (including disbursements) already incurred; and (b) base costs (including disbursements) to be incurred, which a party, if successful in the proceedings, intends to seek to recover from any other party under an order for costs; or (2) in proceedings where the party has pro bono representation and intends, if successful in the proceedings, to seek an order under the Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3) (see PARA 1824), an estimate of the sum equivalent to (a) the base costs (including disbursements) that the party would have already incurred had the legal representation provided to that party not been free of charge; and (b) the base costs (including disbursements) that the party would incur if the legal representation to be provided to that party were not free of charge: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 6.2(1). 'Base costs' means costs other than the amount of any additional liability under a funding arrangement: para 2.2. As to the meaning of 'pro bono representation' see PARA 611 note 20. As to funding arrangements see PARA 1830 et seq. A party who intends to recover an additional liability (defined in CPR 43.2: see PARA 1830 note 20) need not reveal the amount of that liability in the estimate: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 6.2(2).

4 As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2. As to service of documents generally see PARA 138 et seq.

5 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 6.3. The estimate must be substantially in the form illustrated in Precedent H in the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48: para 6.5.

The orders which the court¹ may make² include an order that a party must pay:

- 1305 (3) costs from or until a certain date only⁵;
- 1306 (4) costs incurred before proceedings have begun⁶;
- 1307 (5) costs relating to particular steps taken in the proceedings⁷;
- 1308 (6) costs relating only to a distinct part of the proceedings⁸; and
- 1309 (7) interest on costs from or until a certain date, including a date before judgment⁹.

Where the court would otherwise consider making an order under head (6) above, it must instead, if practicable, make an order under head (1) or head (3) above¹⁰.

Where the court has ordered a party to pay costs, it may order an amount to be paid on account before the costs are assessed¹¹. Where a party entitled to costs is also liable to pay costs, the court may assess the costs which that party is liable to pay and either set off the amount assessed against the amount the party is entitled to be paid and direct him to pay any balance¹² or delay the issue of a certificate for the costs to which the party is entitled until he has paid the amount which he is liable to pay¹³.

1742. Costs orders in interim proceedings and applications.

There are certain costs orders which the court¹ will commonly make in proceedings before trial². They include the following:

- 1310 (1) an order for costs³ or for costs in any event: the effect of such an order is that the party in whose favour the order is made is entitled to the costs in respect of the part of the proceedings to which the order relates, whatever other costs orders are made in the proceedings;
- 1311 (2) an order for costs in the case or costs in the application: the effect of such an order is that the party in whose favour the court makes an order for costs at the end of the proceedings is entitled to his costs of the part of the proceedings to which the order relates;
- 1312 (3) an order that costs be reserved: the effect of such an order is that the decision about costs is deferred to a later occasion, but if no later order is made the costs will be costs in the case;
- 1313 (4) an order for claimant's⁴ or defendant's⁵ costs in the case or application: the effect of such an order is that if the party in whose favour the costs order is made is awarded costs at the end of the proceedings, that party is entitled to his costs of the part of the proceedings to which the order relates. If any other party is awarded costs at the end of the proceedings, the party in whose favour the final costs order is made is not liable to pay the costs of any other party in respect of the part of the proceedings to which the order relates;
- 1314 (5) an order for costs thrown away: the effect of such an order is that where, for example, a judgment or order is set aside, the party in whose favour the costs order is made is entitled to the costs which have been incurred as a consequence⁶;
- 1315 (6) an order for costs of and caused by: the effect of such an order is that where, for example, the court makes this order on an application to amend a statement of case⁷, the party in whose favour the costs order is made is entitled to the costs of preparing for and attending the application and the costs of any consequential amendment to his own statement of case;
- 1316 (7) an order for costs here and below: the effect of such an order is that the party in whose favour the costs order is made is entitled not only to his costs in respect of the proceedings in which the court makes the order but also to his costs of the proceedings in any lower court. In the case of an appeal from a Divisional Court⁸, however, the party is not entitled to any costs incurred in any court below the Divisional Court;
- 1317 (8) no order as to costs, in which case each party is to bear his own costs of the part of the proceedings to which the order relates whatever costs order the court makes at the end of the proceedings; and
- 1318 (9) an order that each party is to pay his own costs: as to the effect of such an order see head (8) above⁹.

The court has the power to make an order as to costs where a matter has been resolved without a trial and in making such an order, the following considerations may be of assistance: (a) it is irrelevant whether a party was legally aided¹⁰ or not; (b) the overriding objective¹¹ is to do justice between the parties without incurring unnecessary court time and additional cost; (c) it will sometimes be obvious which party, absent the settlement, would have won, although where it is not, how far the court will look into previously unresolved substantive issues will depend on the circumstances of the case, including the amount of costs at stake and the conduct of the parties; and (d) the fall back position will be to make no order as to costs¹².

4 As to the meaning of 'claimant' see PARA 18. Where a claimant ceased to trade before the trial of the substantive claim and assigned its equitable right to the interim relief which it had obtained, it was not to be deprived of its costs for making the applications for search orders and injunctive relief, but such costs were only to be assessed up to the date when it ceased to trade: Harrison (Logistics) Ltd (in liquidation) v Global Freight International Ltd [2002] All ER (D) 135 (Apr).

5 As to the meaning of 'defendant' see PARA 18.

6 This includes the costs of (1) preparing for and attending any hearing at which the judgment or order which has been set aside was made; (2) preparing for and attending any hearing to set aside the judgment or order in question; (3) preparing for and attending any hearing at which the court orders the proceedings or the part in question to be adjourned; and (4) any steps taken to enforce a judgment or order which has subsequently been set aside: see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 8.5, Table. 1743. Cost-capping orders.

A costs capping order is an order limiting the amount of future costs¹ (including disbursements) which a party may recover pursuant to an order for costs subsequently made². A costs capping order may be made in respect of the whole litigation or any issues which are ordered to be tried separately³, and the court⁴ may at any stage of proceedings make a costs capping order against all or any of the parties if: (1) it is in the interests of justice to do so; (2) there is a substantial risk that without such an order costs will be disproportionately incurred; and (3) it is not satisfied that the risk in head (2) can be adequately controlled by case management directions or orders⁵ and detailed assessment of costs⁶. In considering whether to exercise its discretion under these provisions, the court will consider all the circumstances of the case, including: (a) whether there is a substantial imbalance between the financial position of the parties; (b) whether the costs of determining the amount of the cap are likely to be proportionate to the overall costs of the litigation; (c) the stage which the proceedings have reached; and (d) the costs which have been incurred to date and the future costs⁷.

A costs capping order, once made, will limit the costs recoverable by the party subject to the order unless a party successfully applies to vary the order⁸. No such variation will be made unless: (i) there has been a material and substantial change of circumstances since the date when the order was made; or (ii) there is some other compelling reason why a variation should be made⁹.

1 For these purposes, 'future costs' means costs incurred in respect of work done after the date of the costs capping order but excluding the amount of any additional liability: CPR 44.18(2). As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

2 CPR 44.18(1). CPR 44.18 does not apply to protective costs orders: CPR 44.18(3). As to protective costs orders see PARA 1744.

An application for a costs capping order must be made on notice in accordance with CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq): CPR 44.19(1). The application notice must:

- 103 (1) set out: (a) whether the costs capping order is in respect of the whole of the litigation or a particular issue which is ordered to be tried separately; and (b) why a costs capping order should be made (CPR 44.19(2)(a)); and
- 104 (2) be accompanied by an estimate of costs setting out: (a) the costs (and disbursements) incurred by the applicant to date; and (b) the costs (and disbursements) which the applicant is likely to incur in the future conduct of the proceedings (CPR 44.19(2)(b)).

The court may give directions for the determination of the application, and such directions may:

- 105 (i) direct any party to the proceedings to file: (A) a schedule of costs in the form set out in the practice direction supplementing CPR 44.19; (B) written submissions on all or any part of the issues arising (CPR 44.19(3)(a));
- 106 (ii) fix the date and time estimate of the hearing of the application (CPR 44.19(3)(b));
- 107 (iii) indicate whether the judge hearing the application will sit with an assessor at the hearing of the application (CPR 44.19(3)(c));
- 108 (iv) include any further directions as the court see fit (CPR 44.19(3)(d)).

1744. Protective costs orders.

The court's¹ wide discretion in exercising its power to make orders relating to costs² extends to the making of protective costs orders³. The general purpose of a protective costs order is to allow a claimant of limited means access to the court to advance his case without the fear of an order for substantial costs being made against him⁴. The governing principles in relation to the making of protective costs orders are:

- 1319 (1) an order may be made at any stage of the proceedings, on such conditions as the court thinks fit, provided that the court is satisfied that:
- 41
- 105. (a) the issues raised are of general public importance⁵;
 - 106. (b) the public interest requires that those issues should be resolved;
 - 107. (c) the applicant has no private interest in the outcome of the case⁶;
 - 108. (d) having regard to the financial resources of the applicant and the respondent(s) and to the amount of costs that are likely to be involved it is fair and just to make the order; and
 - 109. (e) if the order is not made the applicant will probably discontinue the proceedings and will be acting reasonably in so doing;
- 42
- 1320 (2) if those acting for the applicant are doing so pro bono this will be likely to enhance the merits of the application for a protective costs order;
- 1321 (3) it is for the court, in its discretion, to decide whether it is fair and just to make the order in the light of the considerations set out above⁷.

There is judicial guidance as to the procedure to be followed when an application is made for a protective costs order⁸.

1745. Solicitor's duty to notify client.

Where the court¹ makes a costs² order against a legally represented³ party, and the party is not present when the order is made, the party's solicitor must notify his client⁴ in writing of the costs order no later than seven days after the solicitor receives notice of the order⁵. He must also explain why the order came to be made⁶.

Although no sanction for breach of this rule is specified, the court may, either in the order for costs itself or in a subsequent order, require the solicitor to produce to the court evidence showing that he took reasonable steps to comply with the rule⁷.

As to the Legal Services Commission see generally LEGAL AID. In the Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48, 'solicitor' means a solicitor of the Supreme Court or other person with a right of audience in relation to proceedings, who is conducting the claim or defence as the case may be on behalf of a party to the proceedings and, where the context admits, includes a patent agent: para 1.4. 1745 Solicitor's duty to notify client

NOTE 4--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(2) GENERAL RULES ABOUT COSTS/(i) Introduction/1746. Costs on the small claims track and fast track.

1746. Costs on the small claims track and fast track.

The rules as to costs¹ on the small claims track² and fast track³ contain special rules about liability for costs⁴, the amount of costs which the court⁵ may award⁶ and the procedure for assessing costs⁷. Once a claim is allocated to a particular track, those special rules apply to the period before, as well as after, allocation except where the court or a practice direction provides otherwise⁸ and save to the extent (if any) that an order for costs in respect of that work was made before allocation⁹. The rules referred to are discussed in detail elsewhere in this title¹⁰.

Before a claim is allocated to one of those tracks the court is not restricted by any of the special rules that apply to that track¹¹.

Where a claim, issued for a sum in excess of the normal financial scope of the small claims track¹², is allocated to that track only because an admission of part of the claim by the defendant¹³ reduces the amount in dispute to a sum within the normal scope of that track, then on entering judgment for the admitted part before allocation of the balance of the claim the court may allow costs in respect of the proceedings down to that date¹⁴.

Where the court assesses costs in relation to a claim which has been allocated to the fast track¹⁵ and settles before the start of the trial, and is considering the amount of costs to be allowed in respect of a party's advocate¹⁶ for preparing for the trial, it may not allow, in respect of such advocate's costs, an amount that exceeds the amount of fast track trial costs¹⁷ which would have been payable in relation to the claim had the trial taken place¹⁸. When deciding the amount to be allowed in respect of the advocate's costs, the court must have regard to when the claim was settled and when the court was notified that the claim had settled¹⁹.

(ii) Assessment of Costs

1747. Basis of assessment.

Where the court¹ is to assess the amount of costs² (whether by summary³ or detailed assessment⁴) it will assess those costs on the standard basis or on the indemnity basis, but the court will not in either case allow costs which have been unreasonably incurred or are unreasonable in amount⁵. Where the amount of costs is to be assessed on the standard basis, the court will only allow costs which are proportionate to the matters in issue⁶ and will resolve any doubt which it may have as to whether costs were reasonably incurred or reasonable and proportionate in amount in favour of the paying party⁷. Where the amount of costs is to be assessed on the indemnity basis⁸, the court will resolve any doubt which it may have as to whether costs were reasonably incurred or were reasonable in amount in favour of the receiving party⁹.

Where the court makes an order about costs without indicating the basis on which the costs are to be assessed or makes an order for costs to be assessed on a basis other than the standard basis or the indemnity basis, the costs will be assessed on the standard basis¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

2 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

3 As to the meaning of 'summary assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see PARA 1752.

4 As to the meaning of 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see PARA 1779 et seq.

5 CPR 44.4(1). Where the amount of a solicitor's remuneration in respect of non-contentious business is regulated by any general orders made under the Solicitors Act 1974 (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS), the amount of the costs to be allowed in respect of any such business which falls to be assessed by the court will be decided in accordance with those general orders rather than CPR 44.4 (see the text and notes 6-10) and CPR 44.5 (see PARA 1748); CPR 44.4(6). As to how the court decides the amount of costs payable under a contract see CPR 48.3; and PARA 1806.

6 CPR 44.4(2)(a). In applying the test of proportionality the court will have regard to CPR 1.1(2)(c) (dealing with a case justly in pursuance of the overriding objective: see PARA 33 head (3) in the text): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 11.1. The relationship between the total costs incurred and the financial value of the claim may not be a reliable guide. A fixed percentage cannot be applied in all cases to the value of the claim in order to ascertain whether or not the costs are proportionate: para 11.1. In a modest claim the proportion of costs is likely to be higher than in a large claim, and may even equal or possibly exceed the amount in dispute: para 11.2. Proportionality is an important feature of the new costs regime: Lownds v Home Office [2002] EWCA Civ 365, [2002] 4 All ER 775; followed in Mattel Inc v RSW Group plc [2004] EWHC 1610 (Ch), [2005] FSR 38; and applied in Simms v Law Society [2005] EWCA Civ 849, [2005] All ER (D) 131 (Jul). It is reasonable for a libel claimant to incur significant costs to recover a modest monetary award where his reputation is vindicated by a reasoned judgment: Rackham v Sandy [2005] EWHC 1354 (QB), [2005] All ER (D) 326 (Jun). See also Lahey v Pirelli Tyres Ltd [2007] EWCA Civ 91, [2007] 1 WLR 998. As to the application of proportionality in the context of a minor personal injury claim see Jefferson v National Freight Carriers plc [2001] EWCA Civ 2082, [2001] All ER (D) 411 (Feb) per Woolf LC. Case management powers allow a judge to exercise the powers of limiting costs either indirectly or even directly so that they are proportionate to the amount involved: Griffiths v Solutia UK Ltd (formerly Monsanto Chemicals Ltd) [2001] EWCA Civ 736, [2001] All ER (D) 196 (Apr), per Sir Christopher Staughton. As to proportionality and additional liabilities see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 paras 11.5, 11.7; and see PARAS 1833-1835.

7 CPR 44.4(2)(b). As to the meaning of 'paying party' see PARA 1836 note 14. Factors which the court may take into account are set out in CPR 44.5 (see PARA 1748): see CPR 44.4(2) note.

8 The award for costs on the indemnity basis is often, but not always, reserved to cases where the court wishes to indicate its disapproval of the conduct of the paying party. Indemnity costs may be awarded against a party whose conduct has been unreasonable, even though the conduct could not properly be regarded as lacking moral probity or deserving moral condemnation: Reid Minty (a firm) v Taylor [2001] EWCA Civ 1723, [2002] 2 All ER 150, [2001] All ER (D) 427 (Oct); explained in Kiam v MGN Ltd (No 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 66, [2002] 2 All ER 242, [2002] All ER (D) 65 (Feb). The thrust of the CPR regime is to require the parties to behave reasonably towards each other: Baron v Lovell [2000] PIQR P20, (1999) Times, 14 September, CA (late service of expert's report). Indemnity costs are not intended to be penal but compensatory: Petrotrade Inc v Texaco Ltd [2001] 4 All ER 853, [2002] 1 WLR 947, CA; McPhilemy v Times Newspapers Ltd (No 2) [2001] EWCA Civ 933, [2001] 4 All ER 861, [2002] 1 WLR 934. See also Kiam v MGN Ltd (No 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 66, [2002] 2 All ER 242, [2002] All ER (D) 65 (Feb), where it was held that the refusal of a settlement offer would rarely attract an adverse order for costs on the indemnity rather than the standard basis; MGN Ltd v Holborn [2002] All ER (D) 176 (Apr), where Jacob J held that the defendant had behaved unreasonably and that an award of indemnity costs was appropriate; Craig v Railtrack plc (in railway administration) [2002] EWHC 168 (QB), [2002] All ER (D) 212 (Feb) (defendants' approach in taking five years to resolve the liability issue unreasonable, considering that it was certain that at least one of the defendants would be held liable; indemnity basis for costs appropriate). Indemnity costs will not be awarded on the ground that a party has brought proceedings which have failed or have little chance of success: Shaina Investment Corp v Standard Bank London Ltd [2002] CPLR 14. An award of costs on an indemnity basis may be made to a party in receipt of legal aid: Brawley v Marczyński (Nos 1 and 2) [2002] EWCA Civ 756, [2002] EWCA Civ 1453, [2002] 4 All ER 1060, [2003] 1 WLR 813. In deciding whether to award costs on an indemnity basis it is immaterial that the claim arises out of very serious conduct: Coca-Cola Co v Raymond Ketteridge [2003] EWHC 2488 (Ch), [2004] FSR 608. See also Jones v Associated Newspapers Ltd [2007] EWHC 1489 (QB), [2008] 1 All ER 240.

1748. Factors to be taken into account in deciding the amount of costs.

The court¹ is to have regard to all the circumstances² in deciding whether costs³ were proportionately and reasonably incurred⁴ or were proportionate and reasonable in amount⁵, if it is assessing costs on the standard basis⁶. If it is assessing costs on the indemnity basis⁷, it must also have regard to all the circumstances in deciding whether costs were unreasonably incurred⁸ or unreasonable in amount⁹. In particular the court must give effect to any orders which have already been made¹⁰. The court must also have regard to:

- 1322 (1) the conduct of all the parties, including in particular conduct before, as well as during, the proceedings and the efforts made, if any, before and during the proceedings in order to try to resolve the dispute¹¹;
- 1323 (2) the amount or value of any money or property involved¹²;
- 1324 (3) the importance of the matter to all the parties¹³;
- 1325 (4) the particular complexity of the matter or the difficulty or novelty of the questions raised¹⁴;
- 1326 (5) the skill, effort, specialised knowledge and responsibility involved¹⁵;
- 1327 (6) the time spent on the case¹⁶; and
- 1328 (7) the place where, and the circumstances in which, work or any part of it was done¹⁷.

On an assessment of the costs of a party the court may also have regard to any estimate previously filed¹⁸ by that party, or by any other party in the same proceedings. Such an estimate may be taken into account as a factor among others when assessing the reasonableness of any costs claimed¹⁹. Additionally, the Supreme Court Act 1981 provides that where a person has commenced proceedings in the High Court but those proceedings should, in the opinion of the court, have been commenced in a county court²⁰, the person responsible for determining the amount which is to be awarded to that person by way of costs must have regard to those circumstances²¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

2 The provisions set out in the text concern the factors to be taken into account in deciding the amount of costs, rather than the liability for costs, as to which see PARAS 1738-1741. See also Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 Section 11. Costs as between the parties are given by the law as an indemnity to the person entitled to them; they are not given as a bonus to the party who receives them: Harold v Smith (1860) 5 H & N 381; Gundry v Sainsbury [1910] 1 KB 645. The indemnity principle is to be applied on an item by item basis rather than a global basis: General of Berne Insurance Co v Jardine Reinsurance Management Ltd [1998] 2 All ER 301, [1998] 1 WLR 123, CA; Nederlandse Reassurantie Groep Holding NV v Bacon & Woodrow [1998] 2 Costs LR 32, CA, per Tucker J. As to the reasonableness of hourly rates see Johnson v Reed Corrugated Cases Ltd [1992] 1 All ER 169 ('A' and 'B' factors) citing with approval the decision in Re Eastwood, Lloyds Bank Ltd v Eastwood [1975] Ch 112, [1973] 3 All ER 1079 (revsd [1975] Ch 112, [1974] 3 All ER 603, CA); Leopold Lazarus Ltd v Secretary of State for Trade and Industry (1976) 120 Sol Jo 268, (1976) Times, 9 April; R v Wilkinson [1980] 1 All ER 597, [1980] 1 WLR 396. As to the reasonableness of instructing leading counsel or two counsel see Juby v London Fire and Civil Defence Authority, Saunders v Essex County Council (24 April 1990, unreported). It is relevant to take into account the fact that the other party has instructed leading counsel: British Metal Corp Ltd v Ludlow Bros (1913) Ltd [1938] Ch 787, [1938] 3 All ER 194. The correct test is to ask whether or not it was reasonable to instruct leading counsel, not whether the case was well within the capabilities of junior counsel: R v Dudley Magistrates' Court, ex p Power City Stores Ltd (1990) 154 JP 654, [1990] NLJR 361, DC. As to the reasonableness of the level of counsel's fees see Simpsons Motor Sales (London)

Ltd v Hendon Corpn [1964] 3 All ER 833, [1965] 1 WLR 112; Loveday v Renton (No 2) [1992] 3 All ER 184. As to the reasonableness of success fees in conditional fee cases and of the reasonableness of after the event insurance premiums see Callery v Gray [2001] EWCA Civ 1117, [2001] 3 All ER 833, [2001] 1 WLR 2112; Callery v Gray (No 2) [2001] EWCA Civ 1246, [2001] 4 All ER 1, [2001] 1 WLR 2142 (affd [2002] UKHL 28, [2002] All ER (D) 233 (Jun)); and Sarwar v Alam [2001] EWCA Civ 1401, [2001] 4 All ER 541, [2002] 1 WLR 125. See Habib Bank Ltd v Ahmed [2004] EWCA Civ 805, (2004) Independent, 30 June (issues within grasp of competent junior counsel; cost of hiring leading counsel not allowed). As to the caution to be exercised in applying the pre-CPR authorities cited in this note see PARAS 33 text and note 2, 1736.

3 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730. In Francis v Francis and Dickerson [1956] P 87, [1953] 3 All ER 836, it was held that the correct viewpoint from which to judge reasonableness is that of a sensible solicitor considering what, in the light of his then knowledge, was reasonable in the interests of his client. In summarily assessing costs it was wrong in principle for the judge not to have gone into any sort of detailed analysis of the costs claimed and it was wrong for the judge to have applied his own tariff as to what costs were appropriate for a 'one day, paper only' appeal: 800 Flowers, Trade Mark Application, 1-800 Flowers Inc v Phonenames Ltd [2001] EWCA Civ 721, [2001] IP & T 839, [2001] All ER (D) 218 (May). 5 CPR 44.5(1)(a)(ii).

6 CPR 44.5(1). As to the standard basis see PARA 1747. Guidance has been given on the issue of proportionality when determining costs: Giambrone v JMC Holidays Ltd (formerly Sunworld Holidays Ltd) [2002] EWHC 2932 (QB), [2003] 1 All ER 982.

9 CPR 44.5(1)(b)(ii).

11 CPR 44.5(3)(a). Costs will be awarded on an indemnity basis against a party who has brought proceedings where he has placed his own concerns, such as commercial interests, above the appropriateness of the proceedings in question: Amoco (UK) Exploration Co v British American Offshore Ltd [2002] BLR 135. See also Blakes Estates Ltd v Government of Montserrat [2005] UKPC 46, [2006] 1 WLR 297.

13 CPR 44.5(3)(c).

14 CPR 44.5(3)(d).

15 CPR 44.5(3)(e).

16 CPR 44.5(3)(f). Where a trial takes place, the time taken by the court in dealing with a particular issue may not be an accurate guide to the amount of time properly spent by the legal or other representatives in preparation for the trial of that issue: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 11.3.

17 CPR 44.5(3)(g). Different hourly rates apply depending upon the location in which the work was done and national guideline rates have been published by the Supreme Court Costs Office. In a claim connected only with Manchester the rates applicable to Manchester rather than London were allowed: Sullivan v Co-operative Insurance Society Ltd (1999) Times, 19 May, CA; and see Wraith v Sheffield Forgemasters Ltd [1998] 1 All ER 82, [1998] 1 WLR 132, CA. The expense rates of a specialist provincial firm may be higher than the average for other non-specialist local firms but if it was reasonable for the specialist firm to have been instructed the higher rates may be allowed: Jones v Secretary of State for Wales [1997] 2 All ER 507, [1997] 1 WLR 1008. Salaried solicitors employed by a party to whom they are expected to pay over any costs recovered are normally entitled to be allowed the rates commonly allowed on assessment to a fee earner of similar standing in private practice: Re Eastwood, Lloyds Bank Ltd v Eastwood [1975] Ch 112, [1974] 3 All ER 603, CA; Cole v British Telecommunications plc [2000] All ER (D) 917, CA. CPR 35.4(4) gives the court power to limit the amount that a party may recover with regard to the fees and expenses of an expert: see PARA 838. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court of England and Wales is renamed the Senior Courts of England and Wales: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

18 As to when an estimate of costs must be filed, and when the court may order its filing, see PARA 1740. As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8.

19 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 6.6(1).

20 In accordance with any provision made under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 1 (see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 579) or by or under any other enactment: Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(8)(b) (s 51 substituted by the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 4(1)). As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1. As to the commencement of proceedings see PARA 116 et seq.

21 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(8) (as substituted: see note 12). Where, in complying with this provision, the responsible person reduces the amount which would otherwise be awarded to the person in question, the amount of that reduction must not exceed 25% and on any detailed assessment of the costs payable by that person to his legal representative, regard must be had to the amount of the reduction: see s 51(9) (as so substituted). The Lord Chancellor may by order amend s 51(9)(a) by substituting, for the percentage for the time being mentioned there, a different percentage: s 51(10) (as so substituted). Any such order must be made by statutory instrument and may make such transitional or incidental provision as the Lord Chancellor considers expedient; but no such statutory instrument may be made unless a draft of the instrument has been approved by both Houses of Parliament: s 51(11), (12) (as so substituted). At the date at which this title states the law, no such order had been made. As to the meaning of 'legal representative' for these purposes see PARA 1833 note 13; and as to the Lord Chancellor see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 501; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARA 477 et seq.

UPDATE

1748 Factors to be taken into account in deciding the amount of costs

NOTE 17--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(2) GENERAL RULES ABOUT COSTS/(ii) Assessment of Costs/1749. VAT on costs.

1749. VAT on costs.

When claims for VAT are made in respect of costs¹ being dealt with by way of summary² or detailed assessment³, the following provisions apply⁴. The number allocated by HM Revenue and Customs to every person registered for VAT⁵ (except a government department) must appear in a prominent place at the head of every statement⁶, bill of costs⁷, fee sheet, account or voucher⁸ on which VAT is being included as part of a claim for costs⁹.

VAT should not be included in a claim for costs if the receiving party¹⁰ is able to recover the VAT as input tax¹¹. Where the receiving party is able to obtain credit from HM Revenue and Customs for a proportion of the VAT as input tax, only that proportion which is not eligible for credit should be included in the claim for costs¹². The receiving party has responsibility for ensuring that VAT is claimed only when the receiving party is unable to recover the VAT or a proportion thereof as input tax¹³.

Where there is a dispute as to whether VAT is properly claimed the receiving party must provide a certificate signed by that party's solicitors or auditors¹⁴. Where the receiving party is a litigant in person who is claiming VAT¹⁵, reference should be made by him to HM Revenue and Customs and wherever possible a statement to similar effect produced at the hearing at which the costs are assessed¹⁶.

Where there is a dispute as to whether any service in respect of which a charge is proposed to be made in the bill is zero-rated¹⁷ or exempt¹⁸, reference must be made to HM Revenue and Customs and wherever possible the view of HM Revenue and Customs obtained and made known at the hearing at which the costs are assessed¹⁹. Such application should be made by the receiving party. In the case of a bill from a solicitor to his own client²⁰, such application should be made by the client²¹.

On an assessment between parties, where costs are being paid to a government department in respect of services rendered by its legal staff, VAT should not be added²². Where an order is made for the payment of a sum to the prescribed charity²³ any bill presented for agreement or assessment pursuant to that order must not include a claim for VAT²⁴.

VAT will be payable in respect of every supply made pursuant to a legal aid or Legal Services Commission ('LSC') certificate where the person making the supply is a taxable person and the assisted person²⁵ or LSC funded client²⁶ belongs in the United Kingdom or another member state of the European Union and is a private individual or receives the supply for non-business purposes²⁷. Where the assisted person or LSC funded client belongs outside the European Union, VAT is generally not payable unless the supply relates to land in the United Kingdom²⁸. Where the assisted person or LSC funded client is registered for VAT and the legal services paid for by the LSC are in connection with that person's business, the VAT on those services will be payable by the LSC only²⁹. Any summary of costs payable by the LSC must be drawn so as to show the total VAT on counsel's fees as a separate item from the VAT on other disbursements and the VAT on profit costs³⁰.

Should there be a change in the rate of VAT between the conclusion of a detailed assessment and the issue of the final costs certificate³¹, any interested party may apply for the detailed assessment to be varied so as to take account of any increase or reduction in the amount of tax payable. Once the final costs certificate has been issued, no such variation will be permitted³².

In a costs certificate payable by the LSC, the VAT on solicitor's costs, counsel's fees and disbursements will be shown separately³³.

A party may recover the fixed costs¹ in respect of solicitors' charges specified in Part 45 of the Civil Procedure Rules² in accordance with that Part³. Fixed costs are discussed elsewhere in this title⁴.

Where the court⁵ orders the detailed assessment⁶ of costs⁷ of a hearing at which one or more counsel⁸ appeared for a party and where the order for costs states the opinion of the court as to whether or not the hearing was fit for the attendance of one or more counsel⁹, a costs officer¹⁰ conducting a detailed assessment of costs to which that order relates will have regard to the opinion stated¹¹.

Where the court refers any matter to the conveyancing counsel of the court¹² the fees payable to counsel in respect of the work done or to be done will be assessed by the court¹³.

Where the court¹ orders a party to pay costs² to another party (other than fixed costs³) it may either make a summary assessment⁴ of the costs or order detailed assessment⁵ of the costs by a costs officer⁶, unless any rule, practice direction or other enactment provides otherwise⁷. An order for costs will be treated as an order for the amount of costs to be decided by a detailed assessment unless the order otherwise provides⁸. 1752. Summary assessment.

Whenever a court¹ makes an order about costs² which does not provide for fixed costs³ to be paid, the court must consider whether to make a summary assessment⁴ of costs⁵. The general rule is that the court should make a summary assessment of the costs at the conclusion of a case which has been dealt with on the fast track⁶, in which case the order will deal with the costs of the whole claim, and at the conclusion of any other hearing which has lasted not more than one day, in which case the order will deal with the costs of the application or matter to which the hearing related⁷. The court should also make a summary assessment of the costs in the following hearings in the Court of Appeal: (1) contested directions hearings; (2) applications for permission to appeal at which the respondent is present; (3) dismissal list hearings at which the respondent is present; and (4) appeals from case management decisions, as well as appeals listed for one day or less⁸. The general rule does not, however, apply if there is good reason not to make a summary assessment, for example where the paying party⁹ shows substantial grounds for disputing the sum claimed for costs that cannot be dealt with summarily or there is insufficient time to carry out a summary assessment¹⁰. Nor does it apply to a mortgagee's costs incurred in mortgage possession proceedings or other proceedings relating to a mortgage unless the mortgagee asks the court to make an order for his costs to be paid by another party¹¹.

The court will not make a summary assessment of the costs of a receiving party¹² who is an assisted person¹³ or LSC funded client¹⁴. Nor will it make a summary assessment of the costs of a receiving party who is a child or protected party¹⁵ unless the solicitor acting for the child or protected party has waived the right to further costs¹⁶; but it may make a summary assessment of costs payable by a child or protected party¹⁷.

It is the duty of the parties and their legal representatives¹⁸ to assist the judge¹⁹ in making a summary assessment of costs in any case to which the general rule applies, in accordance with the following provisions²⁰. Each party who intends to claim costs must prepare a written statement of the costs he intends to claim showing separately in the form of a schedule:

- 1329 (a) the number of hours to be claimed;
- 1330 (b) the hourly rate to be claimed;
- 1331 (c) the grade of fee earner;
- 1332 (d) the amount and nature of any disbursement to be claimed, other than counsel's fee for appearing at the hearing;
- 1333 (e) the amount of solicitor's costs to be claimed for attending or appearing at the hearing;
- 1334 (f) the fees of counsel to be claimed in respect of the hearing; and
- 1335 (g) any value added tax ('VAT') to be claimed on these amounts²¹.

The statement of costs must follow as closely as possible the prescribed form²² and must be signed by the party or his legal representative²³. The statement of costs must be filed²⁴ at court and copies of it must be served on any party against whom an order for payment of those costs is intended to be sought. The statement of costs must be filed and the copies of it must be served as soon as possible and in any event not less than 24 hours before the date fixed for the hearing²⁵. The failure by a party, without reasonable excuse, to comply with these requirements will be taken into account by the court in deciding what order to make about the costs of the claim, hearing or application, and about the costs of any further hearing or detailed assessment²⁶ hearing that may be necessary as a result of that failure²⁷.

If the court makes a summary assessment of costs at the conclusion of proceedings²⁸ the court will specify separately the base costs, and if appropriate, the additional liability allowed as solicitor's charges, counsel's fees, other disbursements and any VAT and the amount of fast track trial costs which is awarded under Part 46 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')²⁹. The court awarding costs cannot make an order for a summary assessment of costs by a costs officer³⁰. If a summary assessment of costs is appropriate but the court awarding costs is unable to do so on the day, the court must give directions as to a further hearing before the same judge³¹.

Where an application has been made and the parties to the application agree an order by consent without any party attending, the parties should agree a figure for costs to be inserted in the consent order or agree that there should be no order for costs. If the parties cannot agree the costs position, attendance on the appointment will be necessary but, unless good reason can be shown for the failure to deal with costs as set out above, no costs will be allowed for that attendance³². The court will not give its approval to disproportionate and unreasonable costs; accordingly when the amount of the costs to be paid has been agreed between the parties the order for costs must state that the order is by consent³³. If the judge is to make an order which is not by consent, the judge will, so far as possible, ensure that the final figure is not disproportionate and/or unreasonable having regard to the overriding objective³⁴. The judge will retain this responsibility notwithstanding the absence of challenge to individual items in the make-up of the figure sought, but the fact that the paying party is not disputing the amount of costs can be taken as some indication that the amount is proportionate and reasonable. The judge will therefore intervene only if satisfied that the costs are so disproportionate that it is right to do so³⁵.

Particular provision is made with respect to parties in receipt of funding by the Legal Services Commission³⁶.

(iii) Costs in Particular Situations

1753. Costs following allocation and re-allocation.

Any costs¹ orders made before a claim is allocated will not be affected by allocation². Where a claim is allocated to a track and the court³ subsequently re-allocates that claim to a different track, then unless the court orders otherwise, any special rules about costs applying to the first track will apply to the claim up to the date of re-allocation⁴ and any such rules applying to the second track will apply from the date of re-allocation⁵.

Before making the order to re-allocate the claim, the court must decide whether any party is to pay costs to any other party down to the date of the order to re-allocate in accordance with the rules about costs contained in Part 27 of the Civil Procedure Rules relating to the small claims track⁶. If it decides to make such an order about costs, it will make a summary assessment⁷ of those costs in accordance with Part 27⁸.

Where such an order is deemed to be made in favour of a party with pro bono representation⁴, that party may apply for an order⁵ for a payment to the prescribed charity to be made⁶. 1755. Costs-only proceedings.

Where the parties to a dispute have reached an agreement on all issues (including which party is to pay the costs¹) which is made or confirmed in writing, but they have failed to agree the amount of those costs and no proceedings have been started, either party to the agreement may start proceedings by issuing a claim form² in accordance with Part 8 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')³. The claim will be for an order for costs to be made to enable the costs to be assessed⁴. It must contain or be accompanied by the agreement or confirmation⁵ and must:

- 1336 (1) identify the claim or dispute to which the agreement to pay costs relates;
- 1337 (2) state the date and terms of the agreement on which the claimant⁶ relies;
- 1338 (3) set out or have attached to it a draft of the order which the claimant seeks;
- 1339 (4) state the amount of the costs claimed; and
- 1340 (5) state whether the costs are claimed on the standard or indemnity basis⁷; if no basis is specified the costs will be treated as being claimed on the standard basis⁸.

The evidence to be filed and served with the claim form⁹ must include copies of the documents on which the claimant relies to prove the defendant's¹⁰ agreement to pay costs¹¹.

A claim issued under these provisions may be dealt with without being allocated to a track¹² and a costs judge¹³ or a district judge¹⁴ has jurisdiction to hear and decide any issue which may arise in a claim so issued irrespective of the amount of the costs claimed or of the value of the claim to which the agreement to pay costs relates¹⁵.

When the time for filing the defendant's acknowledgment of service¹⁶ has expired, the claimant may by letter request the court to make an order in the terms of his claim, unless the defendant has filed an acknowledgment of service stating that he intends to contest the claim or to seek a different order¹⁷.

The court¹⁸ may make an order for costs¹⁹, which will be treated as an order for the amount of costs to be determined by a detailed assessment²⁰, or may dismiss the claim²¹. The court must dismiss the claim if it is opposed²².

An order may be made by consent in terms which differ from those set out in the claim form²³.

Nothing in these provisions prevents a person from issuing a claim form under Part 7 or Part 8 of the CPR to sue on an agreement made in settlement of a dispute where that agreement makes provision for costs, nor from claiming in that case an order for costs or a specified sum in respect of costs²⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

2 The claim form must be issued in the court which would have been the appropriate office in accordance with CPR 47.4 (see PARA 1782) had proceedings been brought in relation to the substantive claim. It should not be issued in the High Court unless the dispute to which the agreement relates was of such a value or type that had proceedings been begun they would have been commenced in the High Court: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.1. A claim form which is to be issued in the High Court at the Royal Courts of Justice will be issued in the Supreme Court Costs Office: para 17.2. As to the commencement of proceedings in the High Court or a county court see PARA 116; and as to the Supreme Court Costs Office see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 642. As from a day to be appointed, the Supreme Court of England and Wales is renamed the Senior Courts of England and Wales: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(1). At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

3 CPR 44.12A(1), (2). CPR 48.3 (amount of costs where costs are payable pursuant to a contract: see PARA 1806) does not apply to claims started under the procedure in CPR 44.12A: CPR 44.12A(5). As to the alternative procedure for claims under CPR Pt 8 see PARA 127 et seq. 7 As to the standard basis and the indemnity basis see PARA 1747. Where the substantial dispute between the parties has been resolved but the issue of costs remains outstanding, the court has to take a broad brush approach to the substantive issue, which will be academic; this may be difficult to reconcile with the level of detail which would be required in order to decide whether costs on the indemnity basis are justified: see Jobserve Ltd v Relational Designers (No 2) [2002] All ER (D) 210 (May).

18 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

19 CPR 44.12A(4)(a)(i). The judge is entitled, in principle, to embark in a summary way on an assessment of the incidence of costs; he is not required to adopt the sort of procedure that might perhaps have been appropriate if he had been deciding the substantive issues in the application: Coyne v DRC Distribution Ltd [2008] EWCA Civ 488, [2008] All ER (D) 193 (May).

20 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.8(1). As to the meaning of 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see CPR Pt 47; and PARA 1779 et seq. CPR 44.4(4) (determination of basis of assessment: see PARA 1747) also applies to the order: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.8(1). In cases in which an additional liability under a funding arrangement is claimed (see PARA 1830), the costs judge or district judge should have regard to the time when and the extent to which the claim has been settled and to the fact that the claim has been settled without the need to commence proceedings: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.8(2).

21 CPR 44.12A(4)(a)(ii). In proceedings to which CPR Pt 45 Section II (CPR45.7-45.14: fixed recoverable costs in road accident cases) applies (see PARA 1769), the court must assess the costs in the manner set out in that Section: CPR 44.12A(4A).

22 CPR 44.12A(4)(b). A claim will be treated as opposed for these purposes if the defendant files an acknowledgment of service stating that he intends to contest the proceedings or to seek a different remedy, and a claim will not be treated as opposed if the defendant files an acknowledgment of service stating that he disputes the amount of the claim for costs: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.9(1). An order dismissing the claim will be made as soon as an acknowledgment of service opposing the claim is filed; the dismissal of a claim under CPR 44.12A(4) does not prevent the claimant from issuing another claim form under CPR Pt 7 (see PARA 118 et seq) or Pt 8 based on the agreement or alleged agreement to which the proceedings under CPR 44.12A(4) related: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.9(2). A costs officer may make an order dismissing a claim under para 17.9: para 17.5. As to the meaning of 'costs officer' see PARA 1734 note 17.

23 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.7. CPR 40.6 (consent judgments and orders: see PARA 1141) applies where an order is to be made by consent: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.7. A costs officer may make an order by consent: para 17.5.

24 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 17.11.

TEXT AND NOTES--As to provision for costs in respect of the insurance premium in publication cases see CPR 44.12B (added by SI 2009/2092).

NOTE 2--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

TEXT AND NOTES 18-22--CPR 44.12A(4) amended: SI 2009/2092.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(2) GENERAL RULES ABOUT COSTS/(iii) Costs in Particular Situations/1756. Special situations.

1756. Special situations.

Where the court¹ makes an order which does not mention costs², the general rule is that no party is entitled to costs or to seek an order for a payment to the prescribed charity to be made³ in relation to that order⁴ but this does not affect any entitlement of a party to recover costs out of a fund held by that party as trustee or personal representative, or pursuant to any lease, mortgage or other security⁵. Where the court makes an order granting permission to appeal, an order granting permission to apply for judicial review or any other order or direction sought by a party on an application without notice, and its order does not mention costs, it will be deemed to include an order for applicant's costs in the case⁶.

The court hearing an appeal⁷ may, unless it dismisses the appeal, make orders about the costs of the proceedings giving rise to the appeal as well as the costs of the appeal⁸. A tribunal making itself a party to an appeal puts itself at risk as to an order for costs⁹.

Where proceedings are transferred from one court to another¹⁰, the court to which they are transferred may, subject to any order of the court which ordered the transfer, deal with all the costs, including the costs before the transfer¹¹.

The Civil Procedure Rules do not make specific provision for situations where a party incurs extra costs as a result of the death or incapacity of the presiding judge¹². Under the Administration of Justice Act 1985, however, where the judge¹³, or (as the case may be) any of the judges, presiding at any civil proceedings in the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal¹⁴, in the High Court¹⁵ or in a county court¹⁶ becomes temporarily or permanently incapacitated from presiding at the proceedings, or dies, at any time prior to the conclusion of the proceedings, and any party represented at the proceedings incurs any additional costs¹⁷ in consequence of the judge's incapacity or death, the Secretary of State may, if he thinks fit, reimburse¹⁸ that party in respect of any such additional costs, or in respect of such part thereof as he may determine, subject to the prescribed limit¹⁹ for such reimbursement²⁰. Additional costs which are incurred by a party where any such proceedings are due to be begun before a judge at a particular time but are not begun at that time by reason of the judge becoming temporarily or permanently incapacitated from presiding at the proceedings or by reason of his death may also be reimbursed, subject to the prescribed limit, under these provisions²¹.

2 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

3 I.e. an order under the Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3): see PARA 1824. As to the meaning of 'prescribed charity' see PARA 611 note 20.

4 CPR 44.13(1)(a). This would not affect the entitlement of a legal representative to a person receiving services funded by the Legal Services Commission from recovering solicitor and client costs from the Legal Services Commission. As to costs in cases where a party is funded by the Legal Services Commission see PARA 1814 et seq.

5 CPR 44.13(1)(b).

6 CPR 44.13(1A). Any party affected by a deemed order for costs under CPR 44.13(1A) may apply at any time to vary the order: CPR 44.13(1B). As to costs in judicial review claims, see Practice Note (Administrative Court) [2004] All ER (D) 212 (May).

7 As to appeals see PARA 1657 et seq.

8 CPR 44.13(2).

9 Costs retrievable from the Pensions Ombudsman in the case of a successful appeal brought against his decision are not limited only to the amount by which they were increased by his appearance but may in principle extend to the whole of the successful party's costs of the appeal: Moore's (Wallisdown) Ltd v Pensions Ombudsman, Royal and Sun Alliance Life and Pensions Ltd v Pensions Ombudsman [2002] 1 All ER 737, [2001] All ER (D) 372 (Dec).

10 As to the transfer of proceedings see PARA 66 et seq.

11 CPR 44.13(3), (4); and see the County Courts Act 1984 s 45(1); and PARA 69.

12 As to the death or incapacity of a judge see generally COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 325.

13 For these purposes, 'judge' in relation to any proceedings, includes (1) a master, registrar or other person acting in a judicial capacity in the proceedings; or (2) a person assisting at the proceedings as an assessor (see PARA 1133) or as an adviser appointed by virtue of the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 70(3) (scientific advisers to assist the Patents Court: see PATENTS AND REGISTERED DESIGNS vol 79 (2008) PARA 638); and, in relation to any such person as is mentioned in head (2), any reference to presiding at any proceedings is to be construed as including a reference to assisting at the proceedings: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(6) (amended by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 106, Sch 15 Pt III). As from a day to be appointed, the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(6) is amended by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2) to substitute a reference to the Senior Courts Act 1981 for the reference to the Supreme Court Act 1981. At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed. 'Other person' would include a district judge; as to district judges see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 661-662, 728.

14 As to the Civil Division of the Court of Appeal see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 635, 639.

15 As to the High Court see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 602 et seq.

16 As to county courts see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 701 et seq.

17 For these purposes, the amount of any additional costs incurred by any person as mentioned in the text is such amount as may be agreed between the Secretary of State and that person or, in default of agreement, as may be ascertained by 'taxation' (ie detailed assessment: see PARA 1734 et seq): Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(4) (amended by SI 2003/1887). The Secretary of State referred to is the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs: see the Secretary of State for Constitutional Affairs Order 2003, SI 2003/1887, art 4(1), Sch 1; and CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS.

18 Any sums required by the Secretary of State for making such payments must be paid out of money provided by Parliament: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(8) (amended by SI 2003/1887).

19 The sum as the Secretary of State may by order prescribe for these purposes: Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(1) (amended by SI 2003/1887). Any order made by the Secretary of State under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53 must be made with the concurrence of the Treasury, and must be so made by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 53(7) (amended by SI 2003/1887). The amount so prescribed is £8,000: Reimbursement of Costs (Monetary Limit) Order 1988, SI 1988/1342, art 2.

20 Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(1), (2) (s 53(1) as amended: see note 18). In the case of any interlocutory (interim) proceedings to which s 53(1) applies, it applies separately to any such proceedings and to any other proceedings in the cause or matter in question: s 53(2).

21 See the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 53(5).

NOTE 13--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

1757. Court's powers in relation to misconduct.

The court¹ may disallow all or part of the costs² which are being assessed³, or may order the party at fault or his legal representative⁴ to pay costs which he has caused any other party to incur⁵, where:

- 1341 (1) a party or his legal representative fails to comply with a rule, practice direction or court order in connection with a summary or detailed assessment⁶; or
- 1342 (2) it appears to the court that the conduct of a party or his legal representative, before or during the proceedings which gave rise to the assessment proceedings, was unreasonable or improper⁷.

Before making an order under these provisions, the court must give the party or legal representative in question a reasonable opportunity to attend a hearing to give reasons why it should not make such an order⁸.

Where the court makes an order under the above provisions against a legally represented party and the party is not present when the order is made, the party's solicitor must notify his client in writing of the order no later than seven days after the solicitor receives notice of the order⁹. Although no sanction is specified for breach of the obligation so imposed, the court may, either in the order made under the above provisions or in a subsequent order, require the solicitor to produce to the court evidence that he took reasonable steps to comply with the obligation¹⁰.

(iv) Time for Payment and Interest on Costs

1758. Time for complying with an order for costs.

A party must comply with an order for the payment of costs¹ within 14 days of the date of the judgment or order if it states the amount of those costs² or, if the amount of those costs (or part of them) is decided later³, within 14 days of the date of the certificate which states the amount⁴. (3) FIXED COSTS

1760. In general.

Section I of Part 45 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')¹ sets out the amounts which, unless the court² orders otherwise, are to be allowed in respect of solicitors' charges in the cases to which that Section applies³. Any appropriate court fee⁴ will be allowed in addition to the costs set out in Section I of Part 45⁵. These costs are known as 'fixed costs'⁶.

Section I of Part 45 of the CPR applies where:

- 1343 (1) the only claim is a claim for a specified sum of money where the value exceeds £25 and:
 - 43
 110. (a) judgment in default is obtained⁷;
 111. (b) judgment on admission is obtained⁸;
 112. (c) judgment on admission on part of the claim is obtained⁹;
 113. (d) summary judgment is given¹⁰;
 114. (e) the court has made an order to strike out¹¹ a defence as disclosing no reasonable grounds for defending the claim¹²; or
 115. (f) the defendant¹³ is only liable for fixed commencement costs¹⁴;
- 44
- 1344 (2) the only claim is a claim where the court gave a fixed date for the hearing when it issued the claim¹⁵ and judgment is given for the delivery of goods, and the value of the claim exceeds £25¹⁶; or
- 1345 (3) the claim is for the recovery of land, including a possession claim under Part 55 of the CPR, whether or not the claim includes a claim for a sum of money and the defendant gives up possession, pays the amount claimed, if any, and the fixed commencement costs stated in the claim form¹⁷;
- 1346 (4) the claim is for the recovery of land, including a possession claim under Part 55, where one of the grounds for possession is arrears of rent, for which the court gave a fixed date for the hearing when it issued the claim and judgment is given for the possession of land (whether or not the order for possession is suspended on terms) and the defendant has neither delivered a defence, or counterclaim, nor otherwise denied liability, or has delivered a defence which is limited to specifying his proposals for the payment of arrears of rent¹⁸;
- 1347 (5) the claim is a possession claim under Section II of Part 55 (accelerated possession claims of land let on an assured shorthold tenancy) and a possession order is made where the defendant has neither delivered a defence, or counterclaim, nor otherwise denied liability¹⁹;
- 1348 (6) the claim is a demotion claim under Section III of Part 65 of the CPR or a demotion claim is made in the same claim form in which a claim for possession is made under Part 55 and that demotion claim is successful²⁰; or
- 1349 (7) a judgment creditor has taken steps under Parts 70 to 73 of the CPR²¹ to enforce a judgment or order²².

The claim form may include a claim for fixed commencement costs²³.

Section II of Part 45²⁴ deals with fixed recoverable costs in road traffic accident cases²⁵. Section III²⁶ deals with the fixed percentage increase in fees in relation to road traffic accident claims where the claimant has entered into a funding arrangement of a specified²⁷ type²⁸. Section IV of Part 45²⁹ deals with the fixed percentage increase in fees in relation to personal injury claims against an employer where the claimant has entered into a conditional fee agreement or a collective conditional fee agreement which provides for a success fee³⁰, and Section V³¹ deals with the fixed percentage increase in fees in relation to disease claims against an employer where the claimant has entered into a funding arrangement of a specified³² type³³.

1761. Fixed costs in small claims.

The costs¹ which may be awarded² to a claimant³ in a small claims track case⁴ include the fixed costs⁵ payable which are attributable to issuing the claim⁶. Those fixed costs are the sum of the fixed commencement costs⁷ and the appropriate court fee or fees⁸ paid by the claimant⁹.

1762. Amount of fixed commencement costs.

The amount of fixed commencement costs in a claim for the recovery of money or goods, where the value of the claim exceeds £25 and the other conditions are met¹ must be calculated by reference to Table 1 in Section I of Part 45 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')²; additional costs may also be claimed in specified circumstances³. The amount claimed, or the value of the goods claimed if specified, in the claim form is to be used for determining the band in the Table that applies to the claim⁴. Those bands are:

- 1350 (1) where the value of the claim exceeds £25 but does not exceed £500;
- 1351 (2) where the value of the claim exceeds £500 but does not exceed £1,000;
- 1352 (3) where the value of the claim exceeds £1,000 but does not exceed £5,000, or where the only claim is for delivery of goods and no value is specified or stated on the claim form; and
- 1353 (4) where the value of the claim exceeds £5,000⁵.

Where the claim form is served⁶ by the court⁷ or by any method other than personal service by the claimant⁸, the fixed commencement costs are £50 for band (1), £70 for band (2), £80 for band (3) and £100 for band (4) above⁹. Where it is served personally by the claimant and there is only one defendant¹⁰, the fixed commencement costs are £60 for band (1), £80 for band (2), £90 for band (3) and £110 for band (4) above¹¹. Finally, where there is more than one defendant, for each additional defendant personally served at separate addresses by the claimant the fixed commencement costs are £15, regardless of the band¹².

The amount of fixed commencement costs in a claim for the recovery of land or a demotion claim¹³ must be calculated by reference to Table 2 in Section I of Part 45 of the CPR¹⁴. Additional costs may also be claimed in specified circumstances¹⁵.

Where the claim form is served by the court or by any method other than personal service by the claimant, the fixed commencement costs are £69.50¹⁶. Where the claim form is served personally by the claimant and there is only one defendant, the fixed commencement costs are £77¹⁷; and where there is more than one defendant, for each additional defendant personally served at separate addresses by the claimant the fixed commencement costs are £15¹⁸.

1769. Road traffic accidents; fixed recoverable costs.

Where costs-only proceedings or proceedings for approval of a settlement or compromise are issued¹ in relation to a dispute arising out of a road traffic accident² and the following conditions apply, only specified fixed costs are recoverable³, except in exceptional circumstances⁴. The fixed costs provisions apply if:

- 1374 (1) the claimant is not a litigant in person⁵;
- 1375 (2) the dispute arises from a road traffic accident⁶;
- 1376 (3) the agreed damages include damages in respect of personal injury⁷, damage to property, or both⁸;
- 1377 (4) the total value of the agreed damages does not exceed £10,000⁹; and
- 1378 (5) if a claim had been issued for the amount of the agreed damages, the small claims track would not have been the normal track for that claim¹⁰.

Where these conditions are satisfied, the only costs which are to be allowed are fixed costs calculated by reference to the amount of the agreed damages¹¹, certain disbursements¹² and, in specified circumstances, a success fee¹³. The amount of fixed recoverable costs is generally the total of:

- 1379 (a) £800;
- 1380 (b) 20 per cent of the damages agreed up to £5,000; and
- 1381 (c) 15 per cent of the damages agreed between £5,000 and £10,000¹⁴.

Where, however, the claimant lives or works in an area set out in the relevant practice direction¹⁵, and instructs a solicitor or firm of solicitors who practise in that area, the fixed recoverable costs will include, in addition to the costs specified in heads (a)-(c) above, an amount equal to 12.5 per cent of the costs allowable under that paragraph¹⁶.

The court may allow a claim for the following type of disbursement, but must not allow a claim for any other type of disbursement¹⁷:

- 1382 (i) the cost of obtaining medical records, a medical report, a police report, an engineer's report, or a search of the records of the Driver Vehicle Licensing Authority;
- 1383 (ii) the amount of an insurance premium or, where a membership organisation undertakes to meet liabilities incurred to pay the costs of other parties to proceedings, a sum not exceeding such additional amount of costs as would be allowed¹⁸ in respect of provision made against the risk of having to meet such liabilities¹⁹;
- 1384 (iii) where they are necessarily incurred by reason of one or more of the claimants being a child or protected party²⁰, fees payable for instructing counsel, or court fees payable on an application to the court;
- 1385 (iv) any other disbursement that has arisen due to a particular feature of the dispute²¹.

The claimant may recover a success fee if he has entered into a specified type of funding arrangement²². The amount of the success fee is 12.5 per cent of the fixed recoverable costs²³, disregarding any additional amount which may be included in the fixed recoverable costs²⁴.

The court will entertain a claim for an amount of costs (excluding any success fee or disbursements) greater than the fixed recoverable costs but only if it considers that there are exceptional circumstances making it appropriate to do so²⁵. If the court considers such a claim appropriate, it may assess the costs, or make an order for the costs to be assessed²⁶. If the court does not consider the claim appropriate, it must make an order for fixed recoverable costs only²⁷.

UPDATE

1769 Road traffic accidents; fixed recoverable costs

NOTE 22--Kilby, cited, reported at [2009] 1 WLR 853.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/ (3) FIXED COSTS/1770. Fixed percentage increase in road traffic accident claims.

1770. Fixed percentage increase in road traffic accident claims.

Where the dispute arises from a road traffic accident¹ and the claimant² has entered into a funding arrangement of a specified³ type, a percentage increase⁴ is to be allowed in the following cases⁵. Subject to the procedure for an application for an alternative percentage increase where the fixed increase is 12.5 per cent⁶, the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to solicitors' fees⁷ is (1) 100 per cent where the claim concludes at trial⁸; or (2) 12.5 per cent where either the claim concludes before a trial has commenced or the dispute is settled before a claim is issued⁹; and the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to counsel's fees is:

- 1386 (a) 100 per cent where the claim concludes at trial¹⁰;
- 1387 (b) if the claim has been allocated to the fast track¹¹, 50 per cent if the claim concludes 14 days or less before the date fixed for the commencement of the trial¹², or 12.5 per cent if the claim concludes more than 14 days before the date fixed for the commencement of the trial or before any such date has been fixed¹³;
- 1388 (c) if the claim has been allocated to the multi-track¹⁴, 75 per cent if the claim concludes 21 days or less before the date fixed for the commencement of the trial¹⁵, or 12.5 per cent if the claim concludes more than 21 days before the date fixed for the commencement of the trial or before any such date has been fixed¹⁶;
- 1389 (d) 12.5 per cent where the claim has been issued but concludes before it has been allocated to a track or, in relation to costs-only proceedings, the dispute is settled before a claim is issued¹⁷.

Where the percentage increase to be allowed in relation to solicitors' fees¹⁸ or in relation to counsel's fees¹⁹ is 12.5 per cent, a party may apply for a percentage increase greater or less than that amount if:

- 1390 (i) the parties agree damages of an amount²⁰ greater than £500,000 or the court awards damages of an amount greater than £500,000; or
- 1391 (ii) the court awards damages of £500,000 or less but would have awarded damages greater than £500,000 if it had not made a finding of contributory negligence; or
- 1392 (iii) the parties agree damages of £500,000 or less and it is reasonable to expect that if the court had made an award of damages, it would have awarded damages greater than £500,000, disregarding any reduction the court may have made in respect of contributory negligence²¹.

If the court²² is satisfied that the circumstances set out in heads (i) to (iii) apply it must either assess the percentage increase or make an order for the percentage increase to be assessed²³. Where the percentage increase of fees is so assessed, if the percentage increase is assessed as greater than 20 per cent or less than 7.5 per cent, the percentage increase to be allowed is that assessed by the court²⁴; if the percentage increase is assessed as no greater than 20 per cent and no less than 7.5 per cent, the percentage increase to be allowed is 12.5 per cent and the costs of the application and assessment are to be paid by the applicant²⁵.

Nor does CPR Pt 45 Section III apply to a claim which has been allocated to the small claims track (see PARAS 267, 274 et seq), to a claim not allocated to a track, but for which the small claims track is the normal track (see PARA 37), or where the road traffic accident which gave rise to the dispute occurred before 6 October 2003: CPR 45.13(4).

Where a trial period has been fixed and the claim concludes on or after the first day of that period but before commencement of the trial, the percentage increase of 50% applies, whether or not a trial date has been fixed within that period: CPR 45.17(4). For the purposes of CPR 45.17, in calculating the periods of time, the day fixed for the commencement of the trial (or the first day of the trial period, where appropriate) is not included: CPR 45.17(5).

1771. Fixed percentage increase in employers' liability claims.

Where the dispute is between an employee¹ and his employer arising from a bodily injury sustained by the employee in the course of his employment and the claimant² has entered into a funding arrangement of a specified³ type, a percentage increase⁴ is to be allowed in the following cases⁵. Subject to the procedure for an application for an alternative percentage increase⁶, the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to solicitors' and counsel's fees⁷ is to be determined in accordance with the rules for the percentage increase in road traffic accident claims⁸, subject to the modifications that (1) the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to solicitors' fees where the claim concludes before a trial has commenced or the dispute is settled before a claim is issued⁹ is (a) 27.5 per cent if a membership organisation¹⁰ has undertaken to meet the claimant's liabilities for legal costs¹¹; and (b) 25 per cent in any other case; and (2) the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to counsel's fees in all cases where the percentage for traffic accident claims is fixed at 12.5 per cent¹² is 25 per cent¹³.

Where the percentage increase of solicitors' fees to be allowed¹⁴ is 25 per cent or 27.5 per cent or the percentage increase of counsel's fees to be allowed is 25 per cent, a party may apply for a percentage increase greater or less than that amount if:

- 1393 (a) the parties agree damages of an amount¹⁵ greater than £500,000 or the court awards damages of an amount greater than £500,000; or
- 1394 (b) the court awards damages of £500,000 or less but would have awarded damages greater than £500,000 if it had not made a finding of contributory negligence; or
- 1395 (c) the parties agree damages of £500,000 or less and it is reasonable to expect that if the court had made an award of damages, it would have awarded damages greater than £500,000, disregarding any reduction the court may have made in respect of contributory negligence¹⁶.

If the court¹⁷ is satisfied that the circumstances set out in heads (a) to (c) apply it must either assess the percentage increase or make an order for the percentage increase to be assessed¹⁸. Where the percentage increase of fees is so assessed, if the percentage increase is assessed as greater than 40 per cent or less than 15 per cent, the percentage increase to be allowed is that assessed by the court; if the percentage increase is assessed as no greater than 40 per cent and no less than 15 per cent, the percentage increase to be allowed is 25 per cent or 27.5 per cent as the case may be, and the costs of the application and assessment are to be paid by the applicant¹⁹.

1772. Fixed recoverable success fees in employer's liability disease claims.

Where the dispute is between an employee¹ (or, if the employee is deceased, the employee's estate or dependants) and his employer (or a person alleged to be liable for the employer's alleged breach of statutory or common law duties of care); and the dispute relates to a disease with which the employee is diagnosed that is alleged to have been contracted as a consequence of the employer's alleged breach of statutory or common law duties of care in the course of the employee's employment; and the claimant² has entered into a funding arrangement of a specified³ type, a percentage increase⁴ is to be allowed in the following cases⁵. Subject to the procedure for an application for an alternative percentage increase⁶, the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to solicitors' fees⁷ is (1) 100 per cent if the claim concludes at trial⁸; or (2) where either the claim concludes before a trial has commenced or the dispute is settled before a claim is issued, to be determined as follows⁹. Where head (2) applies, the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to solicitors' fees is (a) in type A claims¹⁰, 30 per cent if a membership organisation¹¹ has undertaken to meet the claimant's liabilities for legal costs¹² and 27.5 per cent in any other case; (b) in type B claims¹³, 100 per cent; and (c) in type C claims¹⁴, 70 per cent if a membership organisation has undertaken to meet the claimant's liabilities for legal costs and 62.5 per cent in any other case¹⁵.

The percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to counsel's fees is (i) 100 per cent if the claim concludes at trial; or (ii) where either the claim concludes before a trial has commenced or the dispute is settled before a claim is issued, to be determined as follows¹⁶. Where head (ii) applies, the percentage increase which is to be allowed in relation to counsel's fees is as follows¹⁷. If the claim has been allocated to the fast track¹⁸, then if the claim concludes 14 days or less before the date fixed for commencement of the trial, the percentage increase is 50 per cent for a type A claim, 100 per cent for a type B claim and 62.5 per cent for a type C claim; and if the claim concludes more than 14 days before the date fixed for commencement of the trial or before any such date has been fixed, the percentage increase is 27.5 per cent for a type A claim, 100 per cent for a type B claim and 62.5 per cent for a type C claim¹⁹. If the claim has been allocated to the multi-track²⁰, then if the claim concludes 21 days or less before the date fixed for commencement of the trial, the percentage increase is 75 per cent for a type A claim, 100 per cent for a type B claim and 75 per cent for a type C claim; and if the claim concludes more than 21 days before the date fixed for commencement of the trial or before any such date has been fixed, the percentage increase is 27.5 per cent for a type A claim, 100 per cent for a type B claim and 62.5 per cent for a type C claim²¹.

Where the percentage increase is the amount allowed above, a party may apply for a percentage increase greater or less than that amount if:

1396 (A) the parties agree damages of an amount²² greater than £250,000 or the court awards damages of an amount greater than £250,000; or

1398 (C) the parties agree damages of £250,000 or less and it is reasonable to expect that if the court had made an award of damages, it would have awarded damages greater than £250,000, disregarding any reduction the court may have made in respect of contributory negligence²³.

If the court²⁴ is satisfied that the circumstances set out in heads (A) to (c) apply it must either assess the percentage increase or make an order for the percentage increase to be assessed²⁵. Where the percentage increase of fees is so assessed by the court, the percentage increase to be allowed is a specified amount varying with the type of claim²⁶. The percentage increase cannot be varied where the case concludes at trial²⁷.

(4) SMALL CLAIMS TRACK COSTS AND FAST TRACK TRIAL COSTS

(i) Small Claims Track Costs

1773. Costs where financial value of claim exceeds small claims limit.

Where the financial value of a claim exceeds the limit for the small claims track¹ but the claim has been allocated to that track with the consent of the parties², the small claims track costs provisions³ will apply unless the parties agree that the fast track costs provisions⁴ are to apply⁵. Where the parties agree that the fast track costs provisions are to apply, the claim and any appeal will be treated for the purposes of costs as if it were proceeding on the fast track except that trial costs will be in the discretion of the court⁶ and will not exceed the amount set out⁷ for the value of claim⁸.

Where a claim is allocated to the small claims track and subsequently re-allocated to another track, these provisions cease to apply after the claim has been re-allocated and the fast track or multi-track costs rules⁹ will apply from the date of re-allocation¹⁰.

1774. Costs in other small claims.

In any case which has been allocated to the small claims track¹, other than one whose financial value exceeds the limit for that track² but which is allocated to that track with the consent of the parties³, the court⁴ may not order a party to pay a sum to another party in respect of that other party's costs⁵, fees and expenses, including those relating to an appeal, except:

- 1399 (1) the fixed costs⁶ attributable to issuing the claim which are payable under Part 45 of the Civil Procedure Rules⁷ or would be payable⁸ if Part 45 applied to the claim⁹;
- 1400 (2) in proceedings which included a claim for an injunction¹⁰ or an order for specific performance a sum not exceeding the amount specified in the relevant practice direction for legal advice and assistance relating to that claim¹¹;
- 1401 (3) any court fees¹² paid by another party¹³;
- 1402 (4) expenses which a party or witness has reasonably incurred in travelling to and from a hearing or in staying away from home for the purposes of attending a hearing¹⁴;
- 1403 (5) a sum not exceeding the amount specified in the relevant practice direction for any loss of earnings by a party or witness due to attending a hearing or to staying away from home for the purpose of attending a hearing¹⁵; and
- 1404 (6) a sum not exceeding the amount specified in the relevant practice direction for an expert's fees¹⁶; and
- 1405 (7) such further costs as the court may assess by the summary procedure and order to be paid by a party who has behaved unreasonably¹⁷.

Where a claim is allocated to the small claims track and subsequently re-allocated to another track, these provisions cease to apply after the claim has been re-allocated and the fast track¹⁸ or multi-track¹⁹ costs rules will apply from the date of re-allocation²⁰.

(ii) Fast Track Trial Costs

1775. In general.

Part 46 of the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')¹ deals with the amount of costs² which the court³ may award as the costs of an advocate⁴ for preparing for and appearing at the trial⁵ of a claim in the fast track⁶. This amount is referred to as 'fast track trial costs'⁷. 'Fast track trial costs' means the costs of a party's advocate for preparing for and appearing at the trial, but does not include any other disbursements or any VAT payable on the fees of a party's advocate⁸.

Part 46 of the CPR applies only where, at the date of the trial, the claim is allocated to the fast track⁹. It does not apply in any other case, irrespective of the final value of the claim¹⁰. In particular it does not apply to the hearing of a claim which is allocated to the small claims track¹¹ with the consent of the parties¹² or to a disposal hearing at which the amount to be paid under a judgment or order is decided by the court¹³.

Where a claim allocated to the fast track settles before trial, the amount of costs which the court may award is limited¹⁴. This limitation is discussed elsewhere in this title¹⁵.

1776. Amounts of fast track trial costs.

The amounts of fast track trial costs¹ which the court² may award, whether by summary or detailed assessment³, are as follows:

- 1406 (1) where the value of the claim is no more than £3,000, fast track trial costs of £485;
- 1407 (2) where the value of the claim is more than £3,000 but not more than £10,000, fast track trial costs of £690; and
- 1408 (3) where the value of the claim is more than £10,000 but not more than £15,000, fast track trial costs of £1,035;
- 1409 (4) for proceedings issued on or after 6 April 2009, where the value of the claim is more than £15,000, fast track trial costs of £1,650⁴.

The court may not award more or less than the above amounts except where it decides not to award any fast track trial costs or in specified circumstances⁵, but it may apportion the amount awarded between the parties to reflect their respective degrees of success on the issues at trial⁶.

Where the only claim is for the payment of money, then for the purpose of quantifying fast track trial costs to be awarded to a claimant⁷, the value of the claim is the total amount of the judgment excluding interest and costs⁸ and excluding any reduction made for contributory negligence⁹, while for the purpose of quantifying fast track trial costs awarded to a defendant¹⁰, the value of the claim is:

- 1410 (a) the amount specified in the claim form (excluding interest and costs)¹¹;
- 1411 (b) if no amount is specified, the maximum amount which the claimant reasonably expected to recover according to the statement of value¹² included in the claim form¹³; or
- 1412 (c) more than £15,000, if the claim form states that the claimant cannot reasonably say how much is likely to be recovered¹⁴.

Where the claim is only for a remedy other than the payment of money the value of the claim is deemed to be more than £3,000 but not more than £10,000, unless the court orders otherwise¹⁵; while where the claim includes both a claim for the payment of money and for a remedy other than the payment of money, the value of the claim is deemed to be the higher of the value of the money claim decided in accordance with the provisions set out above, and the deemed value of the other remedy as so decided, unless the court orders otherwise¹⁶.

Where a defendant has made a counterclaim¹⁷ against the claimant, the counterclaim has a higher value than the claim and the claimant succeeds at trial both on the claim and on the counterclaim, then for the purpose of quantifying fast track trial costs awarded to the claimant, the value of the claim is the value of the defendant's counterclaim calculated in accordance with the rules set out above¹⁸.

COSTS/(4) SMALL CLAIMS TRACK COSTS AND FAST TRACK TRIAL COSTS/(ii) Fast Track Trial Costs/1777. Power to award more or less than the prescribed amount of fast track trial costs.

1777. Power to award more or less than the prescribed amount of fast track trial costs.

A court¹ may award an additional amount to the amounts of fast track trial costs² set out in the previous paragraph³, and less than those amounts, in the following circumstances⁴.

If, in addition to the advocate⁵, a party's legal representative⁶ attends the trial⁷, then if the court considers that it was necessary for a legal representative to attend to assist the advocate and the court awards fast track trial costs to that party, the court may award an additional £345 in respect of the legal representative's attendance at the trial⁸.

The court may in addition award a sum representing an additional liability⁹ under a funding arrangement¹⁰.

If the court considers that it is necessary to direct a separate trial of an issue then the court may award an additional amount in respect of the separate trial¹¹; but that amount must not exceed two-thirds of the amount payable for that claim, subject to a minimum award of £485¹².

Where the party to whom fast track trial costs are to be awarded is a litigant in person, the court will award two-thirds of the amount that would otherwise be awarded, if the litigant in person can prove financial loss¹³. If the litigant in person fails to prove financial loss, the court will award an amount in respect of the time spent reasonably doing the work at the rate specified in the costs practice direction¹⁴.

Where a defendant¹⁵ has made a counterclaim¹⁶ against the claimant¹⁷ and the claimant has succeeded on his claim and the defendant has succeeded on his counterclaim, the court will quantify the amount of the award of fast track trial costs to which (1) but for the counterclaim, the claimant would be entitled for succeeding on his claim; and (2) but for the claim, the defendant would be entitled for succeeding on his counterclaim, and make one award of the difference, if any, to the party entitled to the higher award of costs¹⁸.

Where the court considers that the party to whom fast track trial costs are to be awarded has behaved unreasonably or improperly during the trial, it may award that party an amount less than would otherwise be payable for that claim, as it considers appropriate¹⁹. Where the court considers that the party who is to pay the fast track trial costs has behaved improperly during the trial the court may award such additional amount to the other party as it considers appropriate²⁰.

COSTS/(4) SMALL CLAIMS TRACK COSTS AND FAST TRACK TRIAL COSTS/(ii) Fast Track Trial Costs/1778. Fast track trial costs where there is more than one claimant or defendant.

1778. Fast track trial costs where there is more than one claimant or defendant.

Where the same advocate¹ is acting for more than one party the court² may make only one award in respect of fast track trial costs³ payable to that advocate⁴ and the parties for whom the advocate is acting are jointly entitled to any fast track trial costs awarded by the court⁵. Where the same advocate is acting for more than one claimant⁶ and each claimant has a separate claim against the defendant⁷, the value of the claim, for the purpose of quantifying the award in respect of fast track trial costs, is to be ascertained as follows⁸:

- 1413 (1) where the only claim of each claimant is for the payment of money, then the value of the claim is:
- 47
- 120. (a) if the award of fast track trial costs is in favour of the claimants, the total amount of the judgment made in favour of all the claimants jointly represented; or
- 121. (b) if the award is in favour of the defendant, the total amount claimed by the claimants,
- 48
- 1414 and in either case, quantified⁹ according to the normal rules¹⁰;
- 1415 (2) where the only claim of each claimant is for a remedy other than the payment of money, then the value of the claim is deemed to be more than £3,000 but not more than £10,000¹¹; and
- 1416 (3) where claims of the claimants include both a claim for the payment of money and for a remedy other than the payment of money, then the value of the claim is deemed to be more than £3,000 but not more than £10,000 or, if greater, the value of the money claims calculated in accordance with head (1) above¹².

Where there is more than one defendant and any or all of the defendants are separately represented, the court may award fast track trial costs to each party who is separately represented¹³. Where there is more than one claimant and a single defendant, the court may make only one award to the defendant of fast track trial costs, for which the claimants are jointly and severally liable¹⁴.

A. TIME AND VENUE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT

1779. Time when detailed assessment may be carried out.

The general rule is that the costs¹ of any proceedings or any part of the proceedings are not to be assessed by the detailed procedure² until the conclusion of the proceedings but the court³ may order them to be assessed immediately⁴. For these purposes, proceedings are concluded when the court has finally determined the matters in issue in the claim, whether or not there is an appeal⁵, and the making of an award of provisional damages⁶ will be treated as a final determination of the matters in issue⁷.

The court may order or the parties may agree in writing that, although the proceedings are continuing, they will nevertheless be treated as concluded⁸.

A costs judge⁹ or a district judge¹⁰ may make an order allowing detailed assessment proceedings to be commenced where there is no realistic prospect of the claim continuing¹¹.

Powers of an authorised court officer.

1781. Powers of an authorised court officer.

An authorised court officer¹ has all the powers of the court² when making a detailed assessment³, except:

- 1417 (1) power to make a wasted costs order⁴;
- 1418 (2) power to make an order under the rules allowing costs sanctions to be imposed for misconduct⁵ or for delay in commencing detailed assessment proceedings⁶;
- 1419 (3) power to make an order⁷ that detailed assessment is to be made by a costs judge⁸ or district judge⁹;
- 1420 (4) power to make a detailed assessment of costs¹⁰ payable to a solicitor by his client, unless the costs are being assessed where money is payable to a child¹¹ or protected party¹².

Where a party objects to the detailed assessment of costs being made by an authorised court officer, the court may order it to be made by a costs judge or a district judge¹³. Where the receiving party¹⁴, paying party¹⁵ and any other party to the detailed assessment proceedings who has served¹⁶ points of dispute¹⁷ are agreed that the assessment should not be made by an authorised court officer, the receiving party must so inform the court when requesting a hearing date. The court will then list the hearing before a costs judge or a district judge¹⁸. In any other case a party who objects to the assessment being made by an authorised court officer must make an application to the costs judge or district judge¹⁹ setting out the reasons for the objection, and if sufficient reason is shown the court will direct that the bill be assessed by a costs judge or district judge²⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'authorised court officer' see PARA 1734 note 17. The court officers authorised by the Lord Chancellor to assess costs in the Supreme Court Costs Office and the Principal Registry of the Family Division are authorised to deal with claims for costs not exceeding £30,000 (excluding VAT) in the case of senior executive officers or their equivalent and £75,000 (excluding VAT) in the case of principal officers: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 30.1(1). In calculating whether or not a bill of costs is within the authorised amounts, the figure to be taken into account is the total claim for costs including any additional liability: para 30.1(2). 1782. Venue for detailed assessment proceedings.

All applications and requests in detailed assessment¹ proceedings must be made to or filed² at the appropriate office³. The appropriate office means the district registry⁴ or county court⁵ in which the case was being dealt with when the judgment or order was made or the event occurred which gave rise to the right to assessment, or to which it has subsequently been transferred⁶ or, where a tribunal, person or other body makes an order for the detailed assessment of costs, a county court, or, in all other cases, including Court of Appeal cases, the Supreme Court Costs Office⁷. The court⁸ may, however, direct that the appropriate office is to be the Supreme Court Costs Office⁹ and a county court may direct that another county court is to be the appropriate office¹⁰. Such a direction may be made without proceedings being transferred to that court¹¹ and may be given on application or on the court's own initiative¹². Before making such a direction on its own initiative the court will give the parties the opportunity to make representations¹³. Unless the Supreme Court Costs Office is the appropriate office for these purposes, an order directing that an assessment is to take place at the Supreme Court Costs Office will be made only if it is appropriate to do so having regard to the size of the bill of costs¹⁴, the difficulty of the issues involved, the likely length of the hearing, the cost to the parties and any other relevant matter¹⁵.

In such a case, the receiving party must file any request for a detailed assessment hearing in the Supreme Court Costs Office and, for all purposes relating to that detailed assessment, the Supreme Court Costs Office will be treated as the appropriate office in that case; and, unless an order is made under CPR 47.4(2) directing that the Supreme Court Costs Office as part of the High Court is to be the appropriate office, an appeal from any decision made by a costs judge will lie to the Designated Civil Judge for the London Group of County Courts or such judge as he shall nominate. NOTE 7--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

TEXT AND NOTES 8, 9--CPR 47.4(2) amended: SI 2009/2092.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(i) General Rules about Detailed Assessment/B. BILLS OF COSTS/1783. Form and contents of bills of costs.

B. BILLS OF COSTS

1783. Form and contents of bills of costs.

Model forms of bills of costs to be used for detailed assessments¹ are scheduled to the costs practice direction². The use of a model form is not compulsory, but is encouraged. A party wishing to rely upon a bill which departs from the model forms must include in the background information of the bill an explanation for that departure³.

A bill of costs may consist of such of the following sections as may be appropriate:

- 1421 (1) title page⁴;
- 1422 (2) background information⁵;
- 1423 (3) items of costs claimed under the specified headings⁶;
- 1424 (4) summary showing the total costs claimed on each page of the bill⁷;
- 1425 (5) schedules of time spent on non-routine attendances; and
- 1426 (6) the appropriate certificates⁸.

Where it is necessary or convenient to do so, a bill of costs may be divided into two or more parts, each part containing sections (2), (3) and (4) above. Circumstances in which it will be necessary or convenient to divide a bill into parts include:

- 1427 (a) where the receiving party⁹ acted in person during the course of the proceedings (whether or not that party also had a legal representative¹⁰ at that time) the bill must be divided into different parts so as to distinguish between the costs claimed for work done by the legal representative and the costs claimed for work done by the receiving party in person¹¹;
- 1428 (b) where the receiving party had pro bono representation¹² for part of the proceedings and an order for a payment to the prescribed charity¹³ has been made, the bill must be divided into different parts so as to distinguish between the sum equivalent to the costs claimed for work done by the legal representative acting free of charge and the costs claimed for work done by the legal representative not acting free of charge¹⁴;
- 1429 (c) where the receiving party was represented by different solicitors during the course of the proceedings, the bill must be divided into different parts so as to distinguish between the costs payable in respect of each solicitor¹⁵;
- 1430 (d) where the receiving party obtained legal aid or Legal Services Commission ('LSC') funding¹⁶ in respect of all or part of the proceedings the bill must be divided into separate parts so as to distinguish between costs claimed before legal aid or LSC funding was granted, costs claimed after legal aid or LSC funding was granted and any costs claimed after legal aid or LSC funding ceased¹⁷;
- 1431 (e) where VAT is claimed and there was a change in the rate of VAT during the course of the proceedings, the bill must be divided into separate parts so as to distinguish between costs claimed at the old rate of VAT and costs claimed at the new rate of VAT¹⁸;

- 1432 (f) where the bill covers costs payable under an order or orders under which there are different paying parties¹⁹ the bill must be divided into parts so as to deal separately with the costs payable by each paying party²⁰;
- 1433 (g) where the bill covers costs payable under an order or orders, in respect of which the receiving party wishes to claim interest²¹ from different dates, the bill must be divided to enable such interest to be calculated²².

Where a party claims costs against another party and also claims costs against the LSC only for work done in the same period, the costs claimed against the LSC only can be claimed either in a separate part of the bill or in additional columns in the same part of the bill²³.

Detailed provision is made relating to work done by solicitors²⁴. Where a claim is made for a percentage increase²⁵ in addition to an hourly rate or base fee, the amount of the increase must be shown separately, either in the appropriate arithmetic column or in the narrative column²⁶. Where a claim is made against the LSC only and includes enhancement²⁷ and where a claim is made in family proceedings and includes a claim for uplift or general care and conduct, the amount of enhancement, uplift and general care and conduct must be shown, in respect of each item upon which it is claimed, as a separate amount either in the appropriate arithmetic column or in the narrative column²⁸.

A claim may be made for the reasonable costs of preparing and checking the bill of costs²⁹.

A bill of costs filed for detailed assessment is always retained by the court³⁰.

4 The title page of the bill of costs must set out (1) the full title of the proceedings; (2) the name of the party whose bill it is and a description of the document showing the right to assessment (see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 40.4; and PARA 1792); (3) if VAT is included as part of the claim for costs, the VAT number of the legal representative or other person in respect of whom VAT is claimed; (4) details of all legal aid certificates, Legal Services Commission certificates and relevant amendment certificates in respect of which claims for costs are included in the bill: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.4. As to VAT on costs see PARA 1749.

5 The background information included in the bill of costs should set out (1) a brief description of the proceedings up to the date of the notice of commencement; (2) a statement of the status of the solicitor or solicitor's employee in respect of whom costs are claimed and (if those costs are calculated on the basis of hourly rates) the hourly rates claimed for each such person; (3) a brief explanation of any agreement or arrangement between the receiving party and his solicitors, which affects the costs claimed in the bill: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.5. It should be noted that 'legal executive' means a Fellow of the Institute of Legal Executives. Other clerks, who are fee earners of equivalent experience, may be entitled to similar rates. It should be borne in mind that Fellows of the Institute of Legal Executives will have spent approximately six years in practice, and taken both general and specialist examinations. The Fellows have therefore acquired considerable practical and academic experience. Clerks without the equivalent experience of legal executives will normally be treated as being the equivalent of trainee solicitors and para-legals: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.5(2). As to legal executives see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 66 (2009) PARA 1463 et seq.

6 The bill of costs may consist of items under such of the following heads as may be appropriate: (1) attendances on the court and counsel up to the date of the notice of commencement; (2) attendances on and communications with the receiving party; (3) attendances on and communications with witnesses including any expert witness; (4) attendances to inspect any property or place for the purposes of the proceedings; (5) attendances on and communications with other persons, including offices of public records; (6) communications with the court and with counsel; (7) work done on documents: preparing and considering documentation, including documentation relating to pre-action protocols where appropriate, work done in connection with arithmetical calculations of compensation and/or interest and time spent collating documents; (8) work done in connection with negotiations with a view to settlement if not already covered in the heads listed above; (9) attendances on and communications with London and other agents and work done by them; (10) other work done which was of or incidental to the proceedings and which is not already covered in the heads listed above: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.6. In respect of each of the heads of costs: (a) 'communications' means letters out and telephone calls; (b) communications which are not routine communications must be set out in chronological order; (c) routine communications should be set out as a single item at the end of each head: para 4.7. Routine communications are letters out, e-mails out and telephone calls which because of their simplicity should not be regarded as letters or e-mails of substance or telephone calls which properly amount to an attendance: para 4.8. Each item claimed in the bill of costs must be consecutively numbered: para 4.9. In each part of the bill of costs which claims items under head (1) (attendances on court and counsel) a note should be made of all relevant events, including events which do not constitute chargeable items, and any orders for costs which the court made (whether or not a claim is made in respect of those costs in that bill of costs): para 4.10. The numbered items of costs may be set out on paper divided into columns. Precedents A, B, C and D in the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction illustrate various model forms of bills of costs: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.11. In respect of heads (2)-(10) above, if the number of attendances and communications other than routine communications is 20 or more, the claim for the costs of those items in that section of the bill of costs should be for the total only and should refer to a schedule in which the full record of dates and details is set out. If the bill of costs contains more than one schedule each schedule should be numbered consecutively: para 4.12. The bill of costs must not contain any claims in respect of costs or court fees which relate solely to the detailed assessment proceedings other than costs claimed for preparing and checking the bill: para 4.13.

7 The summary must show the total profit costs and disbursements claimed separately from the total VAT claimed. Where the bill of costs is divided into parts the summary must also give totals for each part. If each page of the bill gives a page total the summary must also set out the page totals for each page: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.14.

8 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.1. The bill of costs must contain such of the certificates, the texts of which are set out in Precedent F of the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction, as are appropriate: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.15.

9 As to the meaning of 'receiving party' see PARA 1833 note 14.

10 As to the meaning of 'legal representative' see PARA 1833 note 13.

11 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.2(1). A litigant in person is not treated for the purposes of VAT as having supplied services: see para 5.18; and PARA 1749. Consequently a bill of costs presented for agreement or assessment should not claim any VAT which will not be allowed on assessment: para 5.19.

12 As to the meaning of 'pro bono representation' see PARA 611 note 20.

18 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.2(4). Where there is a change in the rate of VAT, suppliers of goods and services are entitled by the Value Added Tax Act 1994 s 88(1), (2) (see VALUE ADDED TAX vol 49(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 36) in most circumstances to elect whether the new or the old rate of VAT should apply to a supply where the basic and actual tax points span a period during which there has been a change in VAT rates: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 5.7. It will be assumed, unless a contrary indication is given in writing, that an election to take advantage of these provisions and to charge VAT at the lower rate has been made. In any case in which an election to charge at the lower rate is not made, such a decision must be justified to the court assessing the costs: para 5.8. As to apportionment see para 5.9. As to changes in the rate between the conclusion of detailed assessment and the issue of the final costs certificate see para 5.10; and PARA 1749.

22 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.2(6).

23 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.3. Precedents C and D in the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction show how bills should be drafted when costs are claimed against the LSC only: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.3.

24 See Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.16, which provides as follows:

- 109 (1) routine letters out and routine telephone calls will in general be allowed on a unit basis of six minutes each, the charge being calculated by reference to the appropriate hourly rate. The unit charge for letters out will include perusing and considering the relevant letters in and no separate charge should be made for in-coming letters;
- 110 (2) e-mails received by solicitors will not normally be allowed. The court may, in its discretion, allow an actual time charge for preparation of emails sent by solicitors, which properly amount to attendances provided that the time taken has been recorded. The court may also, in its discretion, allow a sum in respect of routine emails sent to the client or others on a unit basis of six minutes each, the charge being calculated by reference to the appropriate hourly rate;
- 111 (3) local travelling expenses incurred by solicitors will not be allowed. The definition of 'local' is a matter for the discretion of the court. While no absolute rule can be laid down, as a matter of guidance, 'local' will, in general, be taken to mean within a radius of 10 miles from the court dealing with the case at the relevant time. Where travelling and waiting time is claimed, this should be allowed at the rate agreed with the client unless this is more than the hourly rate on the assessment;
- 112 (4) the cost of postage, couriers, out-going telephone calls, fax and telex messages will in general not be allowed but the court may exceptionally in its discretion allow such expenses in unusual circumstances or where the cost is unusually heavy;
- 113 (5) the cost of making copies of documents will not in general be allowed but the court may exceptionally in its discretion make an allowance for copying in unusual circumstances or where the documents copied are unusually numerous in relation to the nature of the case. Where this discretion is invoked the number of copies made, their purpose and the costs claimed for them must be set out in the bill;
- 114 (6) agency charges as between a principal solicitor and his agent will be dealt with on the principle that such charges, where appropriate, form part of the principal solicitor's charges. Where these charges relate to para 4.6(1) (attendances at court and on counsel: see note 6) they should be included in their chronological order in that head. In other cases they should be included in para 4.6(9) (attendances on London and other agents: see note 6).

Petty (or general) disbursements such as postage, fares etc which are normally treated as part of a solicitor's overheads and included in his profit costs should be charged with VAT even though they bear no tax when the solicitor incurs them. The cost of travel by public transport on a specific journey for a particular client where it forms part of the service rendered by a solicitor to his client and is charged in his bill of costs, attracts VAT: para 5.11. As to expenses not subject to VAT see para 5.12. As to VAT on costs see generally PARA 1749.

25 As to the meaning of 'percentage increase' see PARA 1830 note 20.

26 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 4.17(1). For examples see Precedents A, B in the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction.

27 'Enhancement' means the increase in prescribed rates which may be allowed by a costs officer in accordance with the Legal Aid in Civil Proceedings (Remuneration) Regulations 1994, SI 1994/228, or the Legal Aid in Family Proceedings Regulations 1991, SI 1991/2038: see LEGAL AID. As to the meaning of 'costs officer' see PARA 1734 note 17.

30 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 5.15. Accordingly if a solicitor waives his solicitor and client costs and accepts the costs certified by the court as payable by the unsuccessful party in settlement, it will be necessary for a short statement as to the amount of the certified costs and the VAT thereon to be prepared for use as the tax invoice: para 5.15.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(ii) Costs Payable by One Party to Another/A. COMMENCEMENT OF DETAILED ASSESSMENT PROCEEDINGS/1784.
Commencement of detailed assessment proceedings.

(ii) Costs Payable by One Party to Another

A. COMMENCEMENT OF DETAILED ASSESSMENT PROCEEDINGS

1784. Commencement of detailed assessment proceedings.

A detailed assessment¹ may be in respect of (1) base costs², where a claim for additional liability³ has not been made or has been agreed; (2) a claim for additional liability only, base costs having been summarily assessed⁴ or agreed; or (3) both base costs and additional liability⁵. Where a costs officer⁶ is to make a detailed assessment of costs which are payable by one party to another or of the sum which is payable by one party to the prescribed charity⁷, the following provisions apply⁸. Detailed assessment proceedings are commenced by the receiving party⁹ serving¹⁰ on the paying party¹¹ notice of commencement in the relevant practice form¹² and a copy of the bill of costs¹³. The receiving party must also serve a copy of the notice of commencement and the bill on any other relevant persons¹⁴ specified in the costs practice direction¹⁵. A person on whom a copy of the notice of commencement is so served is a party to the detailed assessment proceedings in addition to the paying party and the receiving party¹⁶.

As well as the notice of commencement and copy of the bill of costs, the receiving party must also serve on the paying party and all other relevant persons the following documents:

- 1434 (a) if the detailed assessment is in respect of costs without any additional liability, copies of the fee notes of counsel and of any expert in respect of fees claimed in the bill, written evidence as to any other disbursement which is claimed and which exceeds £250 and a statement giving the name and address for service of any person upon whom the receiving party intends to serve the notice of commencement¹⁷;
- 1435 (b) if the detailed assessment is in respect of an additional liability only, the relevant details of the additional liability¹⁸ and a statement giving the name and address of any person upon whom the receiving party intends to serve the notice of commencement¹⁹; and
- 1436 (c) if the detailed assessment is in respect of both base costs and an additional liability, all the documents listed in head (a) above and the specified documents²⁰ giving details of an additional liability²¹.

A party who is served with a notice of commencement may apply to a costs judge²² or a district judge²³ to determine whether the party who served it is entitled to commence detailed assessment proceedings²⁴. On hearing such an application the orders which the court may make include an order allowing the detailed assessment proceedings to continue or an order setting aside²⁵ the notice of commencement²⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734.

2 As to the meaning of 'base costs' see PARA 1740 note 3; and as to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

3 As to the meaning of 'additional liability' see PARA 1830 note 20.

4 As to the meaning of 'summary assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to summary assessment see PARA 1752.

5 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.2.

6 As to the meaning of 'costs officer' see PARA 1734 note 17.

7 le pursuant to an order under the Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3): see PARA 1824. As to the meaning of 'prescribed charity' see PARA 611 note 20.

8 CPR 47.5.

9 As to the meaning of 'receiving party' see PARA 1833 note 14.

10 As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2.

11 As to the meaning of 'paying party' see PARA 1836 note 14.

12 The notice of commencement must be in Form N252 (see The Civil Court Practice): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.8(1). Before it is served, it must be completed to show as separate items (1) the total amount of the costs claimed in the bill; (2) the extra sum which will be payable by way of fixed costs and court fees if a default costs certificate is obtained: para 32.8(2). As to bills of costs see further note 12; and as to default costs certificates see PARA 1789. Where the notice of commencement is to be served outside England and Wales, the date to be inserted in the notice of commencement for the paying party to send points of dispute (see PARA 1787) is a date (not less than 21 days from the date of service of the notice) which must be calculated by reference to CPR Pt 6 Section IV (CPR 6.30-6.47: see PARA 168 et seq) as if the notice were a claim form and as if the date to be inserted was the date for the filing of a defence: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.9(1), (2).

13 CPR 47.6(1). In a case in which the bill of costs is capable of being copied onto a computer disk, if, before the detailed assessment hearing, a paying party requests a disk copy of the bill, the receiving party must supply him with a copy free of charge not more than seven days after the date on which he received the request: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.11(1), (2). As to bills of costs see PARA 1783.

14 For these purposes, 'relevant person' means (1) any person who has taken part in the proceedings which gave rise to the assessment and who is directly liable under an order for costs made against him; (2) any person who has given to the receiving party notice in writing that he has a financial interest in the outcome of the assessment and wishes to be a party accordingly; (3) any other person whom the court orders to be treated as such: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.10(1). Where a party is unsure whether a person is or is not a relevant person, that party may apply to the appropriate office (see PARA 1782) for directions: para 32.10(2). The court will generally not make an order that the person in respect of whom the application is made will be treated as a relevant person, unless within a specified time he applies to the court to be joined as a party to the assessment proceedings in accordance with CPR Pt 19 (parties and group litigation: see PARA 210 et seq): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.10(3).

17 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.3.

18 The relevant details of an additional liability are as follows: (1) in the case of a conditional fee agreement with a success fee (see PARA 1830), a statement showing the amount of costs which have been summarily assessed or agreed, and the percentage increase which has been claimed in respect of those costs and a statement of the reasons for the percentage increase given in accordance with the Conditional Fee Agreement Regulations 2000, SI 2000/692, reg 3(1)(a) (see PARA 1830 note 3) or the Collective Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2988, reg 5(1)(c); (2) if the additional liability is an insurance premium, a copy of the insurance certificate showing whether the policy covers the receiving party's own costs, his opponent's costs; or his own costs and his opponent's costs, and the maximum extent of that cover, and the amount of the premium paid or payable; and (3) if the receiving party claims an additional amount under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30 (see PARA 1830) a statement setting out the basis upon which the receiving party's liability for the additional amount is calculated: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.5. Both sets of regulations were revoked by the Conditional Fee Agreements (Revocation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/2305, but continue to have effect in relation to conditional fee agreements and collective conditional fee agreements entered into before 1 November 2005.

Attention is drawn to the fact that the additional amount recoverable pursuant to the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30 in respect of a membership organisation must not exceed the likely cost of the premium of an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability to pay the costs of other parties to the proceedings as provided by the Access to Justice (Membership Organisation) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/693, reg 4 (for the purposes of arrangements entered into before 1 November 2005) and the Access to Justice (Membership Organisation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/2306, reg 5 (for the purposes of arrangements entered into on or after 1 November 2005) (see PARA 1830): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 32.6. As to the meaning of 'percentage increase' and 'insurance premium' see PARA 1830 note 20; and as to the meaning of 'membership organisation' see PARA 1830 note 6.

Where the receiving party has left out of the bill of costs, part of what he should have claimed, and there has been a settlement of the bill without reference to costs of previous solicitors, the receiving party cannot recover more than the amount agreed: Moat Housing Group-South Ltd v Harris[2007] EWHC 3092 (QB), [2008] 1 WLR 1578, [2007] All ER (D) 323 (Dec).

Where a costs officer¹ is to make a detailed assessment² of costs³ which are payable by one party to another or of the sum which is payable by one party to the prescribed charity⁴, the period for commencing detailed assessment proceedings is as follows⁵. Where the source of the right to detailed assessment is:

- 1437 (1) a judgment, direction, order, award or other determination, the time by which detailed assessment proceedings must be commenced is three months after the date of that judgment, direction, order, award or other determination or, where detailed assessment is stayed⁶ pending an appeal⁷, three months after the date of the order lifting the stay;
- 1438 (2) discontinuance⁸, the time by which detailed assessment proceedings must be commenced is three months after the date of service⁹ of notice of discontinuance¹⁰ or three months after the date of the dismissal of application to set the notice of discontinuance aside¹¹;
- 1439 (3) acceptance of an offer to settle¹², the time by which detailed assessment proceedings must be commenced is three months after the date when the right to costs arose¹³.

The parties may agree¹⁴ to extend or shorten the time so specified for commencing the detailed assessment proceedings¹⁵ and a party may apply to the appropriate office¹⁶ for an order¹⁷ to extend or shorten that time¹⁸. 1786. Sanction for delay in commencing detailed assessment proceedings.

Where a costs officer¹ is to make a detailed assessment² of costs³ which are payable by one party to another or of the sum which is payable by one party to the prescribed charity⁴, the following provisions apply⁵. Where the receiving party⁶ fails to commence detailed assessment proceedings within the period specified by the Civil Procedure Rules ('CPR')⁷ or by any direction of the court⁸, the paying party⁹ may apply for an order requiring the receiving party to commence detailed assessment proceedings within such time as the court may specify¹⁰.

On such an application, the court may direct that, unless the receiving party commences detailed assessment proceedings within the time specified by the court, all or part of the costs to which the receiving party would otherwise be entitled will be disallowed¹¹. If the paying party has not made such an application and the receiving party commences the proceedings later than the period specified in the CPR¹², the court may disallow all or part of the interest otherwise payable¹³ but must not impose any other sanction except in accordance with its powers¹⁴ in relation to misconduct¹⁵.

Where the costs to be assessed in a detailed assessment are payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund¹⁶, these provisions apply as if the receiving party were the solicitor to whom the costs are payable and the paying party were the Legal Services Commission¹⁷.

1787. Points of dispute and consequence of not serving.

Where a costs officer¹ is to make a detailed assessment² of costs³ which are payable by one party to another or of the sum which is payable by one party to the prescribed charity⁴, the following provisions apply⁵. The paying party⁶ and any other party to the detailed assessment proceedings may dispute any item in the bill of costs⁷ by serving⁸ points of dispute on the receiving party⁹ and every other party to the detailed assessment proceedings¹⁰.

Points of dispute should be short and to the point¹¹. They must:

- 1440 (1) identify each item in the bill of costs which is disputed;
- 1441 (2) in each case, state concisely the nature and grounds of dispute;
- 1442 (3) where practicable suggest a figure to be allowed for each item in respect of which a reduction is sought; and
- 1443 (4) be signed¹² by the party serving them or his solicitor¹³.

Where the receiving party claims an additional liability¹⁴, a party who serves points of dispute on the receiving party may include a request for information about other methods of financing costs which were available to the receiving party¹⁵.

The normal period for serving points of dispute is 21 days after the date of service of the notice of commencement¹⁶. If a party serves points of dispute after this period, he may not be heard further in the detailed assessment proceedings unless the court¹⁷ gives permission¹⁸. However, the parties may agree¹⁹ to extend or shorten the time so specified for service of points of dispute and a party may apply to the appropriate office²⁰ for an order²¹ to extend or shorten that time²².

The receiving party may file²³ a request for a default costs certificate²⁴ if the specified period²⁵ for serving points of dispute has expired and he has not been served with any points of dispute²⁶. If, however, any party (including the paying party) serves points of dispute before the issue of a default costs certificate the court may not issue the default costs certificate²⁷.

COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(ii) Costs Payable by One Party to Another/A. COMMENCEMENT OF DETAILED ASSESSMENT PROCEEDINGS/1788. Procedure where costs are agreed.

1788. Procedure where costs are agreed.

Where a costs officer¹ is to make a detailed assessment² of costs³ which are payable by one party to another or of the sum which is payable by one party to the prescribed charity⁴, the following provisions apply⁵. If the paying party⁶ and the receiving party⁷ agree the amount of costs, either party may apply for a costs certificate, either interim or final, in the amount agreed⁸. An application for such a certificate must be made to the court⁹ which would be the venue¹⁰ for detailed assessment proceedings¹¹. Nothing in these provisions prevents parties who seek a judgment or order by consent¹² from including in the draft a term that a party shall pay to another party a specified sum in respect of costs¹³.

Where the parties have agreed terms as to the issue of a costs certificate, either interim or final, they must apply under the normal procedure for consent judgments and orders¹⁴ for an order that a certificate be issued in terms set out in the application. Such an application may be dealt with by a court officer¹⁵, who may issue the certificate¹⁶. Where, however, in the course of proceedings the receiving party claims that the paying party has agreed to pay costs but that he will neither pay those costs nor join in a consent application, the receiving party may apply¹⁷ for a certificate either interim or final to be issued¹⁸.

The receiving party may discontinue¹⁹ the detailed assessment proceedings²⁰. Where he does so before a detailed assessment hearing has been requested, the paying party may apply to the appropriate office²¹ for an order about the costs of the detailed assessment proceedings²². Where a detailed assessment hearing has been requested, however, the receiving party may not discontinue unless the court gives permission²³.

A bill of costs²⁴ may be withdrawn by consent whether or not a detailed assessment hearing has been requested²⁵.

B. DEFAULT PROVISIONS

1789. Default costs certificate.

Where the receiving party¹ is permitted² to obtain a default costs certificate³, that party does so by filing⁴ a request in the relevant practice form⁵. The request must be filed at the appropriate office⁶ and the general rules about the drawing up, filing and service of judgments and orders⁷ apply to the preparation and service of the certificate⁸. The receiving party is treated as having permission to draw up a default costs certificate by virtue of the costs practice direction⁹.

A default costs certificate will include an order to pay the costs to which it relates¹⁰. Where a receiving party obtains a default costs certificate, the costs payable to that party for the commencement of detailed assessment¹¹ proceedings will be the sum set out in the costs practice direction¹²; the fixed costs¹³ payable on the issue of the certificate are £80¹⁴. A receiving party who obtains a default costs certificate in detailed assessment proceedings pursuant to an order for payment of a sum to the prescribed charity¹⁵ must send a copy of the default costs certificate to the prescribed charity¹⁶.

The issue of a default costs certificate does not prohibit, govern or affect any detailed assessment of the same costs which are payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund¹⁷.

Proceedings for enforcement of default costs certificates may not be issued in the Supreme Court Costs Office¹⁸. An application for an order staying¹⁹ enforcement of a default costs certificate may be made either to a costs judge²⁰ or district judge²¹ of the court office which issued the certificate or to the court²², if different, which has general jurisdiction to enforce the certificate²³.

NOTE 18--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(ii) Costs Payable by One Party to Another/B. DEFAULT PROVISIONS/1790. Setting aside default costs certificate.

1790. Setting aside default costs certificate.

The court¹ must set aside² a default costs certificate³ if the receiving party⁴ was not entitled to it⁵. In any other case, the court may set aside or vary a default costs certificate if it appears to the court that there is some good reason why the detailed assessment⁶ proceedings should continue⁷. In deciding whether to set aside or vary a certificate to which the receiving party was entitled, the matters to which the court must have regard include whether the party seeking the order made the application promptly⁸. When making the order the court may make it subject to conditions⁹ and it may order a party whom it has ordered to pay costs to pay an amount on account¹⁰ before the costs are assessed¹¹. If a default costs certificate is set aside the court will give directions for the management of the detailed assessment proceedings¹².

Where the receiving party has purported to serve the notice of commencement¹³ on the paying party, a default costs certificate has been issued and the receiving party subsequently discovers that the notice of commencement did not reach the paying party at least 21 days before the default costs certificate was issued, the receiving party must file a request for the default costs certificate to be set aside or must apply to the court for directions¹⁴. Where this provision applies, the receiving party may take no further step in the detailed assessment proceedings or the enforcement of the default costs certificate until the certificate has been set aside or the court has given directions¹⁵.

Where the court sets aside or varies a default costs certificate in detailed assessment proceedings pursuant to an order for payment of a sum to the prescribed charity¹⁶, the receiving party must send a copy of the order setting aside or varying the default costs certificate to the prescribed charity¹⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' generally see PARA 22. For the purposes of CPR 47.12 (see the text and notes 2-18), a court officer may set aside a default costs certificate at the request of the receiving party under CPR 47.12(3) (see the text and notes 13-14) and a costs judge or district judge will make any other order or give any directions: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 38.1(1), (2). 10 See CPR 44.3(8); and PARA 1741. Request for detailed assessment hearing.

1792. Request for detailed assessment hearing.

Where points of dispute are served¹, the receiving party² must file³ a request for a detailed assessment⁴ hearing⁵. He must file the request within three months of the expiry of the period for commencing detailed assessment proceedings as specified in the Civil Procedure Rules⁶ or by any direction of the court⁷. The request must be accompanied by:

- 1444 (1) a copy of the notice of commencement⁸ of detailed assessment proceedings;
- 1445 (2) a copy of the bill of costs⁹;
- 1446 (3) the document giving the right to detailed assessment¹⁰;
- 1447 (4) a copy of the points of dispute, annotated as necessary in order to show which items have been agreed and their value and to show which items remain in dispute and their value;
- 1448 (5) as many copies of the points of dispute so annotated as there are persons who have served points of dispute;
- 1449 (6) a copy of any replies served¹¹;
- 1450 (7) a copy of all orders made by the court¹² relating to the costs which are to be assessed;
- 1451 (8) copies of the fee notes and other written evidence as served on the paying party¹³;
- 1452 (9) where there is a dispute as to the receiving party's liability to pay costs to the solicitors who acted for that party, any agreement, letter or other written information provided by the solicitor to his client explaining how the solicitor's charges are to be calculated¹⁴;
- 1453 (10) a statement signed by the receiving party or his solicitor giving the name, address for service, reference and telephone number and fax number, if any, of the specified persons¹⁵ and giving an estimate of the length of time the detailed assessment hearing will take;
- 1454 (11) where the application for a detailed assessment hearing is made by a party other than the receiving party, such of the specified documents¹⁶ as are in the possession of that party;
- 1455 (12) where the court is to assess the costs of an assisted person¹⁷ or LSC funded client¹⁸, the specified documents and information¹⁹.

On receipt of the request for a detailed assessment hearing, the court will fix a date for the hearing or, if the costs officer²⁰ so decides, will give directions or fix a date for a preliminary appointment²¹.

Where the receiving party fails to file a request in accordance with the above provisions, the paying party may apply for an order requiring the receiving party to file the request within such time as the court may specify²². On such an application, the court may direct that, unless the receiving party requests a detailed assessment hearing within the time specified by the court, all or part of the costs to which the receiving party would otherwise be entitled will be disallowed²³. If the paying party has not made such an application and the receiving party files a request for a detailed assessment hearing later than the period specified above²⁴, the court may disallow all or part of the interest otherwise payable²⁵ to the receiving party but must not impose any other sanction except in accordance with its powers²⁶ in relation to misconduct²⁷.

The sanction, for failure to commence detailed assessment proceedings within the time specified by the court, is that all or part of the costs may be disallowed (see CPR 47.8(2); and PARA 1786): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 40.7(1). Where the receiving party commences detailed assessment proceedings after the time specified in the rules but before the paying party has made an application to the court to specify a time, the only sanction which the court may impose is to disallow all or part of the interest which would otherwise be payable for the period of delay, unless the court exercises its powers under CPR 44.14 (court's powers in relation to misconduct: see PARA 1757): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 40.7(2).

18 As to the meaning of 'LSC funded client' see PARA 241 note 12.

19 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 40(2). The documents and information referred to in head (12) in the text are (1) the legal aid certificate, LSC certificate and relevant amendment certificates, any authorities and any certificates of discharge or revocation; (2) a certificate, in Precedent F(3) of the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction; (3) if the assisted person has a financial interest in the detailed assessment hearing and wishes to attend, the postal address of that person to which the court will send notice of any hearing; (4) if the rates payable out of the LSC fund are prescribed rates, a schedule to the bill of costs setting out all the items in the bill which are claimed against other parties calculated at the legal aid prescribed rates with or without any claim for enhancement; and (5) a copy of any default costs certificate in respect of costs claimed in the bill of costs: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 40.2(l). Where a bill of costs of an assisted person or LSC funded client is payable by another person and the costs which can be claimed against the LSC are restricted to prescribed rates, with or without enhancement, the solicitor of the assisted person or LSC funded client must file a legal aid/LSC schedule in accordance with para 40.2(l), which should follow as closely as possible Precedent E in the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 paras 49.1, 49.2. The schedule must set out, by reference to the item numbers in the bill of costs, all the costs claimed as payable by another person, but the arithmetic in the schedule should claim those items at prescribed rates only (with or without any claim for enhancement): para 49.3. Where there has been a change in the prescribed rates during the period covered by the bill of costs, the schedule (as opposed to the bill) should be divided into separate parts, so as to deal separately with each change of rate. The schedule must also be divided so as to correspond with any divisions in the bill of costs: para 49.4. If the bill of costs contains additional columns setting out costs claimed against the LSC only, the schedule may be set out in a separate document or, alternatively, may be included in the additional columns of the bill: para 49.5. As to prescribed rates see generally LEGAL AID.

21 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 40.5. The court will give at least 14 days' notice of the time and place of the detailed assessment hearing to every person named in the statement referred to in para 40.2(j) (see note 15) and will, when giving notice, give each person who has served points of dispute a copy of the points of dispute annotated by the receiving party in compliance with para 40.2(d) (see head (4) in the text): para 40.6(1), (2).

COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(ii) Costs Payable by One Party to Another/C. PROCEDURE WHERE POINTS OF DISPUTE ARE SERVED/1793. Procedure once hearing date has been given.

1793. Procedure once hearing date has been given.

Where a date has been given by the court¹ for a detailed assessment² hearing and:

- 1456 (1) the detailed assessment proceedings are settled, the receiving party³ must give notice of that fact to the court immediately, preferably by fax⁴;
- 1457 (2) a party wishes to apply to vary that date, he must apply in accordance with the general rules⁵ for making applications⁶;
- 1458 (3) the parties agree about changes they wish to make to any direction given for the management of the detailed assessment proceedings, they must apply to the court for an order by consent and file⁷ a draft of the directions sought and an agreed statement of the reasons why the variation is sought; the court may then make an order in the agreed terms or in other terms without a hearing, but it may direct that a hearing is to be listed⁸.

If a party wishes to vary his bill of costs⁹, points of dispute¹⁰ or a reply¹¹, an amended or supplementary document must be filed with the court and copies of it must be served on all other relevant parties¹². Permission is not required to vary a bill of costs, points of dispute or a reply but the court may disallow the variation or permit it only upon conditions, including conditions as to the payment of any costs caused or wasted by the variation¹³.

Unless the court directs otherwise the receiving party must file with the court the papers in support of the bill¹⁴ not less than seven days before the date for the detailed assessment hearing and not more than 14 days before that date¹⁵.

No party other than the receiving party, the paying party and any party who has served points of dispute¹⁶ may be heard at the detailed assessment hearing unless the court gives permission¹⁷ and only items specified in the points of dispute may be raised at the hearing, unless the court gives permission¹⁸.

The court may direct the receiving party to produce any document which in the opinion of the court is necessary to enable it to reach its decision. These documents will in the first instance be produced to the court, but the court may ask the receiving party to elect whether to disclose the particular document to the paying party in order to rely on the contents of the document, or whether to decline disclosure and instead rely on other evidence¹⁹.

Costs assessed at a detailed assessment at the conclusion of proceedings may include an assessment of any additional liability²⁰ in respect of the costs of a previous application or hearing²¹. Where the court disallows any amount of a legal representative's²² percentage increase²³ and the legal representative applies for an order that the disallowed amount should continue to be payable by the client²⁴, the procedure set out in the costs practice direction applies²⁵. This procedure is discussed elsewhere in this title²⁶.

Where the bill of costs of an assisted person²⁷ or LSC funded client²⁸ is payable by another person and the costs which can be claimed against the Legal Services Commission ('LSC') are restricted to prescribed rates, with or without enhancement²⁹, the detailed assessment of the legal aid or LSC schedule³⁰ will take place immediately after the detailed assessment of the bill of costs³¹. On occasions, the court may decide to conduct the detailed assessment of the legal aid or LSC schedule separately from any detailed assessment of the bill of costs³². Where costs have been assessed at prescribed rates it is the responsibility of the legal representative to enter the correct figures allowed in respect of each item and to recalculate the summary of the legal aid or LSC schedule³³.

Once the detailed assessment hearing has ended it is the responsibility of the legal representative appearing for the receiving party or, as the case may be, the receiving party in person to remove the papers filed in support of the bill³⁴.

(iii) Detailed Assessment Procedure where Costs Payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund or Other Fund

1794. Detailed assessment procedure for costs of LSC funded client or assisted person where costs payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund.

Where the court¹ is to assess costs² of an LSC funded client³ or an assisted person⁴ which are payable out of the Community Legal Service fund⁵, that person's solicitor may commence detailed assessment⁶ proceedings by filing⁷ a request in the relevant practice form⁸. Such a request must be filed within three months after the date when the right to detailed assessment arose⁹. The request must be accompanied by:

- 1459 (1) a copy of the bill of costs¹⁰;
- 1460 (2) the document giving the right to detailed assessment¹¹;
- 1461 (3) a copy of all orders made by the court relating to the costs which are to be assessed;
- 1462 (4) copies of any fee notes of counsel and any expert in respect of fees claimed in the bill;
- 1463 (5) written evidence as to any other disbursement which is claimed and which exceeds £250;
- 1464 (6) the legal aid certificates, LSC certificates, any relevant amendment certificates, any authorities and any certificates of discharge or revocation¹²;
- 1465 (7) in the Supreme Court Costs Office¹³, the relevant papers in support of the bill¹⁴; but in cases proceeding in district registries¹⁵ and county courts¹⁶ this provision does not apply and the papers should only be lodged if requested by the costs officer¹⁷;
- 1466 (8) a statement signed by the solicitor giving his name, address for service, reference, telephone number, fax number and, if the assisted person has a financial interest in the detailed assessment and wishes to attend, giving the postal address of that person, to which the court will send notice of any hearing¹⁸.

The solicitor must also serve¹⁹ a copy of the request for detailed assessment on the LSC funded client or the assisted person, if notice of that person's interest has been given²⁰ to the court²¹. Where the solicitor has certified that the LSC funded client or assisted person wishes to attend an assessment hearing, the court will, on receipt of the request for assessment, fix a date for the assessment hearing²². Where the solicitor has not so certified, the court will, on receipt of the request for assessment, provisionally assess the costs without the attendance of the solicitor, unless it considers that a hearing is necessary²³. Before deciding whether a hearing is necessary the court may require the solicitor whose bill it is to provide further information relating to the bill²⁴.

After the court has provisionally assessed the bill, it will return the bill to the solicitor²⁵ together with a notice of the amount of costs which the court proposes to allow²⁶. The legal representative²⁷ must, if the provisional assessment is to be accepted, then complete the bill²⁸.

The court will fix a date for an assessment hearing if the solicitor informs the court, within 14 days after he receives the provisionally assessed bill, that he wants the court to hold such a hearing²⁹. The court will give at least 14 days' notice of the time and place of the detailed assessment hearing to the solicitor and, if the assisted person has a financial interest in the detailed assessment and wishes to attend, to the assisted person³⁰.

Where the court is to assess costs payable by another person as well as costs payable only out of the Community Legal Service fund, the procedure which has already been discussed³¹ applies³².

1794 Detailed assessment procedure for costs of LSC funded client or assisted person where costs payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund

NOTE 13--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(iii) Detailed Assessment Procedure where Costs Payable out of the Community Legal Service Fund or Other Fund/1795. Detailed assessment procedure where costs are payable out of a fund other than the Community Legal Service fund.

1795. Detailed assessment procedure where costs are payable out of a fund other than the Community Legal Service fund.

Where the court¹ is to assess costs² which are payable out of a fund³ other than the Community Legal Service Fund, the receiving party⁴ may commence detailed assessment proceedings⁵ by filing⁶ a request in the relevant practice form⁷. The request must be filed within three months after the date when the right to detailed assessment arose⁸ and must be accompanied by:

- 1467 (1) a copy of the bill of costs⁹;
- 1468 (2) the document giving the right to detailed assessment¹⁰;
- 1469 (3) a copy of all orders made by the court relating to the costs which are to be assessed¹¹;
- 1470 (4) copies of any fee notes of counsel and any expert in respect of fees claimed in the bill¹²;
- 1471 (5) written evidence as to any other disbursement which is claimed and which exceeds £250¹³;
- 1472 (6) in the Supreme Court Costs Office¹⁴, the relevant papers in support of the bill¹⁵; but in cases proceeding in district registries¹⁶ and county courts¹⁷ this provision does not apply and the papers should only be lodged if requested by the costs officer¹⁸;
- 1473 (7) a statement signed by the receiving party giving his name, address for service¹⁹, reference, telephone number, and fax number²⁰;
- 1474 (8) a statement of the postal address of any person who has a financial interest in the outcome of the assessment²¹, to which the court may send notice of any hearing²²; and
- 1475 (9) in respect of each person stated to have such an interest, if such person is a child²³ or protected party²⁴, a statement to that effect²⁵.

The court may direct that the party seeking assessment serve a copy of the request on any person who has a financial interest in the outcome of the assessment²⁶.

The court will, on receipt of the request for assessment, provisionally assess the costs without the attendance of the receiving party, unless it considers that a hearing is necessary²⁷. Where it has made an order dispensing with service on all persons having a financial interest it may proceed at once to make a provisional assessment or, if it decides that a hearing is necessary, give appropriate directions²⁸. Before deciding whether a hearing is necessary it may require the receiving party to provide further information relating to the bill²⁹.

After the court has provisionally assessed the bill, it will return the bill to the receiving party³⁰ together with a notice of the amount of costs which the court proposes to allow³¹. If the receiving party is legally represented the legal representative³² must, if the provisional assessment is to be accepted, then complete the bill³³.

The court will fix a date for an assessment hearing if the receiving party informs the court, within 14 days after he receives the provisionally assessed bill, that he wants the court to hold such a hearing³⁴. The court will give at least 14 days' notice of the time and place of the detailed assessment hearing to the receiving party and to any person who has a financial interest in the outcome of the assessment and has been served with a copy of the request for assessment³⁵.

1797. Final costs certificate.

At the detailed assessment¹ hearing the court² will indicate any disallowance or reduction in the sums claimed in the bill of costs³ by making an appropriate note on the bill⁴. The receiving party⁵ must, in order to complete the bill after the detailed assessment hearing, make clear the correct figures agreed or allowed in respect of each item and must recalculate the summary of the bill appropriately⁶. The completed bill⁷ of costs must be filed⁸ with the court no later than 14 days after the end of the detailed assessment hearing⁹. At the same time as filing the completed bill of costs, the party whose bill it is must also produce receipted fee notes and receipted accounts in respect of all disbursements except those covered by an appropriate certificate¹⁰. If the receiving party fails to file a completed bill in accordance with these provisions, the paying party¹¹ may make an application¹² seeking an appropriate order¹³.

When a completed bill is filed, the court will issue a final costs certificate and serve¹⁴ it on the parties to the detailed assessment proceedings¹⁵, subject to any order made by the court that such a certificate is not to be issued until other costs have been paid¹⁶. No final costs certificate will be issued until all relevant court fees¹⁷ payable on the assessment of costs have been paid¹⁸.

A final costs certificate will show the amount of any costs which have been agreed between the parties or which have been allowed on detailed assessment and, where applicable, the amount agreed or allowed in respect of VAT on the costs agreed or allowed¹⁹. It will include disbursements in respect of the fees of counsel only if receipted fee notes or accounts in respect of those disbursements have been produced to the court and only to the extent indicated by those receipts²⁰. Where the certificate relates to costs payable between parties a separate certificate will be issued for each party entitled to costs²¹.

A final costs certificate will include an order to pay the costs to which it relates, unless the court orders otherwise²².

An application for an order staying²³ enforcement of a final costs certificate may be made either to a costs judge²⁴ or district judge²⁵ of the court office which issued the certificate or to the court (if different) which has general jurisdiction to enforce the certificate²⁶. Proceedings for enforcement of final costs certificates may not be issued in the Supreme Court Costs Office²⁷.

1797 Final costs certificate

NOTE 27--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(v) Costs of Detailed Assessment Proceedings/1798. Liability for costs of detailed assessment proceedings.

(v) Costs of Detailed Assessment Proceedings

1798. Liability for costs of detailed assessment proceedings.

The receiving party¹ is entitled to the costs² of the detailed assessment³ proceedings except where the provisions of any Act, any of the Civil Procedure Rules or any relevant practice direction provide otherwise⁴ or the court⁵ makes some other order in relation to all or part of the costs of the detailed assessment proceedings⁶. In deciding whether to make some other order, the court must have regard to all the circumstances, including the conduct of all the parties⁷, the amount, if any, by which the bill of costs⁸ has been reduced⁹ and whether it was reasonable for a party to claim the costs of a particular item or to dispute that item¹⁰.

As a general rule the court will assess the receiving party's costs of the detailed assessment proceedings and add them to the bill of costs¹¹. If the costs of the detailed assessment proceedings are awarded to the paying party¹², the court will either assess those costs by summary assessment¹³ or make an order for them to be decided by detailed assessment¹⁴. No party should file¹⁵ or serve¹⁶ a statement of costs¹⁷ of the detailed assessment proceedings unless the court orders him to do so¹⁸.

The effect of CPR 47.18(1) is that there is a rebuttable presumption that a receiving party is entitled to have his costs of a detailed assessment subject to the right of the costs judge to make some other order: Buften v Hill [2002] All ER (D) 76 (May), SCCO. CPR 47.18(1) does not apply where the receiving party has pro bono representation in the detailed assessment proceedings but that party may apply for an order in respect of that representation under the Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3) (see PARA 1824); CPR 47.18(1A). COSTS/(5) PROCEDURE FOR DETAILED ASSESSMENT OF COSTS AND DEFAULT PROVISIONS/(v) Costs of Detailed Assessment Proceedings/1799. Offers to settle costs without prejudice save as to costs of detailed assessment proceedings.

1799. Offers to settle costs without prejudice save as to costs of detailed assessment proceedings.

Either the paying party¹ or the receiving party² may make a written offer to settle the costs³ of the proceedings which gave rise to the detailed assessment⁴ proceedings without prejudice⁵ save as to the costs of the detailed assessment proceedings⁶. No time is specified within which such an offer must be made, but an offer made by the paying party should usually be made within 14 days after service⁷ of the notice of commencement⁸ on that party. If the offer is made by the receiving party, it should normally be made within 14 days after the service of points of dispute⁹ by the paying party. Offers made after these periods are likely to be given less weight by the court¹⁰ in deciding what order as to costs to make unless there is good reason for the offer not being made until the later time¹¹. Where an offer to settle is made it should specify whether or not it is intended to be inclusive of the cost of preparation of the bill¹², interest¹³ and VAT¹⁴; unless it states otherwise, the offer will be treated as being inclusive of all these items¹⁵.

Where an offer to settle is accepted, an application may be made for a certificate in agreed terms, or the bill of costs may be withdrawn¹⁶.

Where a party (whether the paying or the receiving party) makes a written offer to settle the costs of the proceedings which gave rise to the assessment proceedings and the offer is expressed to be without prejudice save as to the costs of the detailed assessment proceedings, the fact of the offer must not be communicated to the costs officer¹⁷ until the question of costs of the detailed assessment proceedings falls to be decided¹⁸. The court will take the offer into account in deciding who should pay the costs of those proceedings¹⁹. Where, however, the receiving party is an assisted person²⁰ or an LSC funded client²¹, such an offer to settle will not have these consequences unless the court so orders²².

1802. Appeal procedure.

The appellant must file¹ an appeal notice² within 21 days after the date of the authorised court officer's decision³ he wishes to appeal against⁴. The appellant's notice should, if possible, be accompanied by a suitable record of the judgment appealed against⁵. If he is unable to obtain a suitable record of the authorised court officer's decision within the time in which the appellant's notice must be filed, that notice must still be completed to the best of the appellant's ability but may be amended subsequently with the permission of the costs judge or district judge hearing the appeal⁶.

On receipt of the appeal notice, the court⁷ will serve⁸ a copy of the notice on the parties⁹ to the detailed assessment¹⁰ proceedings and give notice of the appeal hearing to those parties¹¹.

On an appeal from an authorised court officer the court will re-hear the proceedings which gave rise to the decision appealed against and make any order and give any directions as it considers appropriate¹². The hearing is before a costs judge or a district judge of the High Court¹³.

1 As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8.

2 The notice must be in Form N161 (appellant's notice: see The Civil Court Practice): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 48.1.

When the appellant was unrepresented before the authorised court officer, it is the duty of any advocate for the respondent to make his own note of the reasons promptly available, free of charge, to the appellant where there is no official record or if the court so directs. Where the appellant was represented before the authorised court officer, it is the duty of his own former advocate to make his notes available. 1803. Pre-commencement disclosure etc and orders for disclosure etc against a person who is not a party.

Where a person applies for an order for the High Court¹ or a county court² to exercise its powers:

- 1476 (1) to make an order before the commencement of proceedings for the inspection, photographing, preservation, custody and detention of property, the taking of samples of property and the carrying out of any experiment on or with any such property³;
- 1477 (2) to make an order for pre-action disclosure⁴; or
- 1478 (3) to make an order for disclosure or for the inspection, photographing etc of property against a non-party⁵, the general rule is that the court⁶ will award the person against whom the order is sought his costs⁷ of the application and of complying with any order made on the application⁸. The court may, however, make a different order, having regard to all the circumstances, including the extent to which it was reasonable for the person against whom the order was sought to oppose the application⁹ and whether the parties to the application have complied with any relevant pre-action protocol¹⁰.

UPDATE

1803 Pre-commencement disclosure etc and orders for disclosure etc against a person who is not a party

NOTE 8--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(i) Costs Payable by or to Particular Persons/1804. Power to make costs orders in favour of or against non-parties.

1804. Power to make costs orders in favour of or against non-parties.

The court¹ has power to make a costs² order in favour of or against a person who is not a party to proceedings³, and the court's jurisdiction extends to making an order that the unsuccessful party in one set of proceedings is to pay the opponent's costs in bringing separate proceedings against a third party⁴. It has been held that where a third party professional funder is funding part of the costs of litigation in a manner which facilitates access to justice, the professional funder should be potentially liable for the costs of the opposing party to the extent of the funding provided⁵.

The general rule is that an order for costs against a non-party may only be made in exceptional circumstances⁶, but nevertheless such an order may be made if in all the circumstances it is just to do so⁷ although generally the non-party must have some connection with the proceedings⁸.

1805. Procedure where a costs order in favour of or against non-parties is considered.

Where the court¹ is considering whether to exercise its power² to make a costs³ order in favour of or against a person who is not a party to proceedings⁴, the general rule is that that person must be added as a party to the proceedings for the purposes of costs only⁵ and he must be given a reasonable opportunity to attend a hearing at which the court will consider the matter further⁶. This rule does not, however, apply where the court is considering whether to make an order against the Legal Services Commission⁷ or make a wasted costs order⁸. Nor does it apply in proceedings⁹ for pre-commencement disclosure and orders for disclosure against a person who is not a party¹⁰.

Where an innocent party is involved in the wrongdoing of others and becomes under a duty to assist the court by disclosing information, in most such cases the costs ought to be recovered from the wrongdoer rather than from the innocent party¹¹.

UPDATE

1805 Procedure where a costs order in favour of or against non-parties is considered

NOTE 5--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(i) Costs Payable by or to Particular Persons/1806. Amount of costs where costs are payable pursuant to a contract.

1806. Amount of costs where costs are payable pursuant to a contract.

Where the court¹ assesses (whether by the summary² or detailed assessment³ procedure) costs⁴ which are payable by the paying party⁵ to the receiving party⁶ under the terms of a contract, the costs payable under those terms are, unless the contract expressly provides otherwise, to be presumed to be costs which have been reasonably incurred and are reasonable in amount, and the court will assess them accordingly⁷. The court may, however, make an order that all or part of the costs payable under the contract are to be disallowed if it is satisfied by the paying party that costs have been unreasonably incurred or are unreasonable in amount⁸.

These provisions do not apply where the contract is between a solicitor and his client⁹. They do not require the court to make an assessment of costs payable under a contract¹⁰ or require a mortgagee to apply for an order for those costs that he has a contractual right to recover out of the mortgage funds¹¹.

The following principles apply to costs relating to a mortgage:

- 1479 (1) an order for the payment of costs of proceedings by one party to another is always a discretionary order¹²;
- 1480 (2) where there is a contractual right to the costs the discretion should ordinarily be exercised so as to reflect that contractual right;
- 1481 (3) the power of the court to disallow a mortgagee's costs sought to be added to the mortgage security is a power that does not derive from the court's discretion to award costs¹³, but from the power of the courts of equity to fix the terms on which redemption will be allowed¹⁴;
- 1482 (4) a decision by a court to refuse costs in whole or in part to a mortgagee litigant may be a decision in the exercise of its discretion to award costs, a decision in the exercise of the power to fix the terms on which redemption will be allowed, a decision as to the extent of a mortgagee's contractual right to add his costs to the security or a combination of two or more of these things¹⁵;
- 1483 (5) a mortgagee is not to be deprived of a contractual or equitable right to add costs to the security merely by reason of an order for payment of costs made without reference to the mortgagee's contractual or equitable rights, and without any adjudication as to whether or not the mortgagee should be deprived of those costs¹⁶.

Where the contract entitles a mortgagee to (a) add the costs of litigation relating to the mortgage to the sum secured by it; (b) require a mortgagor to pay those costs; or (c) both, the mortgagor may make an application for the court to direct that an account of the mortgagee's costs be taken¹⁷. The mortgagor may then dispute an amount in the mortgagee's account on the basis that it has been unreasonably incurred or is unreasonable in amount¹⁸. Where a mortgagor disputes an amount, the court may make an order that the disputed costs are assessed under the normal rules¹⁹ relating to assessment of costs payable under a contract²⁰.

1807. Limitations on court's power to award costs in favour of trustee or personal representative.

Where a person is or has been a party to any proceedings in the capacity of trustee or personal representative¹ and the rule as to costs² payable pursuant to a contract³ does not apply, then the general rule is that he is entitled to be paid his costs of those proceedings, in so far as they are not recovered from or paid by any other person, out of the relevant trust fund⁴ or estate⁵. Where he is entitled to be paid any of those costs out of the fund or estate, those costs will be assessed on the indemnity basis⁶ and he is entitled to an indemnity out of the relevant trust fund or estate even if costs were awarded against him in favour of another party, provided that those costs were properly incurred⁷. Whether costs were properly incurred depends on all the circumstances of the case, and may, for example, depend on (1) whether the trustee or personal representative obtained directions from the court before bringing or defending the proceedings; (2) whether he acted in the interests of the fund or estate or in substance for a benefit other than that of the estate, including his own⁸; and (3) whether he acted in some way unreasonably in bringing or defending, or in the conduct of, the proceedings⁹.

1808. Costs where money is payable by or to a child or protected party.

In any proceedings where a party is a child¹ or protected party² and money is ordered or agreed to be paid to, or for the benefit of, that party or money is ordered to be paid by him or on his behalf, the general rule is that the court³ must order a detailed assessment⁴ of the costs⁵ payable by, or out of money belonging to, any party who is a child or protected party and, on such an assessment, the court must also assess any costs payable to that party in the proceedings, unless the court has issued a default costs certificate⁶ in relation to those costs or the costs are payable in proceedings⁷ relating to a road traffic accident⁸. Where a claimant⁹ is a child or protected party and such a detailed assessment has taken place, the only amount payable by the child or protected party is the amount which the court certifies as payable¹⁰. These provisions also apply to a counterclaim¹¹ by or on behalf of a child or protected party¹².

The court need not, however, order detailed assessment of costs in the following circumstances:

- 1484 (1) where there is no need to do so to protect the interests of the child or protected party or his estate;
- 1485 (2) where another party has agreed to pay a specified sum in respect of the costs of the child or protected party and the solicitor acting for the child or protected party has waived the right to claim further costs;
- 1486 (3) where the court has decided the costs payable to the child or protected party by way of summary assessment¹³ and the solicitor acting for the child or protected party has waived the right to claim further costs;
- 1487 (4) where an insurer or other person is liable to discharge the costs which the child or protected party would otherwise be liable to pay to his solicitor and the court is satisfied that the insurer or other person is financially able to discharge those costs¹⁴.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(i) Costs Payable by or to Particular Persons/1809. Litigants in person.

1809. Litigants in person.

Where, in any proceedings in a county court¹, in the Supreme Court² or in the House of Lords³ on appeal from the High Court or the Court of Appeal⁴, before the Lands Tribunal⁵, before the First-tier Tribunal or the Upper Tribunal⁶ or in or before any other specified court or tribunal⁷, any costs of a litigant in person are ordered to be paid by any other party to the proceedings or in any other way, there may, subject to rules of court⁸, be allowed⁹ sums in respect of any work done, and any expenses and losses incurred, by the litigant in or in connection with the proceedings to which the order relates¹⁰.

Under the Civil Procedure Rules, where the court¹¹ orders (whether by summary assessment¹² or detailed assessment¹³) that the costs¹⁴ of a litigant in person¹⁵ are to be paid by any other person¹⁶, the costs allowed must not exceed, except in the case of a disbursement, two-thirds of the amount which would have been allowed if the litigant in person had been represented by a legal representative¹⁷. The litigant in person must be allowed:

- 1488 (1) costs for the same categories of work and disbursements which would have been allowed if the work had been done or the disbursements had been made by a legal representative on the litigant in person's behalf¹⁸;
- 1489 (2) the payments reasonably made by him for legal services relating to the conduct of the proceedings¹⁹; and
- 1490 (3) the costs of obtaining expert assistance in assessing the costs claim²⁰.

Subject to the two-thirds limit set out above, the amount of costs to be allowed to the litigant in person for any item of work claimed is (a) where the litigant can prove financial loss²¹, the amount that he can prove he has lost for time reasonably spent on doing the work; or (b) where the litigant cannot prove financial loss, an amount for the time reasonably spent on doing the work at the rate set out in the costs practice direction²². A litigant who is allowed costs for attending at court to conduct his case is not entitled to a witness allowance in respect of such attendance in addition to those costs²³.

At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for these purposes.

3 As to proceedings in the House of Lords see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 359 et seq. As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. 7 The tribunal specified under the Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 s 1(1) by order made by the Lord Chancellor by statutory instrument, subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: s 1(1)(c), (3). In the exercise of the power so conferred, the Lord Chancellor has made the Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Order 1980, SI 1980/1159, which came into operation on 1 September 1980 (art 1) and which specifies the Employment Appeal Tribunal) (art 3). As to the Employment Appeal Tribunal see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 809; and EMPLOYMENT vol 41 (2009) PARA 1384 et seq.

8 As to the meaning of 'rules of court' for these purposes see the Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 s 1(4) (amended by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 s 48(1), Sch 8 para 6(1), (3)) (rules relating to the Lands Tribunal and to the First-tier Tribunal and the Upper Tribunal) and the Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Order 1980, SI 1980/1159, art 4 (rules relating to the Employment Appeal Tribunal).

9 The on the taxation or other determination of those costs: Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 s 1(1). Under the Civil Procedure Rules 'taxation' is now known as 'assessment', and normally means 'detailed assessment': see PARA 1734.

10 Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 s 1(1) (amended by the Tribunals, Courts and Enforcement Act 2007 Sch 8 para 6(2)). The Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 s 1(1) is amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 ss 40(4), 59(5), Sch 9 Pt 1 para 26, Sch 11 Pt 4 para 22(a), to substitute for the reference to the Supreme Court a reference to the Senior Courts, and for the reference to the House of Lords a reference to the Supreme Court. At the date at which this title states the law, no day had been appointed for bringing these amendments into force.

11 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22

12 As to the meaning of 'summary assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see PARA 1752.

13 As to the meaning of 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see PARA 1779 et seq.

14 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

15 For these purposes, a litigant in person includes a company or other corporation which is acting without a legal representative (CPR 48.6(6)(a)); and a barrister, solicitor, solicitor's employee or other authorised litigator (as defined in the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990: see s 119(1); and LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 497) who is acting for himself (CPR 48.6(6)(b)). A solicitor who, instead of acting for himself, is represented in the proceedings by his firm or by himself in his firm name, is not a litigant in person for the purposes of the CPR: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 52.5. As to the meaning of 'legal representative' see PARA 1833 note 13. As to the use of a 'McKenzie friend' see PARA 1126. A solicitor, represented by his firm in proceedings against him, is entitled to recover the costs of his firm: Malkinson v Trim [2002] EWCA Civ 1273, [2003] 1 WLR 463; considered in Khan v Lord Chancellor [2003] EWHC 12 (QB), [2003] 1 WLR 2385 (barrister, in proceedings to which he is party, entitled to recover costs for preparatory work done by himself, not entitled to costs for representing himself in court).

16 CPR 48.6(1). Formerly a litigant in person was unable to recover costs in respect of the time and trouble he expended on the preparation of his case (Buckland v Watts [1970] 1 QB 27, [1969] 2 All ER 985, CA), for from ancient times the court would only award costs which it could measure, and whilst it recognised and could measure professional skill and labour it could not measure private expenditure of labour and trouble by a layman (see 2 Co Inst 288; London Scottish Benefit Society v Chorley (1884) 13 QBD 872, CA; considered in Khan v Lord Chancellor [2003] EWHC 12 (QB), [2003] 1 WLR 2385). The Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 (see the text and notes 1-10) extended the ability of a litigant in person to recover costs.

17 CPR 48.6(2). The court (costs judge) must make an assessment of the sum that he would allow to a solicitor and then restrict the litigant's costs to two-thirds of that sum: Morris v Wiltshire and Woodspring District Council (16 January 1998, unreported); Hart v Aga Khan Foundation (UK) [1984] 2 All ER 439, [1984] 1 WLR 994, CA (where a litigant was not entitled to recover a sum equal to two thirds of a notional counsel's fee for conducting the claim). As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARAS 33 text and note 2, 1736.

Only actual and not notional disbursements can be recovered. A litigant in person may be allowed more time for a particular task than would be allowed to a solicitor: Mealing-Mcleod v CPE Board (SCCO Case No 7 of 2000, unreported) per Buckley J.

18 CPR 48.6(3)(a); and see note 16.

19 CPR 48.6(3)(b); and see Uhbi (t/a United Building and Plumbing Contractors) v Kajla [2002] EWCA Civ 628, [2002] All ER (D) 265 (Apr) (litigant in person not entitled to recover costs of assistance in preparing for trial given by director of debt collection company who was not legally qualified). A litigant in person is not treated for the purposes of VAT as having supplied legal services himself: see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 5.18; and PARA 1749. Consequently a bill of costs presented for agreement or assessment should not claim any VAT which will not be allowed on assessment: see para 5.19; and PARA 1783.

20 CPR 48.6(3)(c). In order to qualify as an expert for these purposes the person in question must be a barrister, solicitor, Fellow of the Institute of Legal Executives, Fellow of the Association of Law Costs Draftsmen, law costs draftsman who is a member of the Academy of Experts, or law costs draftsman who is a member of the Expert Witness Institute: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 52.1.

21 Where a litigant in person wishes to prove that he has suffered financial loss he must produce to the court any written evidence he relies on to support that claim, and serve a copy of that evidence on any party against whom he seeks costs at least 24 hours before the hearing at which the question may be decided: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 52.2. Where a litigant in person commences detailed assessment proceedings under CPR 47.6 (see PARA 1784), he must serve copies of that written evidence with the notice of commencement: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 52.3. The burden of proving financial loss lies on the litigant in person: Mainwaring v Goldtech Investments Ltd [1997] 1 All ER 467. As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARAS 33 text and note 2, 1736.

22 CPR 48.6(4). The amount which may be allowed under CPR 46.3(5)(b) (fast track trial costs: see PARA 1777) and CPR 48.6(4) is £9.25 per hour: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 52.4. See eg R (on the application of Wulfsohn) v Legal Services Commission [2002] EWCA Civ 250, [2002] All ER (D) 120 (Feb), where the litigant in person was allowed £10,000 for some 1,200 hours of research he had put in. See also Agassi v Robinson (Inspector of Taxes) (Bar Council intervening) [2005] EWCA Civ 1507, [2006] 1 All ER 900 (taxation specialist instructing counsel on behalf of litigant in person; litigant in person entitled to recover counsel's fees as a disbursement, but not specialist's fees in respect of work normally done by solicitor).

1809 Litigants in person

NOTES 2, 3, 10--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

TEXT AND NOTES 5-8--In both places, omit the 'Lands Tribunal': Litigants in Person (Costs and Expenses) Act 1975 s 1(1), (4) (amended by SI 2009/1307).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(i) Costs Payable by or to Particular Persons/1810. Costs where the court has made a group litigation order.

1810. Costs where the court has made a group litigation order.

Where the court¹ has made a group litigation order ('GLO')², unless the court orders otherwise any order for common costs³ against group litigants⁴ imposes on each group litigant several liability⁵ for an equal proportion of those common costs⁶. The general rule is that where a group litigant is the paying party⁷, he will, in addition to any costs he is liable to pay to the receiving party⁸, be liable for the individual costs of his claim⁹ and an equal proportion, together with all the other group litigants, of the common costs¹⁰. Where the court makes an order about costs in relation to any application or hearing which involved one or more GLO issues and issues relevant only to individual claims, the court will direct the proportion of the costs that is to relate to common costs and the proportion that is to relate to individual costs¹¹.

Where common costs have been incurred before a claim is entered on the group register, the court may order the group litigant to be liable for a proportion of those costs¹²; and where a claim is removed from the group register¹³, the court may make an order for costs in that claim which includes a proportion of the common costs incurred up to the date on which the claim is removed from the group register¹⁴.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22

2 As to the meaning of 'GLO' see PARA 233 note 2. As to group litigation orders see PARAS 233-235.

3 'Common costs' means (1) costs incurred in relation to the GLO issues; (2) individual costs incurred in a claim while it is proceeding as a test claim; and (3) costs incurred by the lead solicitor in administering the group litigation: CPR 48.6A(2)(b). 'Individual costs' means costs incurred in relation to an individual claim on the group register: CPR 48.6A(2)(a). As to the group register see PARA 233 note 8; and as to test claims see PARA 235. As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

4 'Group litigant' means a claimant or defendant, as the case may be, whose claim is entered on the group register: CPR 48.6A(2)(c). As to the meaning of 'claimant' and 'defendant' see PARA 18.

5 As to the meaning of 'several liability' see PARA 847 note 13.

6 CPR 48.6A(1), (3). In Hodgson v Imperial Tobacco Ltd (No 2) [1998] 2 Costs LR 27, per Wright J, it was held that liability for and the benefit of costs in relation to issues common to all claimants would be several rather than joint. As to an early approach to costs-sharing orders see Davies v Eli Lilly & Co [1987] 3 All ER 94, [1987] 1 WLR 1136, CA. As to group litigation and conditional fee agreements see Hodgson v Imperial Tobacco Ltd (No 2) [1998] 2 Costs LR 27. As to the caution to be exercised in applying pre-CPR authorities see PARAS 33 text and note 2, 1736.

As to a group litigation costs order where two out of five lead cases which went to trial were dismissed with the claimants succeeding only on certain issues see Ochwat v Watson Burton (a firm) [1999] All ER (D) 1407, CA. The incidence of common costs between claimants and defendants in group claims requires special consideration and may involve inherently different principles than those applicable to single-claimant proceedings: Afrika v Cape plc [2001] EWCA Civ 2017, [2003] 3 All ER 631. The liability of discontinuing claimants for costs of common issues should be determined following the trial of common issues: Afrika v Cape plc [2001] EWCA Civ 2017, [2003] 3 All ER 631.

7 As to the meaning of 'paying party' see PARA 1836 note 14.

8 As to the meaning of 'receiving party' see PARA 1833 note 14.

9 CPR 48.6A(4)(a).

10 CPR 48.6A(4)(b). Under a conditional fee agreement, there is no requirement for any additional or collateral agreement relating to generic costs: Brown v Russell Young & Co [2007] EWCA Civ 43, [2007] 2 All ER 453, [2008] 1 WLR 525.

11 CPR 48.6A(5). Where the court makes an order about costs in relation to any application or hearing involving both one or more of the GLO issues and an issue or issues relevant only to individual claims and the court has not directed the proportion of the costs that is to relate to common costs and the proportion that is to relate to individual costs in accordance with this rule, the costs judge will make a decision as to the relevant proportions at or before the commencement of the detailed assessment of costs.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(ii) Costs Relating to Solicitors and Other Legal Representatives/1811. Personal liability of legal representative for costs; wasted costs orders.

(ii) Costs Relating to Solicitors and Other Legal Representatives

1811. Personal liability of legal representative for costs; wasted costs orders.

Where the court¹ is considering whether to make an order² to disallow or, as the case may be, order a legal representative³ to meet, 'wasted costs'⁴, the court must give the legal representative a reasonable opportunity to attend a hearing to give reasons why it should not make such an order⁵. A party may apply⁶ for a wasted costs order⁷ or the court may make a wasted costs order against a legal representative on its own initiative⁸. Such orders can be made at any stage in the proceedings, up to and including the proceedings relating to the detailed assessment⁹ of costs, but in general applications for wasted costs are best left until after the end of the trial¹⁰.

It is appropriate for the court to make a wasted costs order against a legal representative only if (1) the legal representative has acted improperly, unreasonably or negligently; (2) his conduct has caused a party to incur unnecessary costs; and (3) it is just in all the circumstances to order him to compensate that party for the whole or part of those costs¹¹. The court may direct that notice must be given to the legal representative's client, in such manner as the court may direct, of any proceedings under these provisions¹² and it will give directions about the procedure that will be followed in each case in order to ensure that the issues are dealt with in a way which is fair and as simple and summary as the circumstances permit¹³. As a general rule the court will consider whether to make a wasted costs order in two stages. In the first stage, the court must be satisfied that it has before it evidence or other material which, if unanswered, would be likely to lead to a wasted costs order being made, and that the wasted costs proceedings are justified notwithstanding the likely costs involved¹⁴. At the second stage, even if the court is satisfied as set out above, the court will consider, after giving the legal representative an opportunity to give reasons why the court should not make a wasted costs order, whether it is appropriate to make a wasted costs order¹⁵. Before making a wasted costs order, the court may direct a costs judge¹⁶ or a district judge¹⁷ to inquire into the matter and report to the court¹⁸.

Where a party applies for a wasted costs order against his own legal representative he will be taken to have waived his legal professional privilege as regards relevant communications between them¹⁹; however, where a party applies for a wasted costs order against the opposing party's legal representative the opponent may not be willing to waive his privilege, leaving the legal representative at a disadvantage since he will be hampered in his defence, not being able to reveal privileged communications indicating what advice he gave to his client or what instructions he received²⁰. Thus, where there is room for doubt, the opponent's legal representative will be given the benefit of it, unless his conduct is quite plainly unjustifiable²¹. An application for a wasted costs order against another party's legal representative is therefore unlikely to succeed unless his conduct can be shown to have been improper without recourse to privileged material²².

When the court makes a wasted costs order, it must either specify the amount to be disallowed or paid or direct a costs judge or a district judge to decide the amount of costs to be disallowed or paid²³. The court may direct that notice must be given to the legal representative's client, in such manner as the court may direct, of any wasted costs order made against his legal representative²⁴.

The court may refer the question of wasted costs to a costs judge or a district judge, instead of making a wasted costs order²⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

2 Under the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 51(6); see PARA 1732. As to the prospective citation of the Supreme Court Act 1981 as the Senior Courts Act 1981 see PARA 8 note 1.

3 As to the meaning of 'legal representative' see PARA 1833 note 13. A party may apply for a wasted costs order against his own legal representative or an opponent's legal representative (but see the text and notes 20-22); and the liability of the legal representative is not limited to his conduct in exercising the right of audience in a court: see Medcalf v Mardell[2002] UKHL 27, [2003] 1 AC 120, [2002] 3 All ER 721.

5 CPR 48.7(1), (2). As from a day to be appointed, CPR 48.7(1) is amended by virtue of the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 s 59(5), Sch 11 Pt 1 para 1(2) to substitute a reference to the Senior Courts Act 1981 for the reference to the Supreme Court Act 1981. At the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed.

6 The application may be made by filing an application notice in accordance with CPR Pt 23 (see PARA 303 et seq) or orally in the course of any hearing: see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 53.3. On an application for a wasted costs order under CPR Pt 23 the application notice and any evidence in support must identify (1) what the legal representative is alleged to have done or failed to do; and (2) the costs that he may be ordered to pay or which are sought against him: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 53.8. On such an application, respondent barristers may be asked whether they saw or knew of non-privileged documents provided that the purpose of the question is not to discover what was in their brief or instructions: Brown v Bennett[2001] All ER (D) 246 (Dec), (2002) Times, 4 January per Neuberger J.

7 See note 6. A wasted costs order is an order (1) that the legal representative pay a specified sum in respect of costs to a party; or (2) for costs relating to a specified sum or items of work to be disallowed: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 53.9.

8 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 53.2. Wasted costs orders should be dealt with, except in wholly unusual circumstances, at the conclusion of the trial and by the same judge who heard the trial: Gray v Going Places Leisure Travel Ltd[2005] EWCA Civ 189, [2005] All ER (D) 94 (Feb). In other cases the court will adjourn the hearing before proceeding to the second stage: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 53.7. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(ii) Costs Relating to Solicitors and Other Legal Representatives/1812. Basis of detailed assessment of solicitor and client costs.

1812. Basis of detailed assessment of solicitor and client costs.

The following provisions apply to every assessment of a solicitor's bill to his client except a bill which is to be paid out of the Community Legal Service Fund under the Legal Aid Act 1988¹ or the Access to Justice Act 1999². The amount which may be allowed on the assessment of any costs³ or bill of costs⁴ in respect of any item relating to proceedings in a county court⁵ must not normally, except in so far as rules of court may otherwise provide, exceed the amount which could have been allowed in respect of that item as between party and party in those proceedings, having regard to the nature of the proceedings and the amount of the claim and of any counterclaim⁶, and this applies unless the solicitor and client have entered into a written agreement which expressly permits payment to the solicitor of an amount of costs greater than that which the client could have recovered from another party to the proceedings⁷. Subject to this, costs are to be assessed on the indemnity⁸ basis but are to be presumed:

- 1491 (1) to have been reasonably incurred if they were incurred with the express or implied approval of the client⁹;
- 1492 (2) to be reasonable in amount if their amount was expressly or impliedly approved by the client¹⁰;
- 1493 (3) to have been unreasonably incurred if they are of an unusual nature or amount and the solicitor did not tell his client that as a result he might not recover all of them from the other party¹¹.

Where the court¹² is considering a percentage increase¹³, whether on the application of the legal representative¹⁴ or on the application of the client, the court will have regard to all the relevant factors as they reasonably appeared to the solicitor or counsel when the conditional fee agreement¹⁵ was entered into or varied¹⁶.

6 See the Solicitors Act 1974 s 74(3) (prospectively amended by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 177, Sch 16 Pt 1 paras 1, 69(b)); and LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 66 (2009) PARA 970. Section 74(3) does not have the effect of making the assessment of costs between the parties into a cap on the costs recoverable as between solicitor and client under CPR 48.8: Lynch v Paul Davidson Taylor (a firm) [2004] EWHC 89 (QB), [2004] 1 WLR 1753.

7 CPR 48.8(1A). A client and his solicitor may agree whatever terms they consider appropriate about the payment of the solicitor's charges for his services. If however, the costs are of an unusual nature (either in amount or in the type of costs incurred) those costs will be presumed to have been unreasonably incurred unless the solicitor satisfies the court that he informed the client that they were unusual and, where the costs relate to litigation, that he informed the client they might not be allowed on an assessment of costs between the parties. That information must have been given to the client before the costs were incurred: Practice

Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 54.1. As to a solicitor's professional obligations in respect of charges to his client and the giving of appropriate information see generally LEGAL PROFESSIONS.

8 As to the indemnity basis see PARA 1747.

9 CPR 48.8(2)(a).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(ii) Costs Relating to Solicitors and Other Legal Representatives/1813. Procedure on assessment of costs payable by a client to his solicitor on an order under the Solicitors Act 1974.

1813. Procedure on assessment of costs payable by a client to his solicitor on an order under the Solicitors Act 1974.

Where before the expiration of one month from the delivery of a solicitor's bill an application is made by the party chargeable with the bill, the High Court must, without requiring any sum to be paid into court, order that the bill be 'taxed' (assessed)¹ and that no action (now known as a 'claim')² be commenced on the bill until the 'taxation' (assessment) is completed³. Where no such application is made before the expiration of that period, then on an application being made by the solicitor or, subject to the statutory conditions⁴, by the party chargeable with the bill, the court may on such terms, if any, as it thinks fit (not being terms as to the costs of the assessment), order that the bill be assessed, and that no claim be commenced on the bill, and that any claim already commenced be stayed, until the assessment is completed⁵.

An order for the assessment of a bill made on an application under these provisions by the party chargeable with the bill must, if he so requests, be an order for the assessment of the profit costs⁶ covered by the bill⁷. Subject to this, the court may order the assessment of all the costs, or of the profit costs, or of the costs other than profit costs and, where part of the costs is not to be assessed, may allow a claim to be commenced or to be continued for that part of the costs⁸. Every order for the assessment of a bill must require the assessing officer to assess not only the bill but also the costs of the assessment and to certify what is due to or by the solicitor in respect of the bill and in respect of the costs of the assessment⁹. If after due notice of any assessment either party to it fails to attend, the officer may proceed with the assessment without notice¹⁰. Unless the order for assessment was made on the application of the solicitor and the party chargeable does not attend the assessment, or the relevant order¹¹ otherwise provides, the costs of an assessment must be paid according to the event of the assessment, that is to say, if one-fifth of the amount of the bill is assessed off, the solicitor must pay the costs, but otherwise the party chargeable must pay the costs¹². The assessing officer may certify to the court any special circumstances relating to a bill or to the assessment of a bill, and the court may make such order as respects the costs of the assessment as it may think fit¹³.

Where the court¹⁴ has made such an order¹⁵ for the assessment of costs¹⁶ payable to a solicitor by his client, the solicitor must serve¹⁷ a breakdown of costs¹⁸ within 28 days of the order for costs to be assessed¹⁹. The client must serve points of dispute²⁰ within 14 days after service on him of the breakdown of costs²¹. If the solicitor wishes to serve a reply²², he must do so within 14 days of service on him of the points of dispute²³. Either party may file²⁴ a request for a hearing date after points of dispute have been served but no later than three months after the date of the order for the costs to be assessed²⁵. On receipt of the request for a detailed assessment²⁶ hearing the court will fix a date for the hearing or, if the costs judge²⁷ or district judge²⁸ so decides, will give directions or fix a date for a preliminary appointment²⁹. There is power to issue an interim certificate³⁰. After the detailed assessment hearing is concluded the court will complete the court copy of the bill so as to show the amount allowed, determine the result of the cash account, award the costs of the detailed assessment hearing³¹ and issue a final costs certificate showing the amount due following the detailed assessment hearing³².

This procedure applies subject to any contrary order made by the court³³.

1 In the Solicitors Act 1974 Pt III (ss 59-75), the pre-CPR terminology of 'taxed', 'taxation' and 'taxing' is used. However, the procedure following an order for taxation of a bill which is prescribed by CPR 48.9 (see the text and notes 14-33) uses the new terminology of 'assessed', 'assessment' and 'assessing' and the practice is now to refer to 'Solicitors Act assessments' not 'Solicitors Act taxations'. Prospective amendments to the Solicitors Act 1974 Pt III are made by the Legal Services Act 2007 s 177, Sch 16 Pt 1 to reflect the new terminology and although, at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed, the new terminology has been used throughout this paragraph.

2 See PARA 18.

3 Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(1) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 Pt 1 paras 1, 65(b)). Application is made by the alternative procedure for claims under CPR Pt 8 (see PARA 127 et seq): Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.2. See further CPR Pt 67.

4 Where an application under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(2) is made by the party chargeable with the bill (1) after the expiration of 12 months from the delivery of the bill; or (2) after a judgment has been obtained for the recovery of the costs covered by the bill; or (3) after the bill has been paid, but before the expiration of 12 months from the payment of the bill, no order must be made except in special circumstances and, if an order is made, it may contain such terms as regards the costs of the assessment as the court may think fit: s 70(3) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 Pt 1 para 65(d)). The power to order assessment conferred by s 70(2) is not exercisable on an application made by the party chargeable with the bill after the expiration of 12 months from the payment of the bill: Solicitors Act 1984 s 70(4) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 Pt 1 para 65(d)).

5 Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(2) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 Pt 1 para 65(c)). The Solicitors Act 1984 s 70 does not oust the court's inherent jurisdiction to order assessment of a solicitor's invoices: see Connollys (a firm) v Harrington [2002] All ER (D) 268 (May).

6 'Profit costs' means costs other than counsel's fees or costs paid or payable in the discharge of a liability incurred by the solicitor on behalf of the party chargeable, and the reference in the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(9) (see the text and note 12) to the fraction of the amount of the bill assessed off is to be taken, where the assessment concerns only part of the costs covered by the bill, as a reference to that fraction of the amount of those costs which is being assessed: s 70(12) (amended, as from a day to be appointed, by the Legal Services Act 2007 Sch 16 Pt 1 para 65(k)).

16 As to the meaning of 'costs' see PARA 1730.

17 As to the meaning of 'service' see PARA 138 note 2.

18 The breakdown of costs is a document which contains the following information: (1) details of the work done under each of the bills sent for assessment; and (2) in applications under the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70, an account showing money received by the solicitor to the credit of the client and sums paid out of that money on behalf of the client but not payments out which were made in satisfaction of the bill or of any items which are claimed in the bill: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.5. Precedent P of the Schedule of Costs Precedents annexed to the costs practice direction is a model form of breakdown of costs. A party who is required to serve a breakdown of costs must also serve (a) copies of the fee notes of counsel and of any expert in respect of fees claimed in the breakdown; and (b) written evidence as to any other disbursement which is claimed in the breakdown and which exceeds £250: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.6.

19 CPR 48.10(1), (2).

20 The points of dispute must, as far as practicable, be in the form complying with Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 paras 35.1-35.7: para 56.8. As to points of dispute see PARA 1787.

21 CPR 48.10(3).

22 As to replies see PARA 1791.

23 CPR 48.10(4).

24 As to the meaning of 'filing' see PARA 1832 note 8.

25 CPR 48.10(5). The form of request must be in Form N258C (see The Civil Court Practice) and must be accompanied by copies of (1) the order sending the bill or bills for assessment; (2) the bill or bills sent for assessment; (3) the solicitor's breakdown of costs and any invoices or accounts served with that breakdown; (4) a copy of the points of dispute, annotated as necessary in order to show which items have been agreed and their value and to show which items remain in dispute; (5) as many copies of the points of dispute so annotated as there are other parties to the proceedings to whom the court should give details of the assessment hearing requested; (6) a copy of any replies served; (7) a statement signed by the party filing the request or his legal representative giving the names and addresses for service of all parties to the proceedings: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.10. The request must include an estimate of the length of time the detailed assessment hearing will take: para 56.11.

26 As to the meaning of 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see PARA 1779 et seq.

27 As to the meaning of 'costs judge' see PARA 1734 note 17.

28 As to district judges see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARAS 661-662, 728.

29 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.12. The court will give at least 14 days' notice of the time and place of the detailed assessment hearing to every person named in the statement referred to in para 56.10(g) (see note 25 head (7)): para 56.13(1). The court will, when giving notice, give all parties other than the party who requested the hearing a copy of the points of dispute annotated by the party requesting the hearing in compliance with para 56.10(e) (see note 25 head (5)): para 56.13(2). Apart from the solicitor whose bill it is, only those parties who have served points of dispute may be heard on the detailed assessment unless the court gives permission, and only items specified in the points of dispute may be raised unless the court gives permission: see para 56.13(3); and see CPR 47.14(6), (7); and PARA 1793. If a party wishes to vary his breakdown of costs, points of dispute or reply, an amended or supplementary document must be filed with the court and copies of it must be served on all other relevant parties: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.14(1). Permission is not required to vary a breakdown of costs, points of dispute or a reply but the court may disallow the variation or permit it only upon conditions, including conditions as to the payment of any costs caused or wasted by the variation: para 56.14(2). Unless the court directs otherwise the solicitor must file with the court the papers in support of the bill not less than seven days before the date for the detailed assessment hearing and not more than 14 days before that date: para 56.15.

30 See Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.17(1); and see CPR 47.15; and PARA 1796. If, in the course of a detailed assessment hearing of a solicitor's bill to his client, it appears to the costs judge or district judge that in any event the solicitor will be liable in connection with that bill to pay money to the client, he may issue an interim certificate specifying an amount which in his opinion is payable by the solicitor to his client. Such a certificate will include an order to pay the sum it certifies unless the court orders otherwise: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.17(2).

31 In accordance with the Solicitors Act 1974 s 70(8): see the text and note 10.

32 Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.18(2). The requirement under CPR 47.16 for the solicitor to file a completed bill within 14 days after the end of the detailed assessment hearing (see PARA 1797) may be dispensed with: see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 56.18(1). A final costs certificate will include an order to pay the sum it certifies unless the court orders otherwise: para 56.19. Once the detailed assessment hearing has ended it is the responsibility of the legal representative appearing for the solicitor or, as the case may be, the solicitor in person to remove the papers filed in support of the bill: para 56.16.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/A. COST PROTECTION; IN GENERAL/1814. Cost protection for litigants receiving Legal Services Commission funding.

(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission

A. COST PROTECTION; IN GENERAL

1814. Cost protection for litigants receiving Legal Services Commission funding.

Except in prescribed circumstances, costs ordered against an individual in relation to any proceedings or part of proceedings funded for him by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service¹ must not exceed the amount, if any, which is a reasonable one for him to pay having regard to all the circumstances including (1) the financial resources² of all the parties to the proceedings; and (2) their conduct in connection with the dispute to which the proceedings relate³. Subject to this, regulations may make provision about costs in relation to proceedings in which services are funded by the Commission for any of the parties as part of the Community Legal Service⁴. The regulations may, in particular, make provision:

- 1494 (a) specifying the principles to be applied in determining the amount of any costs which may be awarded against a party for whom services are funded by the Commission as part of the Community Legal Service⁵;
- 1495 (b) limiting the circumstances in which, or extent to which, an order for costs may be enforced against such a party⁶;
- 1496 (c) as to the cases in which, and extent to which, such a party may be required to give security for costs and the manner in which it is to be given⁷;
- 1497 (d) requiring the payment by the Commission of the whole or part of any costs incurred by a party for whom services are not funded by the Commission as part of the Community Legal Service⁸;
- 1498 (e) specifying the principles to be applied in determining the amount of any costs which may be awarded to a party for whom services are so funded⁹;
- 1499 (f) requiring the payment to the Commission, or the person or body by which the services were provided, of the whole or part of any sum awarded by way of costs to such a party¹⁰; and
- 1500 (g) as to the court, tribunal or other person or body by whom the amount of any costs is to be determined and the extent to which any determination of that amount is to be final¹¹.

Cost protection does not apply in relation to such parts of proceedings, or prospective proceedings, as are funded for the client¹² by way of:

- 1501 (i) Help at Court or Litigation Support¹³;
- 1502 (ii) Legal Help¹⁴, unless the client later receives Legal Representation or General Family Help or Help with Mediation in respect of the same dispute¹⁵;
- 1503 (iii) General Family Help and Help with Mediation in family proceedings¹⁶; or
- 1504 (iv) Legal Representation in family proceedings¹⁷.

Cost protection applies only to costs incurred by the receiving party in relation to proceedings which, as regards the client, are funded proceedings¹⁸. Where funding is withdrawn by revoking the client's certificate, cost protection does not apply, either in respect of work done before or after the revocation¹⁹.

1 For this purpose proceedings, or a part of proceedings, are funded for an individual if services relating to the proceedings or part are funded for him by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1). As to the Legal Services Commission and the Community Legal Service see generally LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARAS 17 et seq; 31 et seq.

2 In assessing for these purposes the financial resources of an individual for whom services are funded by the Commission as part of the Community Legal Service, his clothes and household furniture and the tools and implements of his trade must not be taken into account, except so far as may be prescribed: Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(2). Where cost protection applies (Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 5): (1) the first £100,000 of the value of the client's interest in the main or only dwelling in which he resides must not be taken into account in having regard to the client's resources for these purposes (reg 7(1)); (2) where, but only to the extent that, the court considers that the circumstances are exceptional, having regard in particular to the quantity or value of the items concerned, the court may take into account the value of the client's clothes and household furniture, or the tools and implements of his trade, in having regard to the client's resources for these purposes (reg 7(2)); (3) in having regard to the resources of a party for these purposes, the resources of his partner must be treated as his resources unless the partner has a contrary interest in the dispute in respect of which the funded services are provided (reg 7(3), (4)); (4) where a party is acting in a representative, fiduciary or official capacity, the court must not take the personal resources of the party into account for these purposes, but must have regard to the value of any property or estate, or the amount of any fund out of which he is entitled to be indemnified, and may also have regard to the resources of the persons, if any, including that party where appropriate, who are beneficially interested in that property, estate or fund (reg 7(5)); and (5) for the purposes of the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1), where a party is acting as a litigation friend to a client who is a child or a patient, the court must not take the personal resources of the litigation friend into account in assessing the resources of the client (Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 7(6) (added by SI 2003/649)). The purpose of the Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 7(5) is to ensure that any liability is determined with reference to the value of the property or fund being used to pay for the litigation, and the financial position of those who may benefit from or rely on it: see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.15(3). 'Partner', in relation to a party to proceedings, means a person with whom that party lives as a couple, and includes a person with whom the party is not currently living but from whom he is not living separate and apart: Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 2. 'Cost protection' means the limit on costs awarded against a client set out in the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1) (see the text and notes 1, 3): Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 2.

In a case where costs protection applies, the first £100,000 of the value of the LSC funded client's interest in the main or only home cannot be the subject of any enforcement process by the receiving party. The receiving party cannot apply for an order to sell the LSC funded client's home, but could secure the debt against any value exceeding £100,000 by way of a charging order: see the Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 4 (amended by SI 2005/2006); and Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.12. As to the meaning of 'receiving party' see PARA 1833 note 14.

3 Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1). When deciding whether to make an order pursuant to s 11(1), the court should consider whether, but for cost protection, it would have made a costs order against the unsuccessful party: Re Wyatt (A Child) (Medical Treatment: Continuation of Order) (Costs) [2006] EWCA Civ 529, [2006] All ER (D) 27 (May).

Where the client receives Legal Help, but later receives Legal Representation or General Family Help or Help with Mediation in respect of the same dispute, other than Legal Representation in family proceedings or General Family Help or Help with Mediation in family proceedings, cost protection applies, both in respect of (1) the costs incurred by the receiving party before the commencement of proceedings which, as regards the client, are funded proceedings by virtue of the client's receipt of Legal Help; and (2) the costs incurred by the receiving party in the course of proceedings which, as regards the client, are funded proceedings by virtue of the client's receipt of Legal Representation, General Family Help or Help with Mediation: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 3(2) (amended by SI 2005/2006). This is subject to reg 3(4) (see note 19): reg 3(2). See also Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.7(2). 'Funded proceedings' means proceedings (including prospective proceedings) in relation to which the client receives funded services or, as the case may be, that part of proceedings during which the client receives funded services: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 2(1). 'Family proceedings' means (a) all proceedings under any one or more of the following: (i) the Matrimonial Causes Act 1973; (ii) the Domestic Proceedings and Magistrates' Courts Act 1978; (iii) the Matrimonial and Family Proceedings Act 1984 Pt III (ss 12-27); (iv) the Child Abduction and Custody Act 1985; (v) the Children Act 1989 Pts I (ss 1-7), II (ss 8-16), Sch 1; (vi) the Family Law Act 1996 s 53 and Sch 7; and (b) proceedings which arise out of family relationships under either or both of the following: (i) the Inheritance (Provision for Family and Dependents) Act 1975; (ii) the Trusts of Land and Appointment of Trustees Act 1996: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 2(1). 'Family relationships' has the same meaning as in the Funding Code (see PARA 1818 note 15) and the Funding Code Guidance published on 1 April 2000 by the Commission for the purpose of making decisions under the Code: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2005/2006). Where funding is withdrawn by discharging the client's certificate, cost protection applies only to costs incurred before the date when funded services under the certificate ceased to be provided: reg 3(3)(b); and see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.11. The date on which funded services ceased to be provided under the certificate may be a date before the date on which the certificate is formally discharged by the Commission: see Burridge v Stafford, Khan v Ali [1999] 4 All ER 660, [2000] 1 WLR 927, CA. Cost protection is, however, to apply to work done immediately before the grant of an emergency certificate, other than an emergency certificate granted in relation to family proceedings, if (1) no application for such a certificate could be made because the Commission's office was closed; and (2) the client's solicitor applies for an emergency certificate at the first available opportunity, and the certificate is granted: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824 reg 3(5) (amended by SI 2005/2006). 1814 Cost protection for litigants receiving Legal Services Commission funding

NOTE 1--Where the Legal Services Commission decides to fund a litigant who is successful in his cause, that decision has to be seen to carry something close to an assurance that it will continue to support him in any appeal by the unsuccessful party: R (on the application of E) v Governing Body of JFS (No 2); R (on the application of E) v Office of the Schools Adjudicator (No 2) [2009] UKSC 1, [2010] 1 All ER 1.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/A. COST PROTECTION; IN GENERAL/1815. Costs orders against the Legal Services Commission in favour of non-funded parties.

1815. Costs orders against the Legal Services Commission in favour of non-funded parties.

No order to pay costs in favour of a non-funded party¹ must be made against the Legal Services Commission² in respect of funded proceedings³ except in accordance with the relevant regulations⁴ and any costs to be paid under such an order must be paid out of the Community Legal Service Fund⁵. Nothing in those regulations, however, is to be construed, in relation to proceedings where one or more parties are receiving, or have received, funded services⁶, as requiring a court to make a costs order⁷ where it would not otherwise have made a costs order or as affecting the court's⁸ power to make a wasted costs order⁹ against a legal representative¹⁰.

Where funded services are provided to a client¹¹ in relation to proceedings, those proceedings are finally decided in favour of a non-funded party and cost protection¹² applies, the court may make an order for the payment by the Commission to the non-funded party of the whole or any part of the costs incurred by him in the proceedings¹³, other than any costs that the client is required¹⁴ to pay¹⁵. Such an order may only be made if all the conditions set out below are satisfied:

- 1505 (1) a costs order¹⁶ is made against the client in the proceedings, and the amount (if any) which the client is required to pay under that costs order is less than the amount of the full costs¹⁷;
- 1506 (2) unless there is a good reason for the delay, the non-funded party makes a request¹⁸ within three months of the making of the costs order against the client¹⁹;
- 1507 (3) as regards costs incurred in a court of first instance, the proceedings were instituted by the client, the non-funded party is an individual, and the court is satisfied that the non-funded party will suffer financial hardship unless the order is made²⁰; and
- 1508 (4) in any case, the court is satisfied that it is just and equitable in the circumstances that provision for the costs should be made out of public funds²¹.

Where a court decides any proceedings in favour of the non-funded party and an appeal lies (with or without permission) against that decision, any order made under these provisions is not to take effect (a) where permission to appeal is required, unless the time limit for applications for permission to appeal expires without permission being granted; and (b) where permission to appeal is granted or is not required, unless the time limit for appeal expires without an appeal being brought²².

1 'Non-funded party' means a party to proceedings who has not received funded services in relation to those proceedings under a certificate, other than a certificate which has been revoked; 'certificate' means a certificate issued under the Funding Code certifying a decision to fund services for the client and 'emergency certificate' means a certificate certifying a decision to fund Legal Representation for the client in a case of emergency; and 'Funding Code' means the code approved under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 9 (see LEGAL AID vol 65 (2008) PARA 40): Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 2(1).

- 8 For these purposes, 'court' includes any tribunal having the power to award costs in favour of, or against, a party: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 2(1).

- 13 Where the client receives funded services in connection with part only of the proceedings, the reference in the text to the costs incurred by the non-funded party in the relevant proceedings is to be construed as a reference to so much of those costs as is attributable to the part of the proceedings which are funded proceedings: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(4).
- 14 Ie under a 'section 11(1) costs order': Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(2). 'Section 11(1) costs order' means a costs order against a client where cost protection applies: reg 2(1). The statutory provision referred to is the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1): see PARA 1814.
- 15 Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(1), (2). See also Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.18. An order under the Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(2) may be made (1) in relation to proceedings in the House of Lords, by the Clerk to the Parliaments (see COURTS vol 10 (Reissue) PARA 371); (2) in relation to proceedings in the Court of Appeal, High Court or a county court, by a costs judge or a district judge; (3) in relation to proceedings in a magistrates' court, by a single justice or by the justices' clerk (see MAGISTRATES); and (4) in relation to proceedings in the Employment Appeal Tribunal, by the registrar of that tribunal (see EMPLOYMENT): reg 5(3A) (added by SI 2001/823). As from a day to be appointed the appellate jurisdiction of the House of Lords is abolished and the new Supreme Court of the United Kingdom is established: see the Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Pt 3 (ss 23-60); and COURTS. - 17 Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(3)(a). 'Full costs' means, where a section 11(1) costs order is made against a client, the amount of costs which that client would, but for the access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1) of the Act, have been ordered to pay: Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 2(1).

- 20 Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(3)(c) (as amended: see note 19). In determining whether the conditions in reg 5(3)(c) and reg 5(3)(d) (see head (4) in the text) are satisfied, the court must have regard to the resources of the non-funded party and of his partner, unless the partner has a contrary interest in the funded proceedings: reg 5(6), (7). Where the non-funded party is acting in a representative, fiduciary or official capacity and is entitled to be indemnified in respect of his costs from any property, estate or fund, the court must, for the purposes of reg 5(3) (as so amended), have regard to the value of the property, estate or fund and the resources of the persons, if any, including that party where appropriate, who are beneficially interested in that property, estate or fund: reg 5(8). 'Partner' means a person with whom the person concerned lives as a couple, and includes a person with whom the person concerned is not currently living but from whom he is not living separate and apart: reg 2(1).

21 Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(3)(d); and see note 20. See also Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.19.

22 Community Legal Service (Cost Protection) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/824, reg 5(5); and see Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 21.20(1). Accordingly, if the LSC funded client appeals, any earlier order against the Commission can never take effect. If the appeal is unsuccessful, an application may be made to the appeal court for a fresh order: para 21.20(2).

NOTE 20--A person acting on his own behalf is not acting in an official capacity within the meaning of SI 2000/824 reg 5(8) merely because he is a party to the proceedings by virtue of the office which he holds: Aehmed v Legal Services Commission; Legal Services Commission v Afzal [2009] EWCA Civ 572, [2009] All ER (D) 185 (Jul).

B. ASSESSMENT OF LIABILITY WHERE COST PROTECTION APPLIES

1816. Statements of resources.

Where cost protection applies¹, any person who is a party to proceedings in which another party is an LSC funded client (a 'client')² may make a statement of resources, and file it with the court³. A 'statement of resources' means:

- 1509 (1) a statement, verified by a statement of truth⁴, made by a party to proceedings setting out:
- 49
122. (a) his income and capital and financial commitments during the previous year and, if applicable, those of his partner⁵;
123. (b) his estimated future financial resources and expectations and, if applicable, those of his partner; and
124. (c) a declaration that he and, if applicable, his partner, has not deliberately foregone or deprived himself of any resources or expectations, particulars of any application for funding made by him in connection with the proceedings, and any other facts relevant to the determination of his resources; or
- 50
- 1510 (2) a statement, verified by a statement of truth, made by a client receiving funded services, setting out the prescribed information provided by the client⁶, and stating that there has been no significant change in the client's financial circumstances since the date on which the information was provided or, as the case may be, details of any such change⁷.

A person so making and filing a statement of resources must serve a copy of it on the client⁸. Where a copy of a statement of resources has been served not less than seven days before the date fixed for a hearing at which the amount to be paid under a costs order⁹ falls, or may fall, to be decided, the client must also make a statement of resources, and must produce it at that hearing¹⁰.

2 In the Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, 'client' means an individual who receives funded services; and 'funded services' means services which are provided directly for a client and funded for that client by the Legal Services Commission as part of the Community Legal Service under the Access to Justice Act 1999 ss 4-11 (see generally LEGAL AID): Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 2.

3 Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 8(1).

4 For these purposes, 'statement of truth' has the same meaning as it has in the Civil Procedure Rules (ie, a statement that the party putting forward the document believes the facts stated in it are true: see CPR 22.1(4); and PARA 613): Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 2.

9 le a 'section 11(1) costs order': Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 8(3). 'Section 11(1) costs order' means a costs order against a client where cost protection (see PARA 1814 note 2) applies: reg 2. The statutory provision referred to is the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 11(1): see PARA 1814. 'Costs order' means an order that a party pay all or part of the costs of proceedings: Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 2.

10 Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 8(3).

COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/B. ASSESSMENT OF LIABILITY WHERE COST PROTECTION APPLIES/1817. Procedures for ordering costs against client and Commission.

1817. Procedures for ordering costs against client and Commission.

Where cost protection applies¹, then where the court² is considering whether to make a costs order³, it must consider whether, but for cost protection, it would have made a costs order against the LSC funded client (the 'client')⁴ and, if so, whether it would, on making the costs order, have specified the amount to be paid under that order⁵. If the court considers that it would have made a costs order against the client, but that it would not have specified the amount to be paid under it, the court must, when making the costs order, specify the amount (if any) that the client is to pay under that order if, but only if, it considers that it has sufficient information before it to decide what amount is, in that case, a reasonable amount for the client to pay⁶ and it is satisfied that, if it were to determine the full costs⁷ at that time, they would exceed that amount⁸. Otherwise, it must not specify the amount the client is to pay under the costs order⁹.

If the court considers that it would have made a costs order against the client, and that it would have specified the amount to be paid under it, the court must, when making the costs order¹⁰, specify the amount (if any) that the client is to pay under that order if, but only if, it considers that it has sufficient information before it to decide what amount is, in that case, a reasonable amount¹¹ for the client to pay¹². Otherwise, it must not specify the amount the client is to pay under the costs order¹³. Any order made under this provision must state the amount of the full costs¹⁴.

Where the court makes a costs order¹⁵ that does not specify the amount which the client is to pay under it, it may also make findings of fact, as to the parties' conduct in the proceedings or otherwise, relevant to the determination of that amount, and those findings must be taken into consideration in that determination¹⁶. The amount (if any) to be paid by the client under an order made under the provisions set out above¹⁷ and any application for a costs order against the Legal Services Commission (the 'Commission')¹⁸, must be determined in the prescribed manner¹⁹ and at any such determination following an order which does not state the amount of the full costs²⁰, the amount of the full costs must also be assessed²¹.

Where an order specifying the costs payable is made and the LSC funded client does not have cost protection in respect of all of the costs awarded in that order, the order must identify the sum payable (if any) in respect of which the LSC funded client has cost protection and the sum payable (if any) in respect of which he does not have cost protection²².

COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/B. ASSESSMENT OF LIABILITY WHERE COST PROTECTION APPLIES/1818. Determination proceedings.

1818. Determination proceedings.

Where cost protection applies¹, and the amount to be paid under a costs order², or an application for a costs order against the Legal Services Commission (the 'Commission')³, is to be determined under the following provisions⁴, the receiving party⁵ may, within three months after a costs order⁶ is made, request a hearing to determine the costs payable to him⁷. Such a request must be accompanied by:

- 1511 (1) if the costs order does not state the full costs⁸, the receiving party's bill of costs, which must comply with any requirements of relevant rules of court relating to the form and content of a bill of costs where the court⁹ is assessing a party's costs¹⁰;
- 1512 (2) unless specified conditions are satisfied, a statement of resources¹¹; and
- 1513 (3) if the receiving party is seeking, or, subject to the determination of the amount to be paid under costs order, may seek, a costs order against the Commission, written notice to that effect¹².

The receiving party must file these documents with the court and at the same time serve copies of them on the client¹³, if a determination of costs payable¹⁴ is sought, and on the Director¹⁵, if notice has been given under head (3) above¹⁶. Where documents are served on the client, the client must make a statement of resources¹⁷. He must file the statement of resources with the court, and serve copies of it on the receiving party and, if notice has been given under head (3) above, on the Director, not more than 21 days after the client receives a copy of the receiving party's statement of resources¹⁸. The client may, at the same time as filing and serving a statement of resources, file, and serve on the same persons, a statement setting out any points of dispute in relation to the bill of costs referred to in head (1) above¹⁹.

If the client, without good reason, fails to file a statement of resources, the court must determine²⁰ the amount which the client is to be required to pay under the costs order (and, if relevant, the full costs), having regard to the statement made by the receiving party, and the court need not hold an oral hearing for such determination²¹. If, however, the client files a statement of resources, or the period for filing such notice expires, or if the costs payable by the client have already been determined, the court must set a date for the hearing and, at least 14 days before that date, serve notice of it on the receiving party, the client (unless the costs payable by the client have already been determined) and, if a costs order against the Commission is or may be sought, the Director²². The amount of costs to be determined under these provisions may include the costs incurred in relation to a request made under them²³.

The Director may appear at any hearing in relation to which notice has been given as described above²⁴. Instead of appearing he may give evidence in the form of a written statement to the court, verified by a statement of truth²⁵, which must be filed with the court and a copy of which must be served on the receiving party, not less than seven days before the hearing to which it relates²⁶.

Where the LSC funded client does not have cost protection in respect of all of the costs awarded, the order made by the costs judge or district judge must in addition to specifying the costs payable, identify the full costs in respect of which cost protection applies and the full costs in respect of which cost protection does not apply²⁷.

If the LSC funded client's liability has already been determined and is less than the full costs, the application will be for costs against the LSC only. If the LSC funded client's liability has not yet been determined, the receiving party must indicate if costs will be sought against the LSC if the funded client's liability is determined as less than the full costs: para 23.3(2). COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/B. ASSESSMENT OF LIABILITY WHERE COST PROTECTION APPLIES/1819. Payment on account of costs.

1819. Payment on account of costs.

Where cost protection applies¹ and the court² makes a costs order³ but does not specify the amount which the client⁴ is to pay under it, the court may order the client to pay an amount on account of the costs which are the subject of the order⁵; but it may do so only if it has sufficient information before it to decide the minimum amount which the client is likely to be ordered to pay⁶ on a determination⁷. The amount of the payment on account of costs must not exceed the minimum amount which the court decides that the client is likely to be ordered to pay on such a determination⁸. Where the court orders a client to make a payment on account of costs it must order the client to make the payment into court⁹ and the payment must remain in court unless and until the court either (1) makes a determination¹⁰ of the amount which the client should pay to the receiving party¹¹ under the costs order, and orders the payment on account or part of it to be paid to the receiving party in satisfaction or part satisfaction of the client's liability under that order; or (2) makes an order¹² that the payment on account or part of it be repaid to the client¹³.

Where a client has made a payment on account of costs pursuant to an order under these provisions, the receiving party must request a hearing¹⁴ to determine the amount of costs payable to him¹⁵. If he fails to request such a hearing within the time permitted¹⁶, the payment on account must be repaid to the client¹⁷. If upon the hearing the amount of costs which it is determined that the client should pay is less than the amount of the payment on account, the difference must be repaid to the client¹⁸.

Subject to the following provisions, and to the provisions relating to the variation and late determination of the amount of costs¹, where cost protection applies² any determination made³ is final⁴.

Any party with a financial interest⁵ in an assessment of the full costs⁶ may appeal against that assessment, if and to the extent that that party would, but for the relevant regulations⁷, be entitled to appeal against an assessment of costs by the court⁸ in which the relevant proceedings are taking place⁹. Further, where the court has specified¹⁰ the amount which a client¹¹ is required to pay under a costs order¹², the client may apply to the court for a determination of the full costs and if, on that determination, the amount of the full costs is less than the amount which the court previously specified, the client must instead be required to pay the amount of the full costs¹³. Finally, the receiving party¹⁴ or the Legal Services Commission¹⁵ may appeal, on a point of law, against the making of a costs order against the Commission¹⁶ (including the amount of costs which the Commission is required to pay under the order), or against the court's refusal to make such an order¹⁷.

COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/B. ASSESSMENT OF LIABILITY WHERE COST PROTECTION APPLIES/1821. Variation and late determination of amount of costs.

1821. Variation and late determination of amount of costs.

Where cost protection applies¹ and the court² makes a costs order³, then if the amount (if any) which the client⁴ is required to pay under that costs order, together with the amount which the Legal Services Commission⁵ is required to pay under any costs order against the Commission⁶, is less than the full costs⁷, the receiving party⁸ may apply to the court for an order varying the amount which the client is required to pay under the costs order on the ground that there has been a significant change in the client's circumstances since the date of the order⁹. Where the court has not specified the amount to be paid under the costs order, and the receiving party has not, within the prescribed time limit¹⁰, applied to have that amount determined¹¹, the receiving party may apply for a determination of the amount that the client is required to pay on any of the following grounds¹²:

- 1514 (1) that there has been a significant change in the client's circumstances since the date of the order¹³;
- 1515 (2) that material additional information as to the client's financial resources is available, and that information could not with reasonable diligence have been obtained by the receiving party in time to make an application in accordance with the prescribed procedure¹⁴; or
- 1516 (3) that there were other good reasons justifying the receiving party's failure to make an application within the prescribed time limit¹⁵.

Any such application must be made by the receiving party within six years from the date on which the costs order is first made¹⁶.

On any application for variation of an order specifying the amount of costs payable¹⁷, the order may be varied as the court thinks fit, but the amount of costs ordered, excluding any costs of the application which are ordered to be paid¹⁸, must not exceed the amount of the full costs as stated in any previous order of the court¹⁹. When the amount which the client is required to pay under the costs order has been determined without stating the full costs²⁰ and the receiving party applies²¹ for an order varying that amount, he must file with the application his bill of costs, which must comply with any requirements of relevant rules of court relating to the form and content of a bill of costs where the court is assessing a party's costs²². Copies of these documents must be served²³ with the application²⁴. The LSC funded client²⁵ must respond to the application by making a statement of resources²⁶ which must be filed²⁷ at court and served on the receiving party within 21 days thereafter and the LSC funded client may also file and serve written points disputing the bill within the same time limit²⁸. The court must then, when determining the application, assess the full costs²⁹, identifying any part of them to which cost protection applies and any part of them to which it does not³⁰.

Where the receiving party has received funded services³¹ in relation to the proceedings, the Commission may make an application under the above provisions³². When making the application the Commission must file with the court a statement of the receiving party's costs or, if those costs have not been assessed, the receiving party's bill of costs³³.

The amount of costs to be determined under these provisions may include the costs incurred in relation to an application made under them³⁴.

Amount of costs under client's costs order or client's costs agreement.

C. COSTS UNDER CLIENT'S COSTS ORDER OR CLIENT'S COSTS AGREEMENT

1822. Amount of costs under client's costs order or client's costs agreement.

The amount of the costs to be paid under a client's¹ costs order or client's costs agreement² must be determined on the same basis as it would be if the costs were to be paid to a person who had not received funded services³. The amount of the awarded sum⁴ must not be limited to the amount of the funded sum by any rule of law which limits the costs recoverable by a party to proceedings to the amount he is liable to pay to his legal representatives⁵; but this applies only to the extent that the Legal Services Commission⁶ has authorised the supplier⁷ to take payment for the relevant work⁸ other than that funded by the Commission⁹.

The amount of costs to be paid under a client's costs order or client's costs agreement may include costs incurred in filing with the court, or serving on any other party to proceedings, notices or any other documents in accordance with the statutory requirements¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'client' see PARA 1816 note 2.

2 'Client's costs order' and 'client's costs agreement' mean, respectively, an order and an agreement that another party to proceedings or prospective proceedings pay all or part of the costs of a client: Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 14.

3 Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 15(1). As to the meaning of 'funded services' see PARA 1816 note 2.

COSTS/(6) COSTS IN SPECIAL CASES/(iii) Costs where Parties Funded by the Legal Services Commission/D. RECOVERY OF COSTS AWARDED TO CLIENT/1823. Recovery of costs where funded services provided under a certificate.

D. RECOVERY OF COSTS AWARDED TO CLIENT

1823. Recovery of costs where funded services provided under a certificate.

Where funded services¹ have been provided under a certificate², and subject to the statutory exceptions³, all money payable to or recovered by a client in connection with a dispute by way of damages, costs or otherwise, whether or not proceedings were begun, and whether under an order of the court⁴ or an agreement or otherwise, must be paid to the client's solicitor⁵, and only the client's solicitor is capable of giving a good discharge for that money⁶. Where the client's solicitor has reason to believe that an attempt may be made to circumvent these provisions, he must inform the Legal Services Commission immediately⁷.

Where money is so payable, and that money is payable by a trustee in bankruptcy, a trustee or assignee of a deed of arrangement, a liquidator of a company in liquidation, a trustee of a pension fund or any other third party (the 'third party') the client's solicitor must send to the third party notice that funded services have been funded for the client by the Commission⁸. Such notice operates as a request by the client that money so payable be paid to his solicitor, and is a sufficient authority for that purpose⁹.

The client's solicitor must forthwith inform the Director¹⁰ of any money or other property recovered or preserved, and send him a copy of the order or agreement by virtue of which the property was recovered or preserved¹¹. Subject to the statutory exceptions¹², he must pay to the Commission all money or other property received by him¹³; and the amount received by way of costs¹⁴ and interest on costs¹⁵ must be separately identified¹⁶.

The Commission must retain:

- 1517 (1) an amount equal to the costs incurred in taking steps to enforce orders in favour of the client¹⁷;
- 1518 (2) an amount equal to that part of the funded sum¹⁸ already paid to the supplier in respect of the relevant work; and
- 1519 (3) where costs are paid to the Commission together with interest, an amount equal to that interest, less the amount of any interest payable to the supplier¹⁹.

The Commission must pay to the supplier:

- 1520 (a) any outstanding amount of the funded sum payable to him in respect of the relevant work;
- 1521 (b) where costs are ordered or agreed to be paid to the client, and those costs are received by the Commission, and those costs (less any amount retained under head (1) above or payable as described below²⁰) exceed the funded sum, an amount equal to the amount of the excess and, where those costs are paid to the Commission together with interest, an amount equal to the interest attributable to that excess²¹.

Where a solicitor has acted on behalf of the client in proceedings before that client receives funded services in respect of the same proceedings, or has a lien on any documents necessary to proceedings to which a client is a party, and has handed them over subject to the lien, then where he gives the Commission written notice that this provision applies, the Commission must pay to that solicitor the costs to which that solicitor would have been entitled if those costs had been assessed on an indemnity basis²². Where the amount of costs so payable has not been assessed by the court, it may instead be assessed by the Commission²³. Where the amount received by the Commission, less any amount retained under head (1) above, is insufficient to meet the funded sum and any sum so payable to the solicitor, the Commission must apportion the amount received proportionately between the two²⁴.

The Commission must pay all the money paid to it under these provisions, which is not paid or retained as described above, to the client²⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'funded services' see PARA 1816 note 2.

2 'Certificate' means a certificate issued under the Funding Code certifying a decision to fund services for the client: Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 2. 5 If the client is no longer being represented by a solicitor, all money to which the Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 18(1) applies must be paid (or repaid) to the Legal Services Commission, and all references in regs 18(1), 19 to the client's solicitor are to be construed as references to the Commission: reg 17(2). Commission under a contract which does not differentiate between the remuneration for the client's case and remuneration for other cases, means such part of the remuneration payable under the contract as may be specified in writing by the Commission as being the funded sum: Community Legal Service (Costs) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/441, reg 14.

(iv) Payments in respect of Pro Bono Representation

1824. Orders for payment to prescribed charity.

The following provisions apply to proceedings in a civil court¹ in which a party to the proceedings ('P') is or was represented by a legal representative² ('R') and R's representation of P is or was provided free of charge³, in whole or in part⁴, and they apply even if P is or was also represented by a legal representative not acting free of charge⁵.

The court may order any person to make a payment to the prescribed charity⁶ in respect of R's representation of P (or, if only part of R's representation of P was provided free of charge, in respect of that part)⁷. In considering whether to make such an order and the terms of such an order, the court must have regard to (1) whether, had R's representation of P not been provided free of charge, it would have ordered the person to make a payment to P in respect of the costs payable to R by P in respect of that representation; and (2) if it would, what the terms of the order would have been⁸. The court may not make such an order against a person represented in the proceedings if the person's representation was at all times provided by a legal representative acting free of charge or funded by the Legal Services Commission⁹ as part of the Community Legal Service¹⁰. Rules of court may make further provision as to the making of such orders, and may in particular (a) provide that such orders may not be made in civil proceedings of a description specified in the rules; (b) make provision about the procedure to be followed in relation to such orders; (c) specify matters (in addition to those mentioned above) to which the court must have regard in deciding whether to make such an order, and the terms of any order¹¹.

1 'Civil court' means the civil division of the Court of Appeal, the High Court, or any county court: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(10).

2 'Legal representative', in relation to a party to proceedings, means a person exercising a right of audience or conducting litigation on the party's behalf: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(10).

4 Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(1).

5 Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(2).

6 'Prescribed charity' means the charity prescribed by order made by the Lord Chancellor: Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(8). An order under s 194(8) may only prescribe a charity which (1) is registered in accordance with the Charities Act 1993 s 3A (see CHARITIES vol 8 (2010) PARA 304); and (2) provides financial support to persons who provide, or organise or facilitate the provision of, legal advice or assistance (by way of representation or otherwise) which is free of charge: s 194(9). In exercise of this power, the Lord Chancellor has made the Legal Services Act 2007 (Prescribed Charity) Order 2008, SI 2008/2680, prescribing the Access to Justice Foundation (charity registration number 1126147) (see art 2).

7 Legal Services Act 2007 s 194(3). The court may not make an order under s 194(3) in respect of representation if (or to the extent that) it is provided before s 194 comes into force: s 194(11). The relevant provisions of s 194 came into force on 1 October 2008: see the Legal Services Act 2007 (Commencement No 2 and Transitory Provisions) Order 2008, SI 2008/1436, art 3(a).

1825. Orders in respect of pro bono representation.

Where the court¹ makes an order for the payment of a sum to the prescribed charity², the court may order the payment to the prescribed charity of a sum no greater than the costs specified in Part 45 of the Civil Procedure Rules³ to which the party with pro bono representation⁴ would have been entitled in accordance with that Part and in respect of that representation had it not been provided free of charge or, where Part 45 does not apply, the court may determine the amount of the payment (other than a sum equivalent to fixed costs⁵) to be made by the paying party to the prescribed charity by making a summary assessment⁶ or making an order for detailed assessment⁷, of a sum equivalent to all or part of the costs the paying party would have been ordered to pay to the party with pro bono representation in respect of that representation had it not been provided free of charge⁸.

Where the court makes an order for the payment of a sum to the prescribed charity, the order must specify that the payment by the paying party must be made to the prescribed charity⁹. The receiving party must send a copy of the order to the prescribed charity within seven days of receipt of the order¹⁰. Where the court considers making or makes such an order, Parts 43 to 48 of the Civil Procedure Rules¹¹ apply, where appropriate, with modifications¹².

(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS

(i) In general

1826. Introduction.

The legal aid system¹ has been replaced by funding arrangements², and a detailed system is now in place³. Under the new system, lawyers are allowed to represent clients on the basis of a conditional fee agreement⁴ and the client normally takes out after-the-event insurance to cover the risk of having to pay the opponent's costs if the client is unsuccessful, and of liability for costs and expenses of the client's lawyers to the extent that they are not recoverable from the opponent if the client is successful⁵. Where a party has entered into a funding arrangement, it is important that the other parties are notified about the arrangement⁶.

1 See LEGAL AID.

2 As to the meaning of 'funding arrangement' see PARA 1830.

3 See further PARAS 23, 1826-1836.

4 As to the meaning of 'conditional fee agreement' see PARA 1830 note 2. Formerly it was considered contrary to public policy that a solicitor's remuneration should depend on the outcome of the case: see Awwad v Geraghty & Co (a firm)[2001] QB 570, [2000] 1 All ER 608, CA; Thai Trading Co (a firm) v Taylor[1998] QB 781, [1998] 3 All ER 65, CA.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(i) In general/1827. Permitted and excluded conditional fee arrangements.

1827. Permitted and excluded conditional fee arrangements.

There are in theory three main types of agreement under which the remuneration of the lawyer may be conditional on the successful outcome of litigation. These are (1) a contingency fee agreement, under which the lawyer will recover some of the money awarded to the claimant; (2) a conditional uplift agreement, under which the lawyer will recover his normal fees plus a success uplift in the event of a win; and (3) a conditional normal fee agreement, under which the lawyer will recover his normal fees, but only in the event of success¹.

However, under the legislation which was introduced to allow conditional fee agreements², only two kinds of conditional fee agreement are permitted: success fee agreements and fee only agreements³. Contingency fee agreements are excluded from the statutory scheme.

1829. Compatibility of legislation with right to fair trial under European Convention on Human Rights.

Under the statutory scheme for funding agreements¹, if the claimant is successful, the defendant will have to pay not only the reasonable and proportionate costs of the claimant but also a success fee of up to 100 per cent of those costs plus the cost of after-the-event insurance; and the percentage is in inverse proportion to the claimant's chances of success². Thus, where a claimant is a party to a funding agreement, a defendant may have to pay far more than the reasonable and proportionate costs, which raises the important question of compatibility with the right to a fair trial under the European Convention on Human Rights³. This has been touched on in the House of Lords, which has said that the legislation is not incompatible with the Convention right, at least in relation to personal injury claims arising out of road accidents, and to represent a legitimate way of widening access to justice⁴, but the question has not been definitively resolved⁵.

UPDATE

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

1829 Compatibility of legislation with right to fair trial under European Convention on Human Rights

NOTE 4--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1830. Meaning of 'funding arrangement'.

(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements

1830. Meaning of 'funding arrangement'.

A funding arrangement¹ means an arrangement where a person has:

- 1522 (1) entered into a conditional fee agreement² or a collective conditional fee agreement³ which provides for a success fee⁴; or
- 1523 (2) taken out an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability in legal proceedings which may be recovered by way of costs⁵; or
- 1524 (3) made an agreement with a membership organisation⁶ to meet that person's legal costs⁷.

Every conditional fee agreement must be in writing, must not relate to proceedings which cannot be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement⁸ and must comply with such requirements (if any) as may be prescribed by the Lord Chancellor⁹. If a conditional fee agreement provides for a success fee it must relate to proceedings of a description specified by order made by the Lord Chancellor and must state the percentage by which the amount of the fees which would be payable if it were not a conditional fee agreement is to be increased¹⁰. That percentage must not exceed the percentage specified in relation to the description of proceedings to which the agreement relates by order made by the Lord Chancellor¹¹.

A costs order made in any proceedings may, subject in the case of court proceedings to rules of court, include provision requiring the payment of any fees payable under a conditional fee agreement which provides for a success fee¹²; and rules of court may make provision with respect to the assessment of any costs which include fees payable under a conditional fee agreement (including one which provides for a success fee)¹³. Similarly, where in any proceedings a costs order is made in favour of any party who has taken out an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability in those proceedings, the costs payable to him may, subject in the case of court proceedings to rules of court, include costs in respect of the premium of the policy¹⁴.

Where a membership organisation¹⁵ undertakes to meet, in accordance with arrangements satisfying prescribed conditions¹⁶, liabilities which members of the body or other persons who are parties to proceedings may incur to pay the costs of other parties to the proceedings, then if in any of the proceedings a costs order is made in favour of any of the members or other persons, the costs payable to him may¹⁷ include an additional amount in respect of any provision made by or on behalf of the body in connection with the proceedings against the risk of having to meet such liabilities¹⁸. The additional amount must not, however, exceed a sum determined in a prescribed manner; and there may, in particular, be prescribed as a manner of determination one which takes into account the likely cost to the member or other person of the premium of an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability to pay the costs of other parties to the proceedings¹⁹.

The Civil Procedure Rules make special provision with regard to the assessment and recovery of any additional liability²⁰ incurred under a funding arrangement²¹.

1 As to cost protection and the recovery of costs where a party is receiving services funded by the Legal Services Commission see PARA 1814 et seq.

2 A 'conditional fee agreement' is an agreement with a person providing advocacy or litigation services which provides for his fees and expenses, or any part of them, to be payable only in specified circumstances: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(2) (s 58 substituted, and s 58A added, by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 27(1)). See Nizami v Butt, Kamaluden v Butt[2006] EWHC 159 (QB), [2006] 2 All ER 140, [2006] 1 WLR 3307.

3 A 'collective conditional fee agreement' is an agreement which does not refer to specific proceedings, but provides for fees to be payable on a common basis in relation to a class of proceedings, or, if it refers to more than one class of proceedings, on a common basis in relation to each class: see the Collective Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2988, reg 3(1) (revoked by SI 2005/2305 as from 1 November 2005 except in relation to a conditional fee agreement entered into before that date; parties may enter into collective conditional fee agreements on or after that date based on the primary legislation). An agreement may be a collective conditional fee agreement whether or not the funder is a client or any clients are named in the agreement: reg 3(2) (revoked).

4 CPR 43.2(1)(k)(i). A conditional fee agreement provides for a success fee if it provides for the amount of any fees to which it applies to be increased, in specified circumstances, above the amount which would be payable if it were not payable only in specified circumstances: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(2)(b) (as substituted: see note 2).

5 CPR 43.2(1)(k)(ii). The insurance policy referred to in the text is a policy to which the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 29 applies: see the text and note 14. A conditional fee agreement with a large mark up and with no after-the-event insurance cover is not enough, by itself, to justify costs-capping; it is necessary to establish the risk of excessive or extravagant expenditure and that such risk of expenditure cannot be controlled by case management techniques or post-trial detailed assessments: Knight v Beyond Properties PTY Ltd [2006] EWHC 1242 (Ch), [2007] 1 WLR 625. See also Tierney v News Group Newspapers Ltd[2006] EWHC 3275 (QB), [2006] All ER (D) 321 (Dec).

6 'Membership organisation' means a body prescribed for the purposes of the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30 (see the text and note 19): CPR 43.2(1)(n). The bodies which are prescribed for those purposes are those bodies which are for the time being approved by the Secretary of State for that purpose: see the Access to Justice (Membership Organisations) Regulations 2005, SI 2000/2306, reg 3.

7 CPR 43.2(1)(k)(iii).

8 The proceedings which cannot be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement are (1) criminal proceedings, apart from proceedings under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 s 82 (see NUISANCE vol 78 (2010) PARAS 210-212); and (2) family proceedings: see the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58A(1), (2) (as added (see note 2); s 58A(2) amended by the Adoption and Children Act 2002 s 139(1), Sch 3 para 80; the Civil Partnership Act 2004 s 261(1), (4), Sch 27 para 138, Sch 30; and the Forced Marriage (Civil Protection) Act 2007 s 3(1), Sch 2 Pt 1 para 2). An agreement, in the context of family proceedings, not to bill a client until the conclusion of those proceedings is not a conditional fee agreement: Denton v Denton[2004] EWHC 1308 (Fam), [2004] 2 FLR 594, [2005] Fam Law 353.

9 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(3) (as substituted (see note 2); amended by SI 2005/3429). The requirements which the Lord Chancellor may so prescribe include requirements for the person providing advocacy or litigation services to have provided prescribed information before the agreement is made; and may be different for different descriptions of conditional fee agreements (and, in particular, may be different for those which provide for a success fee and those which do not): Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58A(3) (as added (see note 2); amended by SI 2005/3429). For these purposes, 'proceedings' includes any sort of proceedings for resolving disputes (and not just proceedings in a court), whether commenced or contemplated: Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58A(4) (as so substituted). A conditional fee agreement is assignable where the events underlying the assignment are the trust and confidence a client has in his solicitor: Jenkins v Young Brothers Transport Ltd[2006] EWHC 151 (QB), [2006] 2 All ER 798. See also Garrett v Halton London Borough Council, Myatt v National Coal Board[2006] EWCA Civ 1017, [2007] 1 All ER 147; and Jones v Wrexham Borough Council[2007] EWCA Civ 1356, [2008] 1 WLR 1590.

10 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(4)(a), (b) (as substituted: see note 2). Before making an order under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(4), the Lord Chancellor must consult the designated judges, the General Council of the Bar, the Law Society and such other bodies as he considers appropriate: s 58A(5) (as added (see note 2); amended by SI 2005/3429). All proceedings which, under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58, can be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement, except proceedings under the Environmental Protection Act 1990 s 82 (see NUISANCE vol 78 (2010) PARAS 210-212), are proceedings specified for the purposes of s 58(4)(a): Conditional Fee Agreements Order 2000, SI 2000/823, art 3.

11 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58(4)(c) (as substituted: see note 2). The specified percentage is 100%: Conditional Fee Agreements Order 2000, SI 2000/823, art 4. Where a conditional fee agreement specifies that the basic fee is to be discounted if the claim fails, the maximum percentage increase for the success fee is calculated by reference to the undiscounted basic fee, as this is the fee that would have been payable if the agreement were not a conditional fee agreement: Gloucestershire County Council v Evans[2008] EWCA Civ 21, [2008] 1 WLR 1883, [2008] All ER (D) 284 (Jan). See also Sharratt v London Central Bus Co (No 2), The Accident Group Test Cases[2004] EWCA Civ 575, [2004] 3 All ER 325 (solicitors of company with whom claimants had taken out after-the-event claims insurance agreed to pay fee to accident investigation company, but in fact fee paid out of client's account; adopting objective test, fee was a referral fee and not recoverable). If the court concludes that it is necessary to incur a staged premium in connection with after the event insurance, it should be judged a proportionate expense: Rogers v Merthyr Tydfil County Borough Council[2006] EWCA Civ 1134, [2007] 1 All ER 354.

15 I.e. a body of a description prescribed by regulations made by the Lord Chancellor by statutory instrument subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: see the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30(1), (4) (s 30(4) amended by SI 2005/3429); and note 6. Regulations under the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30(1) may, in particular, prescribe as a description of body one which is for the time being approved by the Lord Chancellor or by a prescribed person: s 30(6) (amended by SI 2005/3429).

16 The Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30(1) applies to arrangements which satisfy the following conditions: Access to Justice (Membership Organisations) Regulations 2005, SI 2000/2306, reg 4(1). The arrangements must be in writing (reg 4(2)) and must contain a statement specifying the circumstances in which the member may be liable to pay costs of the proceedings (reg 4(2)).

17 I.e. subject to the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30(3) (see the text and note 19) and (in the case of court proceedings) to rules of court: s 30(2).

18 Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30(1), (2). See Thornley v Lang[2003] EWCA Civ 1484, [2004] 1 All ER 886.

19 Access to Justice Act 1999 s 30(3). Where an additional amount is included in costs by virtue of s 30(2), that additional amount must not exceed the following sum, i.e. the likely cost to the member of the body or, as the case may be, the other person who is a party to the proceedings in which the costs order is made of the premium of an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability to pay the costs of other parties to the proceedings: Access to Justice (Membership Organisations) Regulations 2005, SI 2000/2306, reg 5.

20 'Additional liability' means the percentage increase, the insurance premium, or the additional amount in respect of provision made by a membership organisation, as the case may be: CPR 43.2(1)(o). 'Percentage increase' means the percentage by which the amount of a legal representative's fee can be increased in accordance with a conditional fee agreement which provides for a success fee (CPR 43.2(1)(l)); and 'insurance premium' means a sum of money paid or payable for insurance against the risk of incurring a costs liability in the proceedings, taken out after the event that is the subject matter of the claim (CPR 43.2(1)(m)).

UPDATE

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

1830 Meaning of 'funding arrangement'

NOTE 5--See Barr v Biffa Waste Services Ltd[2009] EWHC 2444 (TCC), [2009] All ER (D) 176 (Oct).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1831. Litigation funding agreements.

1831. Litigation funding agreements.

Provision is prospectively made by amendments to the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 by the Access to Justice Act 1999¹ for the enforcement of litigation funding agreements². A litigation funding agreement which satisfies all of the statutory conditions will not be unenforceable by reason only of its being a litigation funding agreement³. A litigation funding agreement is described as an agreement under which a person (the 'funder') agrees to fund, in whole or in part, the provision of advocacy or litigation services by someone other than the funder to another person (the 'litigant') and the litigant agrees to pay a sum to the funder in specified circumstances⁴. The following conditions will be applicable to a litigation funding agreement:

- 1525 (1) the funder must be a person, or person of a description, prescribed by the Lord Chancellor⁵;
- 1526 (2) the agreement must be in writing;
- 1527 (3) the agreement must not relate to proceedings which cannot be the subject of an enforceable conditional fee agreement⁶ or to proceedings of any such description as may be prescribed by the Lord Chancellor;
- 1528 (4) the agreement must comply with such requirements (if any) as may be so prescribed⁷;
- 1529 (5) the sum to be paid by the litigant must consist of any costs payable to him in respect of the proceedings to which the agreement relates together with an amount calculated by reference to the funder's anticipated expenditure in funding the provision of the services; and
- 1530 (6) that amount must not exceed such percentage of that anticipated expenditure as may be prescribed by the Lord Chancellor in relation to proceedings of the description to which the agreement relates⁸.

Before making regulations under these provisions, the Lord Chancellor will be required to consult the designated judges, the General Council of the Bar, the Law Society and such other bodies as he considers appropriate⁹.

Once these provisions are in force a costs order made in any proceedings will, subject in the case of court proceedings to rules of court, be able to include provision requiring the payment of any amount payable under a litigation funding agreement¹⁰; and rules of court will be able to make provision with respect to the assessment of any costs which include fees payable under a litigation funding agreement¹¹.

1 See the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58B (added by the Access to Justice Act 1999 s 28 (amended by SI 2005/3429) as from a day to be appointed; at the date at which this title states the law, no such day had been appointed).

2 Litigation funding agreements will enable third parties such as insurance companies to fund litigation on a no-win, no-fee basis. As the necessity for this statutory provision see 604 HL Official Report (5th series), 14 July 1999, col 439.

- 7 The requirements which the Lord Chancellor may prescribe under the Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58B(3)(d) include requirements for the funder to have provided prescribed information to the litigant before the agreement is made and may be different for different descriptions of litigation funding agreements: s 58B(5) (as prospectively added: see note 1).
- 8 Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58B(3) (as prospectively added: see note 1).

UPDATE

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1832. Providing information about funding arrangements.

1832. Providing information about funding arrangements.

A party who seeks to recover an additional liability¹ must provide information about the funding arrangement² to the court³ and to other parties as required by a rule, practice direction⁴ or court order⁵. There is no requirement to specify the amount of the additional liability separately nor to state how it is calculated until it falls to be assessed⁶.

A claimant⁷ who has entered into a funding arrangement before starting the proceedings to which it relates must provide information to the court by filing the required notice⁸ when he issues the claim form⁹. He must provide information to every other party by serving¹⁰ the notice. If he serves the claim form himself he must serve the notice with the claim form; and if the court is to serve the claim form, the court will also serve the notice if the claimant provides it with sufficient copies for service¹¹.

A defendant¹² who has entered into a funding arrangement before filing any document must provide information to the court by filing notice with his first document, which may be an acknowledgment of service, a defence, or any other document, such as an application to set aside a default judgment¹³. He must provide information to every party by serving notice. If he serves his first document himself he must serve the notice with that document; and if the court is to serve his first document the court will also serve the notice if the defendant provides it with sufficient copies for service¹⁴.

In all other circumstances a party must file and serve notice within seven days of entering into the funding arrangement concerned¹⁵. There is no requirement in the costs practice direction for the provision of information about funding arrangements before the commencement of proceedings, but such provision is recommended and may be required by a pre-action protocol¹⁶.

Unless the court otherwise orders, a party who is required to supply information about a funding arrangement must state whether he has entered into a conditional fee agreement which provides for a success fee¹⁷, taken out an insurance policy¹⁸ or made an arrangement with a prescribed body¹⁹, or more than one of these²⁰. Where the funding arrangement is a conditional fee agreement, the party must state the date of the agreement and identify the claim or claims to which it relates, including Part 20 claims²¹ if any²². Where the funding arrangement is an insurance policy the party must state the name of the insurer and the date of the policy and must identify the claim or claims to which it relates, including Part 20 claims if any²³. Finally, where the funding arrangement is by way of an arrangement with a relevant body the party must state the name of the body and set out the date and terms of the undertaking it has given and must identify the claim or claims to which it relates, including Part 20 claims if any²⁴. Where a party has entered into more than one funding arrangement in respect of a claim, for example a conditional fee agreement and an insurance policy, a single notice²⁵ may contain the required information about both or all of them²⁶.

Where the court makes a group litigation order ('GLO')²⁷, the court may give directions as to the extent to which individual parties should provide information in accordance with the above provisions²⁸.

Where the funding arrangement has changed, and the information a party has previously provided is no longer accurate, that party must file notice of the change and serve it on all other parties within seven days²⁹. Where such a party has already filed an allocation questionnaire³⁰ or a pre-trial check list (listing questionnaire)³¹, he must file and serve a new estimate of costs with the notice³². Further notification need not, however, be provided where a party has already given notice (1) that he has entered into a conditional fee agreement with a legal representative and during the currency of that agreement either of them enters into another such agreement with an additional legal representative; or (2) of some insurance cover, unless that cover is cancelled or unless new cover is taken out with a different insurer³³.

UPDATE

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1833. Costs orders relating to funding arrangements; in general.

1833. Costs orders relating to funding arrangements; in general.

The court¹ will not assess any additional liability² until the conclusion of the proceedings³, or part of the proceedings, to which the funding arrangement⁴ relates⁵. The court should nevertheless make a summary assessment⁶ of the base costs⁷ of the hearing or application unless there is a good reason not to do so⁸; and the existence of a conditional fee agreement⁹ or other funding arrangement is not by itself a sufficient reason for not carrying out a summary assessment¹⁰. If before the conclusion of the proceedings the court carries out a summary assessment of the base costs it may identify separately the amount allowed in respect of solicitors' charges, counsel's fees, other disbursements and any VAT¹¹. If an order for the base costs of a previous application or hearing did not identify separately those amounts, a court which later makes an assessment of an additional liability may apportion the base costs previously ordered¹².

Where a legal representative¹³ acting for the receiving party¹⁴ has entered into a conditional fee agreement the court may summarily assess all the costs other than any additional liability¹⁵ but an order for payment will not be made unless the court has been satisfied that in respect of the costs claimed, the receiving party is at the time liable to pay to his legal representative an amount equal to or greater than the costs claimed¹⁶. The court may direct that any costs, for which the receiving party may not in the event be liable, are to be paid into court to await the outcome of the case, or are not to be enforceable until further order, or it may postpone the receiving party's right to receive payment in some other way¹⁷.

Where the court makes a summary assessment of the base costs, all statements of costs¹⁸ and costs estimates¹⁹ put before the judge²⁰ will be retained on the court file²¹.

Where there has been a trial of one or more issues separately from other issues, the court will not normally order detailed assessment²² of the additional liability until all the issues have been tried unless the parties agree²³.

At the conclusion of the proceedings, or the part of the proceedings, to which the funding arrangement relates the court may:

- 1531 (1) make a summary assessment of all the costs²⁴, including the additional liability²⁵;
- 1532 (2) make an order for detailed assessment of the additional liability but make a summary assessment of the other costs²⁶; or
- 1533 (3) make an order for detailed assessment of all the costs²⁷.

- 25 CPR 44.3A(2)(a). Where the court makes a summary assessment of an additional liability at the conclusion of proceedings, that assessment must relate to the whole of the proceedings; this will include any additional liability relating to base costs allowed by the court when making a summary assessment on a previous application or hearing: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 14.7. Paragraph 13.13 (see PARA 1752) applies where the parties are agreed about the total amount to be paid by way of costs, or are agreed about the amount of the base costs that will be paid. Where they disagree about the additional liability the court may summarily assess that liability or make an order for a detailed assessment: para 14.8. In order to facilitate the court in making a summary assessment of any additional liability at the conclusion of the proceedings the party seeking such costs must prepare and have available for the court a bundle of documents which must include (1) a copy of every notice of funding arrangement (Form N251) which has been filed by him; (2) a copy of every estimate and statement of costs filed by him; (3) a copy of the risk assessment prepared at the time any relevant funding arrangement was entered into and on the basis of which the amount of the additional liability was fixed: para 14.9.
- 26 CPR 44.3A(2)(b). Where the court makes a summary assessment of the base costs, the order may state separately the base costs allowed as solicitor's charges, counsel's fees, any other disbursements and any VAT; and the statements of costs upon which the judge based his summary assessment will be retained on the court file: Practice Direction about Costs PD 43-48 para 14.6. As to VAT on costs see PARA 1749.

UPDATE

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

1833 Costs orders relating to funding arrangements; in general

NOTE 13--'Legal representative' now means a barrister, solicitor, solicitor's employee, manager of a body recognised under the Administration of Justice Act 1985 s 9 (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 687 et seq), or person who, for the purposes of the Legal Services Act 2007, is an authorised person in relation to an activity which constitutes the conduct of litigation (see LEGAL PROFESSIONS vol 65 (2008) PARA 515), who has been instructed to act for a party in relation to proceedings: CPR 2.3(1) (definition substituted by SI 2009/3390).

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1834. Factors to be taken into account in assessing an additional liability.

1834. Factors to be taken into account in assessing an additional liability.

Where a party has entered into a funding arrangement¹ the costs² claimed may³ include an additional liability⁴. In deciding whether the costs claimed are reasonable and, on a standard basis assessment⁵, proportionate, the court⁶ will consider the amount of any additional liability separately from the base costs⁷ and will, in deciding whether the base costs are reasonable and, if relevant, proportionate, consider the factors⁸ which are discussed elsewhere in this title⁹.

When the court is considering the factors to be taken into account in assessing an additional liability, it will have regard to the facts and circumstances as they reasonably appeared to the solicitor¹⁰ or counsel¹¹ when the funding arrangement was entered into and at the time of any variation of the arrangement¹².

In deciding whether a percentage increase¹³ is reasonable relevant factors to be taken into account may include:

- 1534 (1) the risk that the circumstances in which the costs, fees or expenses would be payable might or might not occur;
- 1535 (2) the legal representative's¹⁴ liability for any disbursements;
- 1536 (3) what other methods of financing the costs were available to the receiving party¹⁵.

The court has the power, when considering whether a percentage increase is reasonable, to allow different percentages for different items of costs or for different periods during which costs were incurred¹⁶. A percentage increase will not be reduced simply on the ground that, when added to base costs which are reasonable and, where relevant, proportionate, the total appears disproportionate¹⁷.

In deciding whether the cost of insurance cover is reasonable, relevant factors to be taken into account include:

- 1537 (a) where the insurance cover is not purchased in support of a conditional fee agreement with a success fee¹⁸, how its cost compares with the likely cost of funding the case with a conditional fee agreement with a success fee and supporting insurance cover;
- 1538 (b) the level and extent of the cover provided;
- 1539 (c) the availability of any pre-existing insurance cover;
- 1540 (d) whether any part of the premium would be rebated in the event of early settlement;
- 1541 (e) the amount of commission payable to the receiving party or his legal representatives or other agents¹⁹.

Where the court is considering a provision made by a membership organisation²⁰, the relevant rule²¹ provides that any such provision which exceeds the likely cost to the receiving party of the premium of an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability to pay the costs of other parties to the proceedings is not recoverable. In such circumstances the court will, when assessing the additional liability, have regard²² to the factors set out in heads (a) to (e) above²³.

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

1834 Factors to be taken into account in assessing an additional liability

NOTE 10--Appointed day is 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1835. Limits on recovery under funding arrangements.

1835. Limits on recovery under funding arrangements.

A party may not recover as an additional liability¹:

- 1542 (1) any proportion of the percentage increase² relating to the cost to the legal representative³ of the postponement of the payment of his fees and expenses⁴;
- 1543 (2) any provision made by a membership organisation⁵ which exceeds the likely cost to that party of the premium of an insurance policy against the risk of incurring a liability to pay the costs⁶ of other parties to the proceedings⁷;
- 1544 (3) any additional liability for any period in the proceedings during which he failed to provide information about a funding arrangement⁸ in accordance with a rule, practice direction⁹ or court order¹⁰;
- 1545 (4) any percentage increase where a party has failed to comply with a requirement in the costs practice direction¹¹ or a court order to disclose in any assessment proceedings the reasons for setting the percentage increase at the level stated in the conditional fee agreement¹².

These provisions do not, however, apply in an assessment¹³ of a solicitor's bill to his client on an order under the Solicitors Act 1974¹⁴.

In a case to which head (3) or head (4) above applies the party in default may apply for relief from the sanction¹⁵. Where the amount of any percentage increase recoverable by counsel¹⁶ may be affected by the outcome of the application, the solicitor¹⁷ issuing the application must serve¹⁸ on counsel a copy of the application notice and notice of the hearing as soon as practicable and in any event at least two days before the hearing. Counsel may make written submissions or may attend and make oral submissions at the hearing¹⁹.

UPDATE

1826-1836 Funding Arrangements

The Courts and Legal Services Act 1990 s 58AA (added by Coroners and Justice Act 2009 s 154(2)) provides for the regulation of damages-based agreements in respect of claims relating to employment matters.

1835 Limits on recovery under funding arrangements

TEXT AND NOTES 1-12--CPR 44.3B(1) amended: SI 2009/2092.

Halsbury's Laws of England/CIVIL PROCEDURE (VOLUME 11 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-1108; VOLUME 12 (2009) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1109-1836)/26. COSTS/(7) FUNDING ARRANGEMENTS/(ii) General Rules about Funding Arrangements/1836. Legal representative's challenge to a disallowance of percentage increase.

1836. Legal representative's challenge to a disallowance of percentage increase.

In certain cases where an agreement provides for a success fee and the court¹ disallows any amount of a legal representative's² percentage increase³ in summary⁴ or detailed assessment⁵ proceedings and the legal representative applies for an order that the disallowed amount should continue to be payable by his client⁶, the court may adjourn the hearing to allow the client to be notified of the order sought and to be separately represented⁷.

If any amount of the increase is disallowed under summary assessment, the court will give directions to enable an application to be made by the legal representative for the disallowed amount to be payable by his client, including, if appropriate, a direction that the application will be determined by a costs judge⁸ or district judge⁹ of the court dealing with the case¹⁰, unless it there and then decides the issue¹¹. The court that has made the summary assessment may then and there decide the issue whether the disallowed amount should continue to be payable if the receiving party¹² and all parties to the relevant agreement consent to the court doing so, the receiving party (or, if corporate, an officer) is present in court and the court is satisfied that the issue can be fairly decided then and there¹³.

Where detailed assessment proceedings have been commenced, and the paying party¹⁴ serves points of dispute¹⁵ which show that he is seeking a reduction in any percentage increase charged by counsel¹⁶ on his fees, the solicitor¹⁷ acting for the receiving party must within three days of service deliver to counsel a copy of the relevant points of dispute and the bill of costs or the relevant parts of the bill¹⁸. Counsel must within ten days thereafter inform the solicitor in writing whether or not he will accept the reduction sought or some other reduction. Counsel may state any points he wishes to have made in a reply to the points of dispute, and the solicitor must serve them on the paying party as or as part of a reply¹⁹. Counsel who fails to inform the solicitor within the time limits set out above will be taken to accept the reduction unless the court otherwise orders²⁰.

Where the paying party serves points of dispute seeking a reduction in any percentage increase charged by a legal representative acting for the receiving party, and that legal representative intends, if necessary, to apply for an order that any amount of the percentage disallowed as against the paying party shall continue to be payable by his client, the solicitor acting for the receiving party must, within 14 days of service of the points of dispute, give to his client a clear written explanation of the nature of the relevant point of dispute and the effect it will have if it is upheld in whole or in part by the court, and of the client's right to attend any subsequent hearings at court when the matter is raised²¹. Where the solicitor acting for a receiving party files²² a request for a detailed assessment hearing it must, if appropriate, be accompanied by a certificate signed by him²³ stating:

- 1546 (1) that the amount of the percentage increase in respect of counsel's fees or solicitor's charges is disputed;
- 1547 (2) whether an application will be made for an order that any amount of that increase which is disallowed should continue to be payable by his client;
- 1548 (3) that he has given his client an explanation²⁴; and
- 1549 (4) whether his client wishes to attend court when the amount of any relevant percentage increase may be decided²⁵.

The solicitor acting for the receiving party must, within seven days of receiving from the court notice of the date of the assessment hearing, notify his client, and if appropriate counsel, in writing of the date, time and place of the hearing²⁶. Counsel may attend or be represented at the detailed assessment hearing and may make oral or written submissions²⁷. At the detailed assessment hearing, the court will deal with the assessment of the costs payable by one party to another, including the amount of the percentage increase, and give a certificate accordingly²⁸. The court may decide the issue whether the disallowed amount should continue to be payable under the relevant conditional fee agreement without an adjournment if:

- 1550 (a) the receiving party and all parties to the relevant agreement consent to the court deciding the issue without an adjournment;
- 1551 (b) the receiving party (or, if corporate, an officer or employee who has authority to consent on behalf of the receiving party) is present in court; and
- 1552 (c) the court is satisfied that the issue can be fairly decided without an adjournment²⁹.

In any other case the court will give directions and fix a date for the hearing of the application³⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'court' see PARA 22.

2 As to the meaning of 'legal representative' see PARA 1833 note 13.

3 As to the meaning of 'percentage increase' see PARA 1830 note 20.

5 As to the meaning of 'detailed assessment' see PARA 1734; and as to such assessment see PARA 1779 et seq.

6 A conditional fee agreement subject to a success fee which relates to court proceedings must provide that where the percentage increase becomes payable as a result of those proceedings, then if fees subject to the agreement are assessed, and any amount in respect of the percentage increase is disallowed on the assessment on the ground that the level at which the increase was set was unreasonable in view of facts which were or should have been known to the legal representative at the time it was set, that amount ceases to be payable under the agreement, unless the court is satisfied that it should continue to be so payable: see the Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations 2000, SI 2000/692, reg 3(2)(b) (revoked; but see note 7). There is a similar requirement with regard to collective conditional fee agreements: see the Collective Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2988, reg 5(2)(b) (revoked; but see note 7).

7 CPR 44.16(2). CPR 44.16 applies where the Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations 2000, SI 2000/692, or the Collective Conditional Fee Agreements Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2988, continue to apply to an agreement which provides for a success fee: CPR 44.16(1). Those regulations were revoked by the Conditional Fee Agreements (Revocation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/2305, reg 2, but still apply for the purposes of a conditional fee agreement entered into before 1 November 2005: see reg 3.
